Trial Examiner Batten: Not as to Mr. Tyler, but repetitious when considering Mr. Hogsett's examination in connection with Mr. Tyler's. But you may answer the question.

Mr. Langsdale: Didn't the Examiner make a ruling it would be repetitious if asked by the intervener when already asked by the respondent?

Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't made any such ruling as that as yet. I have asked you all to avoid it, and perhaps in one or two instances I did feel that it was.

She may answer this question.

A. Well, as I have said before, Ruby hadn't been back very long and we were talking about things, you know, [fol. 6048] that happened, and like I said, Oma Lee comes to me about certain things, and I remember those girls.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, will you explain to me why the fact that Ruby hadn't been back very long enabled you to remember she was there on April 27?

A. Ruby had been ill.

Q. How does that help you to remember she was there on April 27, as distinguished from April 26 or April 30?

A. Well, I said she hadn't been back very long.

Q. How does that help you to remember she was there on April 27?

A. Well, I just remember that meeting, that meeting and—

Q. (Interrupting) I am asking about working in your section on April 27. How does that help you to remember she was working in your section on April 27?

A. Well, I said I didn't remember the dates; I remember the meetings at that particular time, and talking to her; she hadn't been back very long. That is what I said.

Q. And that is the only explanation you can give as to how the fact she hadn't been back very long, helps you to remember she was there in your section on April 27, 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the comment, "That is the only explanation you can give," because it is a perfect reason. She says she remembers talking to her on the day of that meeting.

[fol. 6049] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the question has been asked, and I think answered, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was it not, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the reporter tells me it was not answered. Will you read the question to the witness?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. And that is the only explanation you can give as to how the fact she hadn't been back very long, helps you to remember she was there in your section on April 27, 1937?")

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. I object to the question for the further reason it is an incorrect statement of her answer. She answered further she remembered talking to her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you understand the question, Miss Witness, do you? If you do, you may answer. Do you want it read again?

A. No; that is all I can say, that I remember talking to her.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, that is Ruby you are talking about, that you remember talking to?

A. Those two girls I was talking about, Oma Lee and Ruby.

Q. Where was it you were talking to them on April 27?

[fol. 6050] A. In the section.

Q. What time of day was it?

A. I don't know, because we talk to the girls practically all the time, you know, showing them their work and giving them their work; we practically talk to them all day.

Q. Did you talk to those girls in the section that day?

A. Well, I gave them work, and different work was discussed, and they were instructed if they needed to be.

Q. The other girls whose names I have read to you, and whom you said you don't recall being present, might have been present in the section that day, so far as you know?

A. Yes, I might have had that whole row, you see, like I was talking before.

Q. Was Elizabeth Stone working in your section on April 27, 1937?

A. Well, she is a shirr girl, and I can answer the same way.

Q. By that you mean you don't know?

A. I don't remember for sure.

Q. Was Opal Chaney present?

A. That is the same answer, I don't remember.

Q. Would the answer be the same as to Ida Barton?

A. Yes.

Q. And Leona Sams?

A. That's right.

Q. Beatrice Fase?

[fol. 6051] A. That's right. I think I had all those girls at that time.

Q. That is really your answer as to all the girls in your section, that you think you had at that time?

A. I think I had them at that time, but they changed so many times.

Q. On April 27—

A. (Interrupting) And I had so many dealings with girls, I mean I worked with so many, but I don't remember any dates.

Q. You can't remember any of those girls as to the exact date in 1937?

A. You see, I had instructed those girls for some time.

Q. My question was, you can't be sure whether those girls were there in the section on any express date?

A. Those girls you read off.

Q. The answer would be the same as to Iva Andrus?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, what is the purpose of naming all those people if she don't remember, except the three she mentioned, and possibly the fourth one? What is to be gained by reading a list of names?

Mr. Tyler: I think the Examiner will see that what is developing is that she has a general belief that certain girls were present, but that she has no memory at all that any particular girls were present at a certain time. She be- [fol. 6052] lieves because they customarily were there, they were present at this time. That is what I am developing, but I don't think I should disclose it in advance.

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: What was that last name you called?

Mr. Tyler: Iva Andrus, A-n-d-r-u-s (Spelling).

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Would the same be true as to Goldie Spray?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Nina Gilardi?

A. The same there.

Q. Grace Pardone?

A. The same there.

Q. And Anne Belan?

A. Belan—I might have had those girls. Like I said, I know I had a section, but I don't remember who the girls were. Like I said, I had many girls.

Q. Any one of them might have been absent any day in [fol. 6053] March 1937, without your now remembering it, is that it?

Trial Examiner Batten: April, isn't it, Mr. Tyler? Don't you mean April 27, 1937?

Mr. Tyler: I'll make it April.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you will make it April. Isn't that the date you have been talking about, April 27?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I thought you said.

Mr. Tyler: I'll make my question April. Is your answer the same?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6054] Trial Examiner Batten: Let's go back to the question. It seems to me—I believe I don't understand that that is the present question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Any one of them might have been absent any day in March 1937, without your now remembering it, is that it?")

Mr. Tyler: The question is the same, excepting April is inserted instead of March.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then it is my fault the question isn't clear. I asked you, don't you mean April 1937; so I may have given the witness the wrong impression; so I would suggest that you ask the question again, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: Is it not a fact that any one of the girls working in your section might have been absent any day in April, 1937, without your now remembering what date she was absent?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6055] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you understand the question, Miss Witness? A. Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Whether they were or might have been absent any one day during that month? A. Yes.

Q. Of April, 1937? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, some of those girls may have been there, but the ones I am talking about were there, but I can't remember what girls weren't there on that particular day.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, when you say "there", where do you mean?

A. I mean at work.

Q. In your section? A. Yes.

Q. Now, let's go to the letter which was signed on March 2, and you remember—

A. (Interrupting) You mean that petition?

Q. (Continuing)—that was passed through your section? A. That petition you are talking about?

Q. Yes, that petition of March 2, 1937.

A. I don't remember the date, but I remember that petition.

[fol. 6056] Q. Was Thelma Brown working in your section that day? A. I don't remember.

Q. Was Margaret McArthur working in your section that day? A. I don't remember.

Q. Was Estelle Redena working in your section that day? A. Well, she could have been.

Q. Was Lela Stevens working in your section that day?

A. You named her once; she is a shirr girl.

Q. I am talking about March 2 now. We have been talking about April 27, but we are talking about March 2 now. Was she working in your section on March 2, 1937?

A. Well, she could have been. I don't remember.

Q. Was Anna Reece working there that day?

A. It could be; the same answer that way.

Q. That would be the same answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. As to any girl that worked in your section that month, as to whether you are certain whether she was there on March 2, your answer would be, "I don't remember," would it?

* * * * * * *

A. Yes.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. And would the same thing be true as to girls who [fol. 6057] worked in your section on March 30, 1937?

A. No, that wouldn't be true.

Q. You do remember some girls who worked in your section on the 30th day of March, 1937; is that correct?

A. Well, I ought to have had the same girls that I had.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, Miss Witness, do you remember the specific names of the girls who worked in your section on the 30th day of March.

Trial Examiner Batten: Isn't that the question?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Mr. Reed: Or any of them.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I am not asking for your belief that it is probable that they worked there, because you think they generally did work in your section along about that time of that year. I am not asking for that.

I am asking for your exact memory as to whether you remember any specific girl who worked in your section on the 30th day of March, 1937.

A. Yes.

Q. Not that she probably might have, but did you actually remember any girl there?

A. That was two days after the meeting, and I think the girls worked for me then.

Mr. Tyler: Well, I ask that the answer be stricken out because again she is giving her impression as to what she [fol. 6058] thinks is probable.

Mr. Tyler: My question is: do you know of your own recollection of any girls whom you know were working in your section on the 30th day of March, 1937?

A. No. All I can say, is the same girls ought to have been working for me, that is, the girls that we have been talking about.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, Miss Witness, then you can't name the girls who reported to work to you on the morning of March 30, by name, can you? A. No, not all of them.

Q. Well, can you name any girl? A. No.

Q. Can you name any single girl that reported to you on the morning of March 30 to work in your section?

A. No, not now. I can't remember.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6059] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You stated in your direct testimony that it appeared on the cards of the girls in your section that they were paid for time spent in attending meetings, is that correct?

A. What do you mean, "appeared on the cards"?

Q. That is what I am asking you.

A. Well, I said they were allowed on the cards.

Q. What words appeared on the cards indicating that?

A. It was just added down there, they just got so much for that meeting, and I don't think the meeting or anything was on the card, but we just had so much on the card added [fol. 6060] to their wages, and we were told that that was their allowance for that meeting.

Q. There was some figure?

A. Oh, there might have been some little something.

Q. Some amount of money stated on the card, is that correct?

A. Yes, just an allowance, you know.

Q. And there was nothing explaining what that allowance was for on the card?

A. I don't believe there was.

Q. Now, who told you that was an allowance for attending meetings?

A. Well, I don't remember who told me that, that particular thing, but we all—all we instructors were told that.

Q. You heard all instructors being told that, did you?

A. No, but we talked about it.

Q. You don't know that all instructors were told that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No, I don't know they were all told.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You didn't hear them being told that? A. No.

Q. And you can't remember who told you that?

A. No.

[fol. 6061] Q. And you don't remember anything on the card indicating what this additional sum was for?

A. No.

Q. Are you sure there was an additional sum on the card?

A. Yes, it was added on because I was told that was what it was for, for the meeting, that the girls were going to be paid for the meeting.

Q. And how long did that continue?

A. I don't know.

Q. As long as you were there?

A. What time we had the meeting and went downstairs.

Q. That applied no matter what time the meetings were held?

A. Oh, no, that applied during working hours, when the girls lost time.

Q. And how many times did you see an additional sum put down on the cards in addition to their regular pay?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, would you say it was a dozen or 20?

A. I wouldn't say. I will say I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, I was going to ask you a moment ago, you mean there was a time allowance or a money allowance?

A. A money allowance. It was just down there like they [fol. 6062] had given them—we will say the meeting lasted an hour and a half, or an hour, or maybe longer, well, they paid the girls for going to those meetings, they didn't lose their time.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. When did you first notice that, Mrs. Dorsey?

A. Well, when we started to have those meetings.

Q. How did you happen to notice it at that time, do you remember?

A. I didn't notice it, they called my attention to it.

Q. Who called your attention to it?

A. I told you I didn't remember.

Q. Well, you told me you didn't know who told you they were paid for meetings.

A. Well, I don't remember who told me.

Q. But you don't remember who called your attention to it?

A. Whoever told me, that is what I mean by calling it to my attention.

Q. And that applied to both Loyalty League meetings and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. I said all meetings.

Q. All meetings? A. Yes.

Q. When did the first of such allowances appear on the cards in your section, the first time it was put down, when was that?

[fol. 6063] A. I don't remember; when the meetings began.

Q. When did you first mention that to anyone?

A. Mention what?

Q. The statement that there was an allowance put on the cards for attending meetings?

A. Well, sometimes a girl would say, "Oh, another meeting," and I would say, "Well, now, you girls are going to get paid for this meeting," and they wouldn't care as long as they got paid, it was all right.

Q. And who authorized you to say that?

A. I told you I don't remember.

Q. You spoke of Mrs. Reeves telling you that the instructors were on a pedestal? A. Oh, no.

Q. I thought you used the words, "on a pedestal."

A. I did, but the instructor is not on a pedestal. I said that the girls—she said that the girls held us on a pedestal and we should act accordingly.

Q. When was that Mrs. Reeves told you that?

A. I don't remember. It has been a long time ago.

Q. You don't know whether it was when she was in charge of the plant or not? A. Why sure.

Q. That was when she was in charge? A. Yes.

[fol. 6064] Q. And that was a long time ago?

A. That is quite a long while ago.

Q. You mentioned that you remembered times when the girls came back from meetings in uniform, and the girls said, "Will you put our work away."

A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean they were through with their work when they came back from the meeting, and they weren't going to do any more work?

A. No, that meant it was time for them to go home. When we went down for this meeting, they left their work, it was a hurriedly called meeting and they left their work on their machines and went right on down to the meetings, and stayed so long, and then it was time for them to go home; and some of them said, "Dorsey, will you put my work away," and I said, "Go on home, I will put your work away."

Q. They were through with their work, except for putting it away?

A. No, they weren't through with their work, they finished it the next day.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6065] Q. Well, that is true, but if the girls came back upstairs, all they would have to do that night was to put the bundle away until the next day, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

Q. You mentioned suggesting to some girls that they were not free, the girls were not free to talk in the presence of the instructor.

A. The girls weren't free? I didn't say they were not free; I said that we heard they didn't feel free to talk in the presence of the instructors.

Q. And you volunteered that instruction to the girls?

[fol. 6066] A. No, she asked me.

Q. I understood your testimony was that you said to her, "You girls aren't free to talk in the presence of the instructor."

A. No.

Q. And she said, "Yes, but I am willing to talk in your presence."

A. No.

Q. Well, will you correct me on that?

A. No, she asked me, she said, "Dorsey, who don't the instructors go to our meetings any more," and I said, "Well, Nina, I heard you girls didn't feel free to talk when the instructors were present;" and she said, "Well, maybe some of them don't, but it don't make any difference to me, I would."

Q. That is the way all the girls in your section felt?

A. No, they didn't. This particular girl felt that way.

Q. Will you state which particular ones were afraid to talk in your presence?

A. No, they didn't tell me. I just heard the girls talking.

Q. You didn't hear any one of them say she was afraid to talk?

A. I heard them, but I can't recall names, but this particular girl asked me that question, that is why I remember her.

[fol. 6067] Q. Well, isn't it the fact that particular girls said to you, "I feel afraid to talk if my instructor is present," or is it a fact that you heard a rumor that some of the girls felt that way?

A. I didn't hear no rumor, I heard girls talking.

Q. To you?

A. No, I heard it — you see, I just overheard conversations, but I can't say who the girls were.

Q. What were the conversations?

A. They just said they didn't think the instructors should be at those meetings.

Q. Is that all they said?

A. They said some of the girls wouldn't get up and talk if they were there; they said if they did the instructor would have it in for them, that they felt that way.

Q. How many times did you hear that?

A. I don't remember.

Q. And do you remember any of the girls that took part in the conversations?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were you just passing by and heard that much of the conversation?

A. Well, I may have been. I don't remember now.

Q. What it adds up to is that you heard somebody make the statement that you have just said, in some conversa-

[fol. 6068] tion when you were passing by?

A. It might have been down to the lunch room when I was sitting there eating.

Q. Do you remember what year that was in?

A. I don't remember.

Q. And what place was it in?

A. Place?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know what spot it was or place.

Q. And you don't remember any girl that was in the conversation?

A. No, because — well, I sort of felt that way myself, that the instructor didn't have any business being there.

Q. You mentioned that when Mrs. Reed made her statement in the March 18 meeting, you didn't blame her. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, I don't know whether that is March 18, whether that is the date or not, but at one meeting I said this, when she said she was not going to have any Dubinsky or any 'sky tell her how to run her business, I said I didn't blame her.

Q. You agreed with that, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you still agree with it?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you still agree with it?

[fol. 6069] A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, after July 1937?

A. I don't remember. I said I didn't attend very many meetings, so I don't remember.

Q. Did Mrs. Wherry give you any instructions about attending meetings, or telling the girls about meetings, after July 1937?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You think she may have?

A. No, I don't remember.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Redirect Examination.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Weren't you mistaken about whether any representative of the International was at Mrs. Skeens' home Monday night, and wasn't Mrs. Blue there from a short time after the time we went into Mrs. Skeens' house until we left?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as not proper redirect examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

Mr. Lane: And an attempt to rehabilitate her own witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 6070] A. Well, I was just thinking. Let's see — well, I remember now that she was going to set out in the car, and you said "Miss Blue, you come on in with us." I do remember now, that's right.

Q. And she came in later, did she?

A. Yes, that's right; I am sorry.

Q. Do you remember whether Iva Andrus was working in your section around the time of the Sylvia Hull incident?

A. Yes, Iva was, because I remember her crying; yes, I remember that.

Q. And when you said you were through with work, did you mean you were through with the work before the meetings began or the girls were through when the meeting was over, because it was the end of the working hours?

[fol. 6071] A. I mean the girls were not through with their work when they were called down to that meeting, and their bundles and their work was on the machines, and they asked me if I would put their work away, because after the meeting it was time for them to go home, they were anxious to go home, and I said, "You go on home, and I'll put your work away."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And when did they ask you that, before the meeting or at the end of the meeting?

A. No, afterwards. Some of them, just like that, she said, "Dorsey, —" whoever the girls were, there were several of them — and when one asked you to do one thing, there are more that ask you to do the same thing.

Q. Do you remember anyone other than Lena Allison, who was your instructor when you were working in the Coca-Cola Building, and who was your instructor?

A. Yes, Rose Todd. She had charge of the sample room, [fol. 6072] and I worked in the sample room too. Yes, she was the instructor.

Q. Do you feel that you are unfriendly to Mrs. Reed?

A. No, I certainly don't.

Q. Do you feel that you are unfriendly to Mr. Baty?
A. No.

[fol. 6073] Recross-Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that there were allowances made to operator

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as not proper recross-examination.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Tyler asked her a question, as I understood, about being paid for the time that was spent in union meetings, and the witness answered that, yes, there were allowances made.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think on the other examination of this witness by Mr. Hogsett, he also, did he not, said something about that?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't believe so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if he didn't, he had the opportunity to.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, that was the first time the word "allowances" was used.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, in the direct testimony it was stated it was indicated on the card. Mr. Tyler, of course, brought out more of the details on it.

In this instance you may proceed, but after this let's confine it as nearly as possible,—.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state what allowances were made to operators, for what purpose?

[fol. 6074] A. What allowances?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, like I said, those meetings—they— When a girl loses time, she don't lose it on her own time; that is the allowance they pay.

Q. Was the allowance made for these meetings you have testified about the only allowances that were made to operators?

A. No. The girls get paid for machine time they have lost.

Q. Are there any other types of allowances that are made?

A. I know that the girls, whenever they lose time for meetings, or anything like that, they get paid for it.

Q. Do they get allowances if they do not make their minimum?

A. Well, their guarantee, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. They are made up to that, yes.

Q. Now, outside of time lost on the machine and the money that is made up on the guarantee, what other types of allowances are made by the company?

A. Well, I don't recall any.

Mr. Ingraham: I will have this marked for identification—

Trial Examiner Batten: Incidentally, have you brought the other copy of the Judge Miller findings yet?

Mr. Ingraham: No. I will do that.

[fol. 6075] Miss Weyand: Have you brought the Tyler statement?

Mr. Ingraham: I will do that.

Miss Weyand: When can we have that?

Mr. Ingraham: This afternoon.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. If there is a mistake made in cutting of the particular part of the garment that the girl is working on and the girl loses time on that account, is she paid an allowance for that?

A. You mean, when it is somebody else's mistake?

Q. Yes.

A. If she loses a lot of time, more than a half an hour, that time is turned in by the instructor and is charged to that department.

Q. And if a girl has some repairs to make that are not her fault, are allowances made for that?

A. Well, usually all girls fix their own repairs, if they have time, and that is on their own.

Q. If, for some reason, it wasn't the girl's fault,—
A. You mean, somebody else's mistake?
Q. Yes.
A. Well, that's practically the same thing.
Q. Then, she would get an allowance for that?
A. She would get allowed her time it took to fix that over, yes.
Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 44 and ask [fol. 6076] if you will look at this document and state whether or not you worked in the sections shown on the document during the times stated. For instance, the first item would be November 1, 1925, to November 5, 1936. You were in section 415. Have you any recollection of that?
A. No, I don't remember it.

(Thereupon the employment card above referred to was marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 44, Witness Dorsey," for identification.)

Q. Will you examine this document and look at the dates and see whether or not you worked in the sections listed in that column, being 523 or 415?

Mr. Langsdale: Is this the same document Mr. Hogsett apparently was reading from?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, it isn't proper recross examination. He had an opportunity to examine her about it then.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is either, but let's proceed and get through with this witness. And after this, let's not go back over these matters.

A. No, I couldn't say I remember it.

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. Would you remember, in working in section 942—
A. Let me see that again.
[fol. 6077] Q. Yes. (Handing Respondent's Exhibit No. 44 to the witness.)
A. That's (indicating) 42.
Q. That is 1942. This is January 22, 1942. Did you work in section 942? A. You mean, notions?

Q. Yes.

A. I worked in the notions.

Q. Before that, in November, 1941, did you work in section 515? That was the period when you worked in the notions?

A. That was when I was a floor girl.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like to hear this clandestine conversation that is going on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak louder, both of you?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is that correct? A. In 515?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I worked just a short while in that 515 section. That is when I said I was a floor girl.

Miss Weyand: You had better look at those dates on that and—

Trial Examiner Batten: The question wasn't as to the dates. The question was, if she worked there.

Miss Weyand: He said, prior to that time. She had better look at the dates on this—[fol. 6078] Mr. Reed: I submit, that is hardly proper, for counsel to tell her own witness that she had better do this or that when she is on the witness stand. I object to that sort of practice.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed with your questions, Mr. Ingraham.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Prior to the time you worked in 515 did you work in 531?

A. Like I said, I've been changed around so much, I just can't remember.

Q. Would you say you did not work in 531?

A. I don't remember the dates—see? I've worked around, in 531, and— Oh, I've worked around in so many sections, and they change so much all of the time, I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever work in 518? A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you worked in 518 from November, 1936, to August, 1937?

A. No. I think that was when I was up on the eighth floor.

Q. Would you say you were not in 518?

A. I would say I was up on the eighth floor, in 515.

Q. Where was 518?

A. Oh, I don't know right now. They changed them around.

Q. Wasn't 518 always on one particular floor?

A. No. They changed those special sections around. That is a special section.

[fol. 6079] Q. What section did you work in when you worked on the seventh floor? A. On the seventh floor?

Q. Yes. A. 515.

Q. 518, you mean?

A. 515. That was on seventh.

Q. Was 518 on seventh?

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 44.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is no objection?

(No response.)

It will be received, subject to, of course, some further identification as being a part of the respondent's records.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

(Thereupon the employment card above referred to, previously marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibit No. 44, Witness Dorsey," was received in evidence.)

Mr. Tyler: Did you ask to have it marked for identification?

Mr. Ingraham: It has been, exhibit No. 44.

Mr. Langsdale: Will that be photostated, as other exhibits?

[fol. 6080] Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: And copies furnished to all of the parties?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Redirect Examination.

Miss Weyand: Do you know whether or not the section number which appeared on your check stub was always the same section in which you had been working for the period of the check?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I object to that. It isn't proper re—rebuttal—redirect examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think this is as proper re—rebuttal as part of your examination was re—recross, Mr. Ingraham.

You may proceed.

A. Well, if I understand what you mean, the—like our time card and our check card is the same?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do they always agree with the section you were working in at the time you were working there?

A. No, not always. Sometimes I would change and my time card isn't changed until a period of time—it just don't make any difference—just sometime—I guess just when the office gets time to change it.

[fol. 6081] Q. What is the longest period you remember ever working in one section?

A. The longest period? Perhaps 415 was my longest period in several years, but I don't remember how long. Like I say, it changed around.

Q. You mentioned seasons in the business. Can you explain how that affected what section you worked in?

A. Yes. Like the hemstitching season. On the spring line and the summer line we had a lot of hemstitching, and the zigzagging, and lace work—I didn't say that before, but I am saying it now—that's seasonal. And when they get the amount of work they was going to cut through, then that's the season—that's over—see?

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, was there anything in Mr. Ingraham's last examination about a season?

Miss Weyand: This all pertains to the state of that card—

Trial Examiner Batten: It pertains to it, but—I will permit you to proceed, but when you are through with this witness I have a suggestion to make.

Miss Weyand: When he put that card in, I think it is material to show—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When new lines came in that required new special machine operations, would that change the section in which [fol. 6082] you worked?

A. Sometimes, yes.

Q. How short a time were you sometimes in a given section? A. How short a time?

Q. Yes.

A. What was that question?

Q. How short a time would it be, a few weeks sometimes, you would be in a section, and then be changed to another section a few weeks later?

A. Yes, sometimes.

Q. Did that happen around 1936, 1937, and 1938?

A. Yes. The changes were made— Just like, as I said before, the special section has just always changed like that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6083] Miss Weyand: I would like to ask Mr. Ingraham, first, whether he has brought the list of retainerships in which Mr. Tyler appeared.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6084] Trial Examiner Batten: That list you were going to show to me, Mr. Ingraham,— I think I asked to see it before you presented it.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. (Handing document to Trial Examiner Batten.)

Miss Weyand: This is a complete list of all of the matters in which Mr. Tyler or any member of the firm of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich & Tyler—or whatever its name was during the various periods—appeared on behalf of Mrs. Reed or the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company; is that correct?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, in view of your question at this place in the record, Miss Weyand, I presume we had better clear this matter up.

Miss Weyand: I would like to examine it further. I just wanted an exact statement of what it purported to be, so that I would know in examining it just what it purports to be. I would like to examine it further before making any comments about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I was going to say, it goes down to 1932, and, of course, unless there is some question concerning the correctness of it, I don't think there is anything here that is material to the issues in this case.

Have you any objection, Mr. Ingraham, if counsel see it?

[fol. 6085] Mr. Ingraham: No.

Miss Weyand: I would like to examine it and decide later if I want to use it in connection with some other matters.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was handed to Miss Weyand by Trial Examiner Batten.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Mrs. Dorsey, I am going to hand you respondent's exhibit No. 44 and ask you whether from November 9, 1936, until July 30, 1937, you worked in section 518.

A. No, not all of that time, because in March and April I was upon the eighth floor, in 415.

Q. Do you recall when you went up in 415?

A. Do I recall the date?

Q. About what time it was?

A. No, I don't recall the date.

Q. But you had left the seventh floor and gone up to the eighth floor before March and April of 1937; is that correct?

A. That's right.

. . . . . .

Recross Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, apropos of that last series of questions, I hand you four pay checks issued by the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6086] Company to Etta Dorsey, on the dates of March 16, 1937, April 1, 1937, April 16, 1937, and April 30, 1937, calling your particular attention to the endorsements on the back of each of the four checks, and ask you if those are your endorsements and—

. . . . . .

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. (Continuing) —and ask you whether you identify those endorsements as yours, and whether you identify those pay checks as pay checks cashed by you on the dates shown by the bank cancellation stamp on each check.

(Thereupon the pay checks referred to in the last question were handed to Mr. Langsdale and Miss Weyand by Mr. Hogsett, and, following Mr. Langsdale's and Miss Weyand's perusal, were handed to the witness by Mr. Hogsett.)

A. That's my signature (indicating on pay check).

Mr. Hogsett: Just look at each of the four, please, and then one answer can cover all.

. . . . . .

A. That's right. That's my signature (indicating on pay check).

[fol. 6087] Mr. Hogsett: And when you say, "That's my signature," you mean the endorsement on each of the four checks which I am holding in my hand is your signature—each endorsement is?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Hogsett, if you will have them marked for identification, she can testify to them by the numbers on them.

Mr. Hogsett: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Those will be, I believe, 45-A, 45-B, 45-C, and 45-D.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Hogsett: I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 45-A, being the pay check of March 16, 1937, and ask you if you identify that endorsement as yours.

* * * * * * *

A. That's my signature.

Mr. Hogsett: I offer that in evidence.

[fol. 6088] Mr. Hogsett: I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 45-B, and ask you if you identify the endorsement on that as your signature.

A. That's right.

Mr. Hogsett: I offer in evidence that exhibit.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 45-C, and ask you if you identify the endorsement on that exhibit as your signature.

A. Yes, that's mine.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 45-D, and ask you the same question with respect to that endorsement.

A. That's my signature.

Mr. Hogsett: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibits Nos. 45-A to 45-D, inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: No objection?

(No response.)

They will be received.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. I note on each of these checks that certain numbers appear above your name. Do you note that? It is 487-09-5709. Do you note that on each check—this (indicating on check)?

A. Yes.

Q. That is your social security number, is it not?

[fol. 6089] A. That's right.

Q. I notice on the line immediately following the payee's name on each check appear these figures (.15 - .07). You see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, those indicate what?

A. Insurance.

Q. Insurance and— Something else?

A. Old age pension.

Q. In other words, those were deductions which the company made from the amount actually due you; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, I notice ahead of the name, the payee, on each of the checks, appear these figures, 95.518. You note that on each one, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. 95 was your instructor's locker number, wasn't it?

A. Yes, it was my number.

Q. Or, rather, your time clock number? I misstated myself there.

A. Yes.

Q. That is what the 95 means?

A. Yes.

Q. What does the 518 mean?

A. 518 means the section.

[fol. 6090] Q. Exactly. So, according—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I move that the comment "Exactly" be stricken out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is no question.

Mr. Langsdale: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

Mr. Hogsett: So, on each check, your own pay check for each of these semimonthly periods records you as having time clock number 95 and section number 518—yes or no? Is that right?

Miss Weyand: They speak for themselves, I think.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, is that true?

Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may testify to them.

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6091] Mr. Hogsett: Please give me the names of the persons present at Mrs. Skeens' home on Monday evening.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6092] A. Mrs. Skeens, Miss Weyand, and myself, and Miss Blue—I believe it is—and this lady (pointing to Miss Boyls).

* * * * * *

[fol. 6093] LOLA SKEENS, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Lola Skeens.

[fol. 6094] Q. Where do you reside?

A. 4812 West Fifty-second, Mission, Kans.

Q. When did you begin to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. September 21, 1922.

Q. How long did you continue to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I worked there 17 years, with 2 years out when my son was born.

Q. What was the approximate date of those 2 years out?

A. Well, I left there—I think it was September 1, 1931, and I couldn't tell you just for sure when I came back.

Q. That was when you started the 2 years out; is that correct?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you first went to work for the Donnelly Garment Company what kind of work did you do?

A. The first three weeks I was on a machine.

Q. What did you do next?
A. I gave out repair work.
Q. For how long?
A. I don't know for sure. Two or three months, I should say.
[fol. 6095] Q. What did you do next?
A. Instructed.
Q. How long did you continue to be an instructor?
A. From then on.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Until when? When did you leave there?
A. When did I leave there?
Q. Yes.
A. September 19, 1941.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:
Q. What section were you the instructor of in March and April of 1937?
A. 413.
Q. On what floor was that located?
A. Eighth floor.
Q. Do you know Sally Ormsby?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Did she work in your section in 1937?
A Yes.
Q. Do you know whether she held any position in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. She was a representative for the operators.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6096] By Miss Weyand:
Q. And she was in your section at the time she was representative for the operators; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know of any occasions upon which she went to Mr. Tyler's office or attended to business of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during working hours?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as not rebuttal of anything in the respondent's case.

Miss Weyand: I maintain it is rebuttal of Mrs. Reed's testimony that there was no support given to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and I intend by this witness to show that there was support given.

Mr. Hogsett: Which is a part of the Board's case in chief, clearly. No witness, in other words, for the respondent, so far as I am informed, has testified that Sally Ormsby did not or did go to see Mr. Tyler during working hours. In other words, our case did not include that, so this is not rebuttal of any part of our case.

Miss Weyand: I also maintain it is in rebuttal because it explains certain evidence offered by the company and the intervener in respect to the journeys of employees to see Mr. Tyler preparatory to forming the union.

[fol. 6097] Mr. Hogsett: All of which was a part of the Board's case in chief.

Miss Weyand: It was entirely new matter Mr. Tyler raised here. It was never the company's contention before that there had been a committee appointed at the meeting of March 18. For the first time, on this remand witnesses for the company testified that such a committee was appointed at that meeting, and it is certainly rebuttal at this time to explain that which was never maintained by any of the company's or intervener's witnesses prior thereto.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, I have the belief that counsel is wrong. I think I recall reading such testimony as having been given by Rose Todd at the 1939 hearing.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Hogsett is wrong. Rose Todd's testimony was just to the contrary. In addition to that, the intervener filed an offer of proof signed by some 20 people, which they evidently have overlooked at this hearing, to the contrary, and that is that Rose Todd, Sally Ormsby, and Hobart Atherton went to see these attorneys on their own and without a suggestion from anybody. That is one of the offers of proof they have in this case.

Now, they come forward at this hearing with some entirely different theory and some new witnesses who say there was a committee appointed at the March 18 meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I wouldn't attempt to [fol. 6098] remember the testimony. So, you may proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: Now, that embraces more than whether she went to his office. The question is, whether she knows of any occasion when she went to his office or attended to business of the union on company time. Now, that is not in rebuttal of anything we have put in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. She did go, because she would come back and give me her time and ask me to make out her time ticket.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you make out her time tickets?

A. Yes.

Q. And was she so paid?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that true every time she left work to go to see Mr. Tyler?

[fol. 6099] A. During working hours, yes.

Q. Did the time tickets show what she was doing?

A. Yes, they did for a while.

Q. Did you write it on?

A. I wrote on it, "For union meeting."

Q. Did you do that on all occasions?

A. I did at first, and then Miss Todd came to me and asked me not to put that on. And I asked her what I should write, and she said just to put it under "Miscellaneous" and they would understand.

Q. And did you follow Miss Todd's direction?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you know Hazel Saucke?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. She did.

Q. Do you know Lois Barnes?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Lydia Phillips?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. She did.

Q. Did you attend the meeting at which the Donnelly [fol. 6100] Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. I did.

Q. Did you know before you got to that meeting that a union was going to be formed at the meeting?

A. I did.

Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

A. Mrs. Wherry told me.

Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?

A. I told them.

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing objection to this line of questioning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: As not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it is upon the same grounds stated as to the previous witness.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. At what time of day was the meeting held?

A. I'm not sure what exact time. It was around 2:30, I think.

Q. Did the girls in your section wear their uniforms to the meeting?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6101] Trial Examiner Batten: Keep your voice up. When you were there in the plant, with machines running, and you had to talk to the girls, didn't you talk louder than that?

The Witness: I guess so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, try to talk louder here.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you go to the meetings with the girls in your section?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you sit with them at the meetings?

A. Part of them.

Q. Were the girls in your section paid for the time they spent at that meeting?

A. They was.

Q. Was an entry made on the girl's card to show she was to be paid?

A. There was.

Q. Did you see that entry?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the girls know before they went to the meeting that they would be paid for the time they spent there?

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute.

A. Not the first meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator?

Mr. Reed: I wanted to object to it, because—

Mr. Hogsett: She said, "Not the first meeting."

[fol. 6102] Mr. Reed: She did not? I couldn't hear it.

Mr. Langsdale: What was the question and answer?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the last question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did the girls know before they went to the meeting that they would be paid for the time they spent there?

"A. Not the first meeting.")

Miss Weyand: Did they as to later meetings?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as calling for a mere conclusion and not giving us the benefit of any facts that may exist.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: Mere opinion.

A. As to later meetings?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Yes. A. They knew then they would be.

Q. Did you ever hear of the employees raising a fund to pay Mr. Tyler a retainer fee prior to the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: You will have to speak louder, Mrs. Skeens.

The Witness: No.

[fol. 6103] Miss Weyand: Do you know whether the company intended for instructors to go to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union along with—

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. Did you get the question, Miss Reporter?

The Reporter: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it as far as—

The Reporter (Reading): "Do you know whether the company intended for instructors to go to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union along with—"

Miss Weyand: (Continuing) —with the girls in their sections?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: How do you know that?

A. That we were supposed to go with them? We supposed we were.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Hogsett: Wait a minute. Pardon me. If you have left that subject,—

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: I move to strike out the answer of the [fol. 6104] witness, that the company knew that instructors were [go] to union meetings.

Miss Weyand: I didn't ask whether the company knew that instructors were to go to union meetings.

Mr. Tyler: I move—

Mr. Hogsett: Wait a minute, please, until I get through.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the next to the last question and answer, and the last question and answer—the last two?

(Thereupon the last two questions and answers were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. How do you know that?

"A. That we were supposed to go with them? We supposed we were.

"Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?")

Mr. Hogsett: Now, I move to strike out the answer of the witness to the effect that the company intended instructors to attend union meetings, because when the witness is asked how she knew that, she expressly shows that what she says is knowledge is mere supposition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will not strike it out, Mr. Hogsett, because I think the next question and answer indicate clearly what basis there was for her prior answer.

Mr. Hogsett: And show it to be supposition and not knowledge.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know as I am in[fol. 6105] dicating what I think it is. I think it is obvious to anybody who reads the two questions and answers what foundation there is for the prior answer. The record may stand as it is.

Miss Weyand: When Mrs. Wherry told you there was going to be a meeting, did you think she meant for you to go to the meeting?

Mr. Reed: Now,—

A. Yes. She told me we were to go with the girls.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember how the second, third, fourth, and following meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, held shortly after the organization meeting, were called? A. You mean, how we were notified?

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't be sure. Mrs. Wherry told me part of the time, and part of the time I got it by phone from the operators.

Q. How were the girls in your section notified?

A. I took one row and told them, and my floor girl told the other row.

Q. Were some of those meetings during working hours?

A. All of the first ones were.

Q. Were the girls paid for the time they spent at those meetings? A. They were.

Q. Did the girls wear their uniforms to those meetings?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6106] Q. Did you go with them to those meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you regard yourself as a supervisory employee?

A. Yes.

Q. Why? A. Well, because I was in charge of them.

Q. Do you know whether the girls in your section regarded you as their supervisor?

A. I think they did.

Q. What were your duties as an instructor?

A. To plan the work and to give out work and to instruct them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you keep your voice up, please, as much as you can?

Mr. Ingraham: Could I have the answer read, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you go over the pay roll cards weekly with the office? A. Yes.

Q. And you continued doing that the entire time you were an instructor prior to July 15, 1939; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the thread girl in charge during periods when you were absent for an hour or two?

[fol. 6107] A. She was.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you consult with your thread girl with respect to assignment of work? A. Yes.

Q. Did the duties of the instructor change at any time prior to July 15, 1939? A. No,

Q. Did the duties of the thread girl change at any time prior to July 15, 1939? A. No.

Q. What was the position of Lena Tyhurst in 1937?

A. I don't know exactly. She was to see that the work went out all right. I don't know just what her—

Mr. Reed: We can't possibly hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You hadn't finished?

A. (Continuing) Well, I don't know what she was supposed to be.

Miss Weyand: Was she over the instructors?

[fol. 6108] Mr. Lane: That is objected to for the reason that the witness has said she doesn't know what Lena Tyhurst did.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Mrs. Wherry was over the instructors in 1937.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You didn't regard Lena Tyhurst as also above the instructors?

A. I think she was above the instructors, but I don't think she was in charge of them.

Q. Did she have a supervisory position?
A. I think so.
Q. You don't think so? A. I do think so.
Q. Do you know what Mrs. Gray's position was in 1935?
A. I think she was in charge of the store.
Q. Do you know what Marvin Price's position was in 1937? A. No.
Q. Do you know what Stella Willis's position from 1935 to 1939 was? A. Instructor.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Instructor.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. Do you know in what section she was instructor?
A. Button and buttonhole.
Q. Did you know Sylvia Hull? A. Yes.
[fol. 6109] Q. Where did she work? A. Where?
Q. Yes. A. When?
Q. In April of 1937. A. In section 412.
Q. What floor was that on?
A. Eighth floor.
Q. Where was that section located with respect to your section?
A. Well, if was in the southwest corner of that floor.
Q. Where was your section located?
A. In the center, on the east.
Q. Did your sections touch at the corners?
A. No. There were bins, and the inspectors were in between.
Q. What section was to the south of your section?
A. Section 411.
Q. And that was the southernmost wall of that floor?
A. On the southeast.
Q. And what section was at the north of your section?
A. 415.
Q. And those were the only sections along the west wall of the building; is that correct? A. The east wall.
Q. Along the east wall of the building; is that correct?
A. Yes.
[fol. 6110] Q. Do you remember the last day that Sylvia Hull worked for the company? A. Yes.
Q. What happened that day?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I just know there was an awful commotion. The girls had read in the paper where she was a representative for the union, and the girls came from all floors—went over there. I didn't go over, so I don't know what happened.

By Mr. Weyand:

Q. How long did it go on?

A. I don't know exactly.

Q. Can you approximate it?

A. Well, it must have been an hour or more.

Q. Did some of the girls from your section go over to Sylvia Hull's machine?

A. They went over—I don't know whether they went to the machine or not. They went over on that side.

Q. Did you see any supervisory employees from any other floor up there?

A. Just one, that I can recall.

Q. Who was that? A. Mrs. Bogart.

Q. What floor was she on? A. Five.

[fol. 6111] Mr. Lane: That is objected to, and I move to strike the answer for the reason that it is a mere conclusion of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Miss Weyand: Did Sylvia Hall ask for Mrs. Wherry?

A. Mrs. Wherry told me she did.

Mr. Reed: Now, I move to strike that answer out as merely hearsay—

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Reed (Continuing): —and not a proper answer to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Mrs. Wherry on the eighth floor at any time that morning?

A. She was, early that morning.

Q. Was she there when the Sylvia Hull commotion was going on? A. I didn t see her.

Q. Did Mrs. Wherry tell you anything about the Sylvia Hull commotion?

Mr. Lane: Objected to as hearsay.

Mr. Reed: And not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Mrs. Wherry told me Sylvia sent for her but that she didn't go.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember a meeting of the employees at which Mrs. Reed spoke in March of 1937?

[fol. 6112] A. Yes.

Q. How did you learn that meeting was going to be held?

A. Well, either by phone or Mrs. Wherry told me, I don't know which.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. It was during working hours, but I don't know the time exactly. It was in the afternoon.

Q. Did you attend the meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Did the girls in your section wear their uniforms to the meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Were they paid for the time they spent at the meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the entries on their cards in that respect? A. Yes.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting, that you can recall?

A. All that I can recall is what she said about she wasn't going to have any Dubinsky or any other "sky" tell her how to run her business, that she would stay by us girls if we would stay by her.

Q. I hand you I. L. G. W. U.'s exhibit No. 10, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 5961 and also 5375, and ask you whether that petition was [fol. 6113] passed through your section?

A. It was.

Q. Did you sign it at the time it was passed through your section? A. No.

Q. Did you know at the time it was passed through your section that it was being passed?

A. I seen it being passed.

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. Who organized the Loyalty League?

A. Mrs. Gray.

Q. Were you present at the meeting at which the Loyalty League was organized? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. I'm not sure whether— It was the second floor, I think. I'm not positive. It was on one of the vacant floors.

Q. It was in the building where the company had its plant? A. Yes.

Q. Who presided at that meeting?

A. Mrs. Gray.

Q. Did the Loyalty League continue to exist after the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. I think it did. We didn't hear so much of it then. [fol. 6114] Q. Did you attend meetings of the Loyalty League after it was organized? A. Yes.

Q. Where were those meetings held?

A. In the building.

Q. At what time of day were they held?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Were they during working hours or after working hours?

A. I know the first one was during working hours. I don't remember about the—

Q. Were the girls paid for the time they spent at the first meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether after the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union began its efforts to get girls at Donnelly's to join the International the company had any policy with respect to hiring union members?

Mr. Tyler: We object to that. It is far beyond anything that could possibly belong in rebuttal, and, moreover, it calls for a conclusion of the witness about what the company intended. Our objection is that this is far beyond the limits of rebuttal and it belongs in the Board's case in chief, if it has a place here at all. The question calls for a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Reed: And mere speculation.

[fol. 6115] Miss Weyand: I am offering it in rebuttal of statements of Mrs. Reed, at pages 3314 and 3315 of the record in the present hearing, where she stated there was no such policy and that the company had always employed many union members.

Mr. Reed: I want to call again the attention of the Examiner to this: As far as Mrs. Reed's testimony is concerned, it wasn't given before, for reasons we all understand, and when it was admitted here it was admitted as a part of the continuance of that case that was then tried, and it should have been rebutted at that time.

Miss Weyand: It couldn't have been rebutted at that time, because she wasn't present at that time.

Mr. Reed: To be treated now as though it was given at that time, as a part of the hearing on the main case, when all of the matters she has referred to of any importance were brought out by other witnesses at that time, and the prosecution had full opportunity at that time to reply to them. If there was any discrimination, it was by the company and not by Mrs. Reed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Certainly it isn't rebuttal unless it comes under Mrs. Reed's testimony, Miss Weyand. Does it?

Miss Weyand: I am claiming it comes under Mrs. Reed's testimony—not rebuttal as to anything else.

Mr. Tyler: I suggest, the mere fact that Mrs. Reed may have mentioned something about a matter that was fully [fol. 6116] gone into in the prosecution's case in the first hearing or that any other witness has mentioned such a matter does not make that a subject of rebuttal, because, otherwise, everything in connection with the case would become rebuttal. The fact that Mrs. Reed added something to what was already testified to in the original hearing does not make that a subject of rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Except that Mrs. Reed is the managing head of this company, and if it has any place here at all, it would be following her testimony.

Mr. Tyler: I submit, the evidence is what determines whether it is rebuttal or not, not the position of the person who refers to it. And the evidence has been fully gone through.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that is true, under ordinary circumstances, Mr. Tyler. If I hadn't made the error which apparently I made in the first hearing and had received all of the testimony, no one can tell what might have been the situation. And had Mrs. Reed testified in the first hearing, perhaps no one can tell what the result might have been.

She may answer the question.

Mr. Reed: I want to call attention to the fact that the Board stated in its decision, and ordered and found that the company had an antiunion attitude prior to the time the Wagner Act came into effect in July 1935, and they [fol. 6117] continued to find that down to the date of the hearing. Now, that was then an issue. It was gone into and evidence was introduced on it.

Now, you permitted Mrs. Reed to testify in this case, at this hearing, because she couldn't be at the other hearing. If that reopens the whole case, then this is not a matter of rebuttal at all but of retrial.

Mr. Tyler: And in that case—

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Senator, in your recent statement there, I think you have something. In other words, if Mrs. Reed's testimony, because it was given in this hearing, opens up the whole subject matter, then, of course, there may be no limit to which we might go.

What do you think of that, Miss Weyand?

I am inclined to believe that that is more or less correct. In other words, was there anything Mrs. Reed didn't testify about, and if so, then any matter now is material?

Miss Weyand: Well, I think it would be within the discretion of the Trial Examiner to allow any matter to explain or contradict anything Mrs. Reed said which is not a repetition of evidence given in the Board's case in chief.

However, it is not my intention to bolster up matters which we knew were going to be contested at the time the Board's case in chief was put on. It is only my intention to rebut those matters which for the first time came into the defendant's case as direct statements of evidence of Mrs. Reed's understanding and direction.

[fol. 6118] Now, we have on the witness stand a supervisory employee who was with the company from 1922 down until a very recent date, who was in close contact with other supervisory employees, and with Mrs. Wherry, and I think it is entirely proper to ask her whether she knows if the company had a policy of getting rid of the I. L. G. W. U. after the I. L. G. W. U. started organizing the plant.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner,—

Mr. Hogsett: That is the very essence of their case in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, it seems to me, if I would accept your statement, then we have opened up the entire case.

Miss Weyand: No. I am merely rebutting direct statements Mrs. Reed made and limiting myself to rebuttal, in the strictest sense, of matters which came into the case for the first time because of Mrs. Reed's testimony here.

I think it is entirely proper, when she said they had a policy of not discriminating, to have a supervisory employee who was close to the management state they did have such a policy.

There was never any evidence in the case before as to what Mrs. Reed thought the policy of the company was. We didn't have an officer of the company state before what the policy of the company was, and it is certainly proper to [fol. 6119] have a supervisory employee so state.

Mr. Tyler: Now, if the Examiner please, the Board argues that the company had an antiunion attitude since a way back in 1930. They had an opportunity to present their case on that. The mere fact that some additional evidence which the court directed be put in the evidence was put in by an officer of the company does not change the fact that the Board is now trying to try that issue all over again with witnesses and evidence which were properly a part of its case when it first put it in. The mere fact that some additional defendant witness denies it does not entitle the Board to put in its case all over again, with new witnesses, on the same subject which it supported before. If that were true—if the Board can go over its case again because of Mrs. Reed's testimony, then the respondent and intervener should be entitled to make an entirely new defense, and then the Board perhaps should have another rebuttal, but that, obviously, is not true.

Mr. Hogsett: May I put one further fact in your mind as supporting what Senator Reed has said and what Mr. Tyler has just said?

This question of the antiunion activity of the company prior to the Wagner Act and since was a part of the Board's contention and, therefore, of its case in chief, and in the brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals they had black-faced headings to separate the evidence—its discussion of the [fol. 6120] evidence of the alleged antiunion activity before the Act and of the alleged antiunion activity since the Act.

Now, that is just a circumstance that tends to convince the mind that that was the essence of their claim in chief.

Now, what Senator Reed has just said is manifestly true, that if you permit this, then the case is just wide open, clear up to an open throttle.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, you haven't had anything to say yet.

Mr. Ingraham. Could I just add this:—I don't want to have two speak from a side, but I do want to say this:

In the testimony offered by respondent from the N. R. A. evidence respondent offered, among other questions and answers, this:

"Now, Mrs. Reed, have you or any official of the Donnelly Garment Company ever at any time discriminated against an employee on account of union affiliations or sympathies?

"A. I have not."

Then, in addition to that—

Mr. Langsdale: When was that?

Mr. Ingraham: That was from the N. R. A. evidence.

Mr. Langsdale: Was that offered in the 1939 hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Then, in addition to that, Elizabeth Reeves testified in the previous hearing at great length on the policy of the [fol. 6121] company, that it never engaged in any discrimination on account of union affiliations. That was all gone into, and this question adds nothing new. The Board offered its evidence that the company did do that, did discriminate, and we met it in that way.

Mr. Reed: I don't want to—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Senator, let's not have everybody on each side.

Mr. Reed: I beg your pardon.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, after all, Senator, Mr. Langsdale hasn't said anything yet and I want to hear what he has to say.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, it seems to me that Mrs. Reed's testimony falls in two classes. In one class she answered the Board's case, and I doubt if—I won't say "I doubt," but at least there is some question about whether or not it is proper to rebut what she said in answer.

There is another class of testimony given by Mrs. Reed which was new and was not in answer to any part of the Board's case, and of course we are not foreclosed on that. We must have a right to reply to that.

Now, which classification this falls in—

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Langsdale, it seems to me that this particular matter falls in your first classification.

[fol. 6122] Mr. Langsdale: I—

Trial Examiner Batten: I'll tell you why. As Senator Reed says, the essence of the Board's case was unfair labor practice, interference, coercion, and so forth, by the company. Now, it may be true that Mrs. Reed didn't testify in the first hearing, but there were plenty of others who testified, and the purpose of the testimony was to show interference and coercion by the company.

Mr. Langsdale: I am inclined to believe that is correct.

Miss Weyand: Mrs. Reed, for the first time, brought up the contention that the company had in its employ for a period of time members of unions and had never done anything about it. That testimony is at pages 3314 and 3315 of the record. That was in the way of affirmative matter which had not been raised in the case before, and I think we have a right to rebut it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I am going to rule that you do not. There has to be some limit to this somewhere, or, the first thing we know, we will be retrying this whole case.

Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me Mrs. Reeves gave that same testimony in 1939 when she testified about the carpenters' union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think I recall about carpenters, plumbers, and repairmen.

We will recess for 10 minutes, until 5 minutes after 3.

(Thereupon a 10-minute recess was taken.)

[fol. 6123] Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: That is all the questions I have of this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment until I see if I have any.

Recross-Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Who was Mrs. Bogart?

A. Who?

Q. Mrs. Bogart, B-o-g-a-r-t (spelling).

A. Oh, Mrs. Bogart was an instructor on the fifth floor in the dividing department.

Q. Was she an instructor on the fifth floor in the dividing department in March and April 1937?

A. I am sure she was.

Mr. Langsdale: That's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Ingraham.

Recross Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Skeens, you testified that you worked for the company up until September 19, 1941, is that right?

A. September, 1941.

[fol. 6424] Q. Now, just prior to that date had you taken a vacation?

A. Yes. I came back from my vacation the 19th of August and if I remember right I left the 19th of September.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't hear that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Ingraham: Now, after you returned from your vacation what work did you do at the plant?

A. Instructing.

Mr. Langsdale: What year are you talking about?

Mr. Ingraham: What year was that?

A. '41.

Mr. Ingraham: 1941.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You were an instructor at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you been transferred at any time before that from instructing to do any other work?

A. You mean in the length of time I was there?

Q. No, just in, say, 1941.

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer?

A. No.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, how many weeks were you allowed off for a vacation?

A. Last year I had three because I was a Pioneer.

[fol. 6125] Q. And you received your pay for the 3 weeks?

A. For the three weeks.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you told the girls that you didn't intend to work long after you came back from your vacation?

A. I didn't figure I would stay long, I had intentions of leaving.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear.

A. I didn't intend to stay long, I didn't know just how long, I didn't have any definite time to stay.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you dissatisfied with your work?

A. Not with my work exactly.

Q. What were you dissatisfied with?

A. With Cecil.

Q. What had Cecil done?

A. Well, she didn't just like me very well, and I wasn't very happy working under her.

Q. And you didn't care to work under her?

A. That was it. The company was swell.

Q. Were you mad at Mrs. Reed?

A. No.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you have told girls that you tried to see Mrs. Reed to have a talk with her and she wouldn't see you, and you didn't like it?

A. I did not, because I never tried to see Mrs. Reed.

Q. Now, you stated that you knew Sally Ormsby went [fol. 6126] to Mr. Tyler's office. Did Sallie Ormsby tell you that?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many times did she go to Mr. Tyler's office?

A. I couldn't say for sure.

Q. More than once?

A. Well, she was out at meetings more than once, but I couldn't say that she was at his office. I know she came back and had me make slips out for her, but I couldn't say she was in his office every time, I don't know.

Q. Did anybody besides Sallie Ormsby instruct you to make out slips for her?

A. Later I have made them out for different girls in 412; I think I made one out for Elsie Wright when she went down to some kind of a meeting, I don't remember when it was.

Q. When was that?

A. Well, I couldn't be sure of that, whether it was in 1940 or 1941.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, was this time you made them out for Sallie Ormsby —

A. (Interrupting) Up to 1939?

Trial Examiner Batten: Was that before or after July 1939?

A. Yes, it was in 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: This other instance you are telling about?

[fol. 6127] A. That was later than 1939. I forgot.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say it was when?

A. I think it was later than 1939.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Who told you to make out slips for these girls?

A. Well, Sallie, when she came back from her first meeting she told me — I don't know who told her — but she told me I was supposed to make out slips for the time she lost.

Q. And she was the only one that ever told you that?

A. As well as I remember now.

Q. Did you know whether or not the company ever paid for any time that you put on these slips?

A. Well, I am sure they did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is —

A. (Interrupting) It is always posted on the card.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, do you know whether they did or not?

A. They did.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How did you know that?

A. It was posted on their cards, the pay roll cards that we went over every week.

Q. Do you know whether or not the company paid the amount stated on the pay roll card? Did you ever see the pay check of the girls?

A. No, I didn't see their checks, I just saw the cards [fol. 6128] when I went over them. I did see their checks when they were handed out but I never noticed that.

Q. You never noticed whether the company ever paid this time or not?

A. No, I didn't see it on the checks.

Q. Now, did you attend the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. I did all they had during working hours, and a few they had after working hours, not all of them, not very many of them.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid out of their own treasury girls who spent time on union business?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Did you ever hear that talked about?

A. No, Sir, not that I recall.

Q. Now, you stated that you recall the four meetings that were held by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union after it was organized. Can you tell me about how soon after the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized was there the next meeting?

A. No, I couldn't.

Q. Was it within a month?

A. Oh, yes, but I can't tell you whether it was the same week or not.

[fol. 6129] Q. Well, what took place at that meeting?

A. At the one where they were organized, you mean?

Q. No, the next meeting.

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Do you remember anything that took place?

A. No, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak a little louder, please?

A. I said no, sir.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, the next union meeting that was held what took place at that meeting?

A. Well, I don't remember just what took place at the meetings. I always went but I can't remember just what took place.

Q. Well now, can you tell me anything at all that took place at any meeting that you attended, any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, at the time it was organized I remember them passing around the cards and all of us signing cards where we joined up.

Q. Now, after that organizational meeting can you tell me anything that ever took place at any Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Now, how many meetings did you attend in 1938 of [fol. 6130] the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I couldn't say, I don't know.

Q. Did you attend any?

A. Well, I don't know. I surely did but I wouldn't say for sure.

Q. Up to July 1939 did you attend any meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. A few. I didn't attend very many if it was after working hours, and I was always in a hurry to go home. A few of them I attended.

Q. Now, these meetings that were held in 1937, which you have testified about, do you recall going back to work after any of those meetings?

A. Some of them I did.

Q. Well now, which ones?

A. Now, I don't know just which ones.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak louder?

A. I don't know just which ones. There was some that we went back to work afterwards, and some it was quitting time when they were over, and I don't remember just which was which.

Q. Well, when did you make out the cards?

A. I didn't make out any cards. I said it was on the pay roll card that was made out when I went up there, it [fol. 6131] was already added on, if that is what you mean.

Q. Yes. What was added on?

A. How ever much time they were at the meeting; if it was an hour they were paid for an hour, and if it was an hour and a half they were paid for an hour and a half; of course, that was added on to the card when I went up and looked over the cards; I didn't make out any time for that.

Q. You never made out any time for meetings?

A. Not for those meetings. Everybody attended and I didn't have to make out slips for them.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear, the witness drops her voice and I can't hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the answer was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you make out slips for any kind of allowances?

A. I did when they have repair, you know, when it wasn't their fault, the machine time, anything like that, I made out their time, I made out their slips and turned them in, just the time it took, I didn't put any price on it.

Q. But Mrs. Wherry never told you at any time to make out time slips for girls attending union meetings, did she?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear that Mrs. Wherry told any other instructor to do anything like that?

[fol. 6132] A. No, I didn't.

Q. You heard Etta Dorsey's testimony this morning, didn't you?

A. Well, I heard her testify but I didn't hear her say that.

Q. You didn't hear her say Mrs. Wherry told her to make out time slips?

A. Well, I guess I wasn't listening, I didn't hear that.

Q. Well, Mrs. Wherry never told you anything like that, or ever told any instructor anything like that, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer?

A. To my knowledge I didn't.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You mean she didn't?

A. I don't know that she ever told anybody, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever order the operators in your section to attend any meetings?

A. I didn't order them to, I just shut off the power and told them we were going to have a meeting.

Q. Well, did you give them instructions they had to go to the meeting?

A. Just like I told you, I just shut off the power and I went along and told them, "We are going to have a meet-[fol. 6133] ing," and that was all, and they just went; I didn't tell them they had to go.

Q. Did you ever hear any other instructor tell employees they had to go to the meetings? A. No.

Q. Now, Mrs. Skeens, isn't it a fact that you are sent instructions from the office as to the work to give out, written instructions? A. As to the work to give out?

Q. Yes.

A. No. We have written instructions showing the girls what their part is, but not the work to give out. I don't understand you.

Q. Didn't you daily get instructions from the office as to the bundles and to what was to be done about them?

A. Well, we had certain dresses to get out, but I didn't—

Q. (Interrupting) Well, didn't you get written instructions about those dresses, how much to do of this and how much of that?

A. I don't remember getting written instructions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mrs. Skeens, when those bundles would come in, when this material would come into your section didn't you get some sort of instructions that come along with the bundles, a ticket?

A. No, they just put the work in the bin, and we had in[fol. 6134] structions what to do, you know what I mean, how the dresses were made and how we gave out the work.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think that is what Mr. Ingraham means. You got some sort of instructions along with your work.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Wasn't work planned in the office upstairs?

A. Well, I think it was planned there, yes, what each section would do.

Q. Do you want to tell the Examiner that you had the authority to give out the work to certain people and refused to give work to other people?

A. Well, I didn't do anything like that.

Q. Well, you never thought that you had any right to do anything like that?

A. Well, no, I wouldn't think so.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6135] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Wasn't it a fact that operators at times, if you were busy somewhere else, would get up and get their own bundles?

A. Years ago, they did, but not in the last few years.

Q. There wasn't any instructions against allowing them to do that, was there?

A. Well, they weren't supposed to do it and they didn't do it. I don't know as there were any instructions against it, but they didn't do it.

Q. Were there ever complaints made that sometimes the instructor would be busy and the girl didn't get a new [fol. 6136] bundle, and for that reason she would get up and get one herself? A. I don't know that.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you ever change an operator without consulting Mr. Baty? A. What do you mean, change them.

Q. Well, prior—now, I am speaking of prior to July, 1939—did you transfer operators out of your section without consulting Mr. Baty?

A. Why, I never did transfer any out unless somebody came and told me to transfer them out.

Q. Yes, and wasn't it Mr. Baty that did that?
A. No, it wasn't Mr. Baty.
Q. Wouldn't it come from Mr. Baty, the instructions?
A. Well, I imagine it would come from him but that wouldn't be the way I would receive it.
Q. You never hired or discharged an operator, did you?
A. I did not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6137] Q. I believe you stated that you joined the Loyalty League when it was formed. Do you recall when it was formed? A. No, I don't.
Q. Do you remember what year it was formed?
A. No, I don't; I can't remember dates.
Q. Did you go to meetings of the Loyalty League?
A. I did the first ones.
Q. How many did they have?
A. I couldn't say.
Q. How many Loyalty League meetings did you attend in 1935, if you recall?
A. I wouldn't know. I suppose all they had, I am sure I did, but I don't know how many they had.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you know whether they had any meetings in 1936? A. I couldn't say.
Q. Do you know whether they had any meetings in 1937?
A. Yes, yes, I am sure they had them, I think, in 1937.
Q. When?
A. I don't know, but it seemed to me the union meetings and the Loyalty League meetings kind of came in together, I think; that is why I say there were many meetings for a while.
[fol. 6138] Q. What do you mean by "came in together"?
A. Well, for a while it seemed like we had a meeting every two or three days, and it seems to me some were Loyalty League meetings and some were union meetings.
Q. You mean to say they were holding them on different days? You mean you would have a union meeting one day—
A. (Interrupting) As far as I remember.

Q. (Continuing)—and a couple of days later you would have a Loyalty League meeting?

A. I believe it was like that. I am not sure.

Q. Would you say you had a union meeting twice a week?

A. Well, I don't know. There was some weeks I think we had two meetings, but I wouldn't say which they were, whether they were both union, or one was a Loyalty League meeting or not, I can't remember that.

Q. You can't remember anything that took place at any union meeting outside of the organizational meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall anything that took place at a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you state that you attended the meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall how that meeting happened to be held? [fol. 6139] A. No, I don't know how. We just got word there was going to be a meeting and went down.

Q. Were there strikes going on in other garment plants in Kansas City?

A. I believe they were. That is the time she spoke, when they were having trouble there, I don't know, somewhere at 26th and Grand.

Q. Were the employees—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I am having a lot of difficulty in hearing. Will you speak a little louder, or try to, Mrs. Skeens? A. I will try to.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were the employees generally frightened about what was going on at those other strikes?

A. Why, I think some of them were, most of them were.

Q. Were you? A. Yes.

Q. Were the employees talking about means to protect themselves against any attacks that would be made by the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Well, I didn't hear that.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is it?

A. I didn't hear them make any.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you thinking, yourself, about how you could get in and out of the building, if a strike was called, [fol. 6140] without getting hurt?

A. Well, we had the buses at that time, that took care of us.

Q. Why did you have the buses?

A. Well, in case there was trouble over there, I guess, to protect us.

Q. Well, did you personally have any fear about being able to get in and out of the building without getting hurt?

A. Oh, no, I never thought that.

Q. Was that because your husband was an organizer for the union?

A. Well, my husband was not, no.

Q. Is your husband a union man?

A. He is at the post office, and he is in the union.

Q. Didn't he organize the postmen?

A. Why, he did not.

Q. Did you think that you might be hurt, and that was the reason you rode on the buses?

A. No, they just furnished the buses for us, and everybody rode them.

Q. You could have gone on the street car?

A. Why, I didn't ride the street car, I rode with my husband, but they furnished the buses for us, and I just rode them like everybody else did.

Q. Well, why didn't you come to work with your hus- [fol. 6141] band in his car?

A. Well, I understood that we were supposed to ride the buses, I thought that was what Mrs. Reed wanted us to do; all of us came to 31st and Main, and from that point down, and that is what I did. I always tried to do as near as I could what I was supposed to do.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that the employees were attempting to take some action to protect themselves at that time?

A. Well, I don't know, outside of when they got that injunction to protect us, if that is what you mean.

Q. Now, at this meeting that Mrs. Reed spoke, wasn't it a fact the employees wanted to know what the company was going to do? A. I just don't recall it.

Q. You didn't hear anything like that at that meeting?

A. Well, if it was said, I probably heard it, but I don't recall it now, though.

Q. Do you recall anything that was said at that meeting other than what you say you heard Mrs. Reed say?

A. No, I don't think of anything.

Q. Now, you say you went down with the girls in your section. Whom did you sit with? A. Just which girls?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't remember. I sat with some of the girls from [fol. 6142] our section, but I don't know just which ones.

Q. You said that you told one row of girls at the table that there was a meeting to be held. Can you give the name of any of the girls that you told of the meeting?

A. I just went along and announced it. I didn't tell any special one. Is that what you mean, the girls that sat on the row that I told?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I took the north row, and Sallie Ormsby was on that row, and Lorene Johnson, Emma Spahr, Pearl Hall, Ethel Maxwell, Martha Kuhn, Lucy Evans, Ruby Welch — there is more than that — there is 20, but I can't remember them all.

Q. Well, what did you say to any one of those girls that you have named, and give the girl's name.

A. And give the girl's name?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't say anything to any individual, I just shut off the power, walked up this row and stood right there facing, you know, five or six girls, and I said, "There is going to be a meeting, and we are going down," and then I walked up so the next bunch could hear, until I got to the end of the row.

I didn't talk to any individual. I said it so about six of them would hear it, and then I would walk up and [fol. 6143] repeat it.

Q. Now, what time of day was that?

A. Well, it was in the afternoon, but I am not sure of the time.

Q. Could you be mistaken about it being at 2:30?

A. It seemed to me it was around 2:30. I could be mistaken; it might have been a little before, and it could have been a little after.

Q. Were most of those meetings held around 2:30?

A. Well, they were in the afternoon, and I judge they were around that time, between 2 and 3.

Q. You think between 2 and 3?

A. That is to my mind.

Q. Now, when you were through with the meetings, did the girls come back to work?

A. Sometimes they did. There was a meeting or two, I think, that was just at quitting time, and we didn't work.

Q. But all the rest of the meetings, you came back to work from?

A. Some of them we did, yes.

Q. Now, which meetings were those?

A. I don't know just how many. I don't remember just how many there were.

Q. Well, were some of the meetings after working hours?

A. Later; I don't know whether it was in 1937 or not. [fol. 6144] Q. Is it your recollection now that all the meetings in 1937 occurred before working hours were over?

A. The ones in the spring were, but I couldn't say — they had them later in the fall and I couldn't say about that.

Q. Now, at this meeting when Mrs. Reed spoke, how long did she speak?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, would you say 15 minutes?

A. Oh, no, it was longer than that, I don't know whether it was exactly an hour or not.

Q. You think it was about an hour?

A. Well, as far as I remember; I don't know.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 12, and ask you to read this exhibit and state whether or not you recall Mrs. Reed making that speech.

A. Yes, I remember this, since I read it.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you answer so I can hear you?

A. Yes, I said I remembered since I read this; I didn't remember it before.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you read it all?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Well, read it all, please.

Mr. Langsdale: Is that respondent's exhibit 12, you are showing her?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

[fol. 6145] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall, Mrs. Skeens, Mrs. Reed making that speech?

A. Yes, I remember her making that speech.

Q. Was this what you recall that she said?

A. Well, all outside of that "buttinsky" business.

Q. Well, point out just what you mean.

A. Well, right here (indicating) I understood her to say, "any other 'sky," that is the way I understood her to say it, not buttinsky.

Q. I see. Now, outside of that —

A. (Interrupting) And I thought it was at this meeting that she said — it doesn't state here — that she would stand by us if we would stand by her; she said that at one of the meetings.

Mr. Langsdale: You know, this is not a private conversation between you and Mr. Ingraham; we all want to hear it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, where the word is "buttinsky" you understood her to say " 'sky."

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you recall Mrs. Reed saying: "If you want to belong, that is your own business and it is up to you to decide"?

[fol. 6146] A. Well, I don't recall that, but if it is in there she must have said it.

Mr. Langsade: Now, that is the vice of this transcript.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Will you read the question?

Mr. Langsdale: She says she does not recall it, but if it is in there. I am objecting to him showing her what he claims is a transcript of what Mrs. Reed said, and handling his questions in a way that would lead the witness to think it is a genuine transcript.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Langsdale, the question to the witness was, does she recall the part that Mr. Ingraham read that Mrs. Reed said, and she said she didn't recall it.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the answer?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I recall the last phrase she put in "but if it is in there."

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: But as far as the witness is concerned, she said she didn't recall it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You wouldn't say Mrs. Reed didn't say that?

A. I wouldn't say she didn't, I don't remember everything she said.

Q. Sure, I don't expect you to, Mrs. Skeens. Did you [fol. 6147] tell any operator to join or not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell any operator that he or she should remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you ever say anything to any operator regarding whether they should join or not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir, I don't think I ever did.

Q. Did you ever report to Mr. Baty any grievance that an operator might have, an operator in your section?

A. Only maybe some price was low on something.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read that answer?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think you finished yet, did you?

A. No. I said that is the only thing, sometimes the price was low on something and I would tell Mr. Baty that [fol. 6148] we needed more money on them.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And it was up to Mr. Baty to pass on grievances?

A. Well, I thought it was.

* * * * * *

Q. Well, do you recall signing an affidavit in May 1939?

A. What about?

Q. Well, an affidavit that the employees had formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by their own free will?

A. I think I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, before you show it to her, is this for the same purpose as shown to the witness this morning by Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Ingraham: That is it.

Trial Examiner Batten: And that is the only purpose?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: I beg pardon, what is the purpose? I have forgotten.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, the purpose is to test their recollection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it wasn't a matter of recollection, it was a matter of whether or not there was any conflict between the testimony given by the witness [fol. 6149] and the statement made in this affidavit.

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That was the purpose of it, and the only purpose.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to it for the reason there isn't anything in the affidavit that in any way conflicts with the testimony given by this witness, and therefore it is not material for that purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, as I said this morning, Mr. Langsdale, if, considering the record and the affidavit, it appears there is obviously no conflict, no harm is done.

Now, these aren't being received on any basis except the basis I stated.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, whoever considers the record will have his attention called to it.

Miss Weyand: I would like to object for the same reason I did this morning, and have a continuing objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection, as I stated this morning, and I'll make the same ruling I made this morning.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you intervener's exhibit No. 20, and ask you if that is your signature that appears on page 6060 of the Circuit Court record.

A. Yes, that is my signature.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6151] Mr. Ingraham: Now, it is stated in this affidavit, "Each signer hereby further states that he or she has read or had read to him or her the contents of this affidavit." Do you recall reading the affidavit, Mrs. Skeens? A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: What was the answer?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: And when you made this affidavit you knew the contents of what was in it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were the facts stated therein true?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question unless confined to the facts as applied to this witness, and the plural therein the word "we," of course, is not intended to be answered by this question.

Mr. Tyler: I submit, she can tell as far as she knows. She may know as to other people; it's possible.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, as indicated this morning by Mr. Hogsett, it is only for the purpose of its application to this witness?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: For the identification of her signature, and whether she at the time she signed it felt it was correct?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

[fol. 6152] Trial Examiner Batten: Without reference to all of the other signatures?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: Is that worded exactly like the one Mr. Hogsett showed to Mrs. Dorsey?

Mr. Ingraham: I think it is.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me take a look at it.

(Thereupon the affidavit above referred to was handed to Mr. Langsdale by Mr. Ingraham.)

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"And were the facts stated therein true?")

A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Skeens, in September 1941 had you been requested by the company to change your work from instructor to an assistant in the dividing department?

A. Yes. Just before quitting time that Friday evening, about 3:30, they call me up—Miss Frances, and she asked me if I would—told me they wanted me to go down in the dividing department.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was your pay to remain the same?

[fol. 6153] A. They didn't say.

Q. Were you willing to make that change? A. No.

Q. What did you do?

A. I just went home—I quit.

. . . . . .

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Skeens, what does the word "Supervisory" mean to you?

A. Well, I thought we were over this group of girls.

Q. I am asking you what the word means to you. How would you define the word?

Mr. Langsdale: I submit that is an answer, directly.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand. She may answer the next question.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. How would you define the word, Mrs. Skeens?

A. That you are over a group of people.

Q. Would you say that an employee whose duty was to pass work along a line of people and show them how it should be done was a supervisory employee? Is that what "supervisory" means to you? A. I think so.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6154] Mr. Ingraham: I want to make an offer of page 6060 of the Circuit Court record, contained in intervenor's exhibit No. 20.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6159] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, did your duties differ from the ones described in that last question, Mrs. Skeens?

A. We disciplined, in a way. We had to see that they didn't talk too much or—

Q. What would you do if they talked too much?

A. I would just ask them to be quiet.

Q. Anything more than that?

A. No. If they talked too much, we was told to send them downstairs.

Q. Did you ever send a girl downstairs for talking too much? A. I didn't.

Q. What was the last meeting of the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6160] Workers' Union you attended, Mrs. Skeens?

A. I don't remember.

* * * * * *

Q. You wouldn't remember at what hours it was held, then, would you?

A. It was after working hours, but I don't remember just—They were at different shifts. One shift would go about three quarters of an hour—

Q. The working hours varied from time to time, did they not? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you stated that on the girls'—I think you called it time card— A. Pay roll card.

Q. Pay roll card.—there was an entry about paying them for time taken for union matters. What did that entry say?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6161] A. Well, I can't be positive. I think it said "meeting," but I'm not sure; I couldn't be positive.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Do you know what the word "meeting" meant, if that was the word there?

A. Yes. It would have meant the meeting that we had that week that would come on that card, on that pay roll card.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I didn't say why. I said they would know.

Q. And you are not sure that the word "meeting" was there?

A. I think it was, but I'm not positive it was.

Q. Or that any other word was there?

A. Yes, there was something there that specified what it was, and that's why I don't know whether it was just "meeting" or "union meeting."

Q. There were several things there about deductions or additions on the card, were there not?

[fol. 6162] A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Do you remember anything about insurance or old age security? A. That wasn't on there.

Q. That wouldn't be on the pay roll card? A. No.

Q. When was the first time you ever mentioned to anybody about that being on the card? When was the first time you ever told anybody about seeing that on the card?

A. Miss Weyand, I think.
Q. That was the first person you ever told about that?
A. Yes.
Q. And that was when, that you told Miss Weyand?
A. About a week ago. I don't remember what day it was.
Q. And you saw the card you are talking about more than 5 years ago, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that was the last time you saw it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were there any of those entries in the month of March 1937?
A. Yes, there would be, because that's when—
Q. No, I am not asking you to decide whether you think it is probable. I am asking you whether you remember if there actually were in March, 1937.
[fol. 6163] A. Yes.
Q. You remember it? A. Yes.
Q. But you cannot remember what the words were?
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, when Sallie Ormsby asked you to make out a slip for her about some time spent on some union matter, did she bring any written order to you to do that?
A. No. She just told me, and I don't remember who she told me told her to do it.
Q. Did anybody else tell you to do it besides Sallie Ormsby?
A. I just don't remember. I know it was all right, or I wouldn't have done it, I guess.
Q. You know—or, have you heard that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has a policy of paying its members for any time they lose working for the company that they spent on union matters? Have you ever heard of that? A. I don't know.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she said she doesn't know.

By Mr. Tyler:
Q. Weren't you supposed to keep track of the time that was spent away from the plant by anyone in your section? A. During working hours?

[fol. 6164] Q. Yes.

A. If it was on business reasons. If it was their own time, I didn't.

Q. Didn't you keep track of the time she spent away from the plant on other reasons except business reasons?

A. No. If she would go to town, or something like that, I didn't keep track. It would just show the time out and the time back in again.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say "the time out and the time back in." You mean, they punched their cards?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. When Mrs. Wherry told you about announcing that there was to be a meeting, did she give you an order to order the girls to attend that meeting?

A. She just told me they was going to have a meeting after while and was going to organize the union, but for me not to say anything about the meeting until I got the call on the phone.

Q. But she didn't add to that any statement that you were to direct them to be present?

A. No. She said just to tell them we were going to have a meeting.

Q. And you didn't direct them to be present?

A. I didn't. I just shut off the power and told them we were going to have a meeting.

[fol. 6165] Q. And as far as you know, a half a dozen other girls in the same section might have passed the word along?

A. I don't know. I went along one row and told the girls, and my floor girl told the girls in the other row, and everybody knew it.

Q. So that everybody knew there was going to be a meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that Mrs. Wherry told you the same thing, in substance, during all of the union meetings in 1937?

A. No. I didn't say that.

Q. I am not saying you said it. I am asking you if that is true. A. No.

Q. Did anybody at any time ever give you instructions to order any girl to attend a union meeting?

A. No.

Q. You remember turning off the power on April 27, when the girls went to the meeting, do you?

A. I always turned off the power when we had a meeting.

Q. Do you remember turning off the power that day?

A. I don't just exactly remember that day, but I know every meeting they had I turned off the power.

Q. And that is the reason you think the meeting was held before working hours were over? A. I know it was.

[fol. 6166] Q. But you also turned off the power on every day after work was over, too, didn't you? A. Yes.

Mr. Tyler: That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Redirect Examination

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How often did Mr. Baty come to your section around 1937? A. Not very often.

Q. Was it once a week, or could you approximate it?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as not rebuttal, all of it having been gone into in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

You may answer.

A. Maybe once a week.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the written instructions which you got when you had a new style direct which girl should do which operation? A. No.

Q. Who decided which girl should do which operation?

A. The instructor.

Miss Weyand: That's all I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

[fol. 6167] Recross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Whose duty was it to keep the girls in the section working? A. The instructor's.

Q. Was there any quota assigned to your section at any time when you were instructor?

A. We had quotas during the rush season.

Q. And whose duty was it to see that that quota was gotten out by the sewing girls? A. The instructor's.

Q. How did you perform that duty?

A. Well, we had to plan the work and give it to the girls, the ones we thought could get it out—we just had to plan to get it out in a certain length of time.

Q. Was it your duty to keep them at it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if a girl was disobedient at any time, what did you do about it?

A. Well, I don't know as I had any that was disobedient. We could send them down to the employment if they were disobedient, but I don't know as I ever had anybody who was disobedient.

Q. So the type and kind of work each girl got depended upon the instructor; is that true?

[fol. 6168] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any difference in the money that would be made by the girls due to the way the instructor divided the work? A. There could be.

Q. How?

A. You could give one girl all of the small bundles and one all of the large bundles, and the one with the small bundles wouldn't make as much money as the one with the large bundles.

Q. And it was within the power of the instructor to do that, was it? A. Yes, it was.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. If an instructor gave a girl the small bundles would the operator have the right to complain to Mr. Baty?

A. Yes, she would.

Q. And as a matter of fact, was there any kind of discrimination like that, to your knowledge? A. No.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6169] GENEVA COPENHAVER, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Geneva Copenhaver.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. 10101 East Tenth.

Q. Is that Kansas City, Missouri?

A. Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. When did you begin to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I first began to work there in 1928.

Q. How long did you continue to work there at that time? A. I worked there until May of 1929.

Q. Did you at a later date return to work for the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 6170] A. Yes. I went back, I believe it was, in the latter part of September, in the year of 1935.

Q. How long did you continue to work after that?

A. I worked until some time in August of 1939.

Q. What was your job at the Donnelly Garment Company between 1935 and 1939?

A. Embroidery machine operator was what I was hired for.

Q. Did you do that most of the time?

A. When we had embroidery work I would do the embroidery work.

Q. What did you do the other time?

A. Run other machines—did work on other machines, in different sections.

Q. What section were you employed in in March and April of 1937? A. 415.

Q. What floor was that on? A. Eighth floor.

Q. Who was the instructor of that section at that time?

A. To the best of my knowledge, Etta Dorsey.

Q. Did you attend the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized? A. Yes.

Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

A. I was told by the instructor in charge.

[fol. 6171] Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Did you wear your uniform to that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the other girls in your section wear their uniforms to that meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Did you time out before you went to that meeting?

A. Not that I remember of, no.

Q. What do you recall that happened at that meeting?

A. Well, I don't know as I can recall anything that was said particularly, because there were so many meetings, it's hard to designate what happened at this one and that one.

Q. I am speaking of the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized.

A. Well, I don't remember. It was one meeting—the one where something pertaining to this union—where they passed out these cards. Now, I couldn't say for sure that it was at that meeting that they passed out cards for us to sign for this union.

Q. Do you know whether the meeting at which they passed out cards was held during working hours?

A. I am quite sure it was.

Q. Did you sign a card at that meeting? A. Yes.

[fol. 6172] Q. Why did you sign the card?

A. Well, I felt like I'd better, if I wanted my job. That was the impression I got from it. I needed my job and needed it badly, and I got the impression that if I didn't, I wouldn't have a job very long.

Q. Could you state why you had that impression?

A. I didn't know anybody that didn't sign one, and I didn't know anybody that didn't belong to it after it was formed. I remember of one meeting—I don't know which one—where it was brought up in the meeting—someone asked if new employees coming into the plant would have a chance to join the union, and they said, yes, they would, and it went on in the conversation, if the new employee had any doubt as to whether they wanted to join the union, there would be a doubt in their mind as to whether they wanted to work for the company.

Mr. Hogsett: If the Court please, we object to this line of examination on the ground that it isn't rebuttal of anything. In other words, it is just going into the Board's case in chief again.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is, insofar as it attempts to determine what transpired at the meeting.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that is the line of inquiry I am now objecting to.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, of course, part of this testimony, as I recall it, was this witness' statement as to [fol. 6173] why she joined.

Mr. Hogsett: Which is not rebuttal either.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's take them one at a time. I agree with you that the other matter, I don't believe is, the matter as to what transpired. But I gathered from the questions that it was an attempt of Miss Weyand's to set the time of the occurrence rather than what transpired.

Mr. Hogsett: Then, if that is so, I move to strike all of the testimony of this witness as to what transpired at the meeting of April 27, 1937, because it isn't proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it may stand, because I think that was the purpose of it.

Mr. Hogsett: And I move to strike out what occurred at the latter meeting, for the same reason.

Mr. Langsdale: What latter meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Could you state why you had that impression?")

Trial Examiner Batten: Was there an answer?

The Reporter: Yes, there was a long answer.

Mr. Stottle: The answer is what we are objecting to.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing ob-
[fol. 6174] jection to this testimony, for reasons we have heretofore given?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Of course, I agree that going into what transpired at the meeting is not proper rebuttal, but, as I said before, I don't think that is the purpose of it.

Mr. Reed: Well, it would be perhaps useful if we had that long answer read and know what she did testify to and know whether it was in or out. It was an involved answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have it read. You want it read, Senator?

Mr. Reed: Yes, I am asking for that.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: I move to strike out the whole of that answer as not responsive and as not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I passed on it once before, Senator.

Mr. Reed: I don't know now— I beg your pardon for my stupidity, but I don't know now what Your Honor's ruling was on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, did I not, Mr. Hogsett, in answer to your objection, state that it might stand? I thought I did.

Mr. Reed: I didn't hear you.

Trial Examiner Batten: I'm sorry, Senator.

Mr. Reed: I'm sorry, too.

Miss Weyand: Miss Court Reporter, will you mark this [fol. 6175] Board's exhibit No. 37 for identification?

(Thereupon the portion of newspaper above referred to was marked "Board's exhibit No. 37, witness Copenhaver," for identification.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Mrs. Copenhaver, will you please read this newspaper article and tell me if you attended the meeting there described? It begins at the second column. It is entitled "Cheers By Plant Union."

Mr. Ingraham. Can you give us the date of this newspaper article?

Miss Weyand: I am quite certain it was Wednesday, May 12. Doesn't it appear on there?

Mr. Ingraham: May 12, 1937?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you check that and be sure?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I will. I am certain it was May 12, 1937.

Mr. Langsdale: Kansas City Times of May 12, 1937.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the picture being taken?

[fol. 6176] A. No, I don't remember the picture being taken, but I remember attending the meeting.

Q. Do you recognize any of the people in that picture? Will you look at it carefully?

A. Well, a lot of their faces I do recognize, but I don't —you know—I don't know their names.

Q. Do you remember what time of day that meeting was held?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Do you remember how you were notified of that meeting?

A. We were always notified of meetings by our instructor.

Miss Weyand: I offer Board's exhibit No. 37 for identification in evidence.

Mr. Reed: We object—

Trial Examiner Batten: What— For the purpose of indicating it recalled to the witness' mind that she attended the meeting?

Miss Weyand: No. I want to offer it for the purpose of showing that every girl that attended that meeting, as far as I can see, is in uniform. I think that is proper evidence for the Board to consider in connection with the testimony—

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you haven't asked the witness about that, have you?

Miss Weyand: She recognizes those as people of the Donnelly Garment Company and she remembers being at the meeting there described.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is this the same picture that [fol. 6177] was offered in the last hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think it was.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't mean "the last hearing;" I mean, at the "first hearing."

Mr. Ingraham: I think Mr. Langsdale had this picture.

Mr. Langsdale: We didn't offer it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have a rather distinct recollection that at the first hearing someone had a picture of people in uniform and, if I am not mistaken, there were at least three efforts to have it identified, and so forth.

Miss Weyand: If you desire to have me bring specific persons who appeared in the picture and tell you that is their picture, I can do it, but that takes a lot of trouble to do that.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not asking you to do anything. I am making the inquiry—

Miss Weyand: I have no recollection of that's being in the previous record. I have checked it and haven't been able to find it as of this date.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am certain everything said officially there is in the record. It doesn't make any difference. I will receive it, and I am receiving it on the same basis I have received other newspaper articles which have been received thus far—I think, about 38 of them.

Mr. Reed: We object as incompetent and immaterial and [fol. 6178] not proper direct examination, undertaking to introduce into the case as substantive evidence a mere newspaper article, and as not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand the article itself is not offered but merely the picture.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I have received it.

(Thereupon the portion of newspaper above referred to, previously marked for identification "Board's exhibit No. 37, Witness Copenhaver," was received in evidence.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you know Sylvia Hull?

A. I didn't know her personally. I only recognized her when I saw her.

Q. Were you working on the same floor with Sylvia Hull the last day Sylvia Hull worked for the company?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you recall what happened that morning?

Mr. Tyler: We object. The Sylvia Hull incident is in no sense proper rebuttal. It was gone into in long detail in the case of the Board in chief.

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, I ask you to just stop for a second and think if this is rebuttal—everything is rebuttal that pertains to the case in any way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, my idea of the Sylvia Hull incident is this:— I tried to, I think, in my talk here a month or so ago, indicate I did not think it was [fol. 6179] within the offers of proof upon which I was taking testimony, but I don't remember whether Mr. Tyler, or who it was, convinced me that I was wrong. I know Mr. Langsdale very strenuously opposed it and said it was a closed book.

Mr. Hogsett: I ask you to draw the line somewhere, if the Examiner please.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am inclined to agree with Mr. Langsdale, that, so far as what happened or transpired that day, there is sufficient testimony in the record. Now, we had a lot of it in the last hearing. It is true that all of the witnesses which Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Tyler examined —all, as I remember it, testified about the Sylvia Hull incident.

Mr. Tyler: I object, Your Honor. The question isn't whether the evidence is sufficient; the question is, whether there has been an opportunity to produce it at the proper place.

Now, if the Board can go over that incident, producing new witnesses about it, then the respondent and the intervener should be allowed to produce all of the witnesses they can find against it, which obviously would be improper.

It is repetition of what the Board tried to prove in its original case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Didn't you figure that was what I meant by the use of those terms, Mr. Tyler?

[fol. 6180] Mr. Tyler: No. I thought the word "sufficient" meant the Examiner felt, if there wasn't enough evidence on it the first time, you would admit more of it this time.

Trial Examiner Batten: If that is what you understood, I'm sorry I didn't state myself more clearly.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, my position is —and I take it, Mr. Hogsett's— (Addressing Mr. Hogsett.) Did you examine the first witness, whoever it was?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, today?

Mr. Langsdale: No. When this hearing started.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Ingraham examined all of the witnesses. But their first witness, I believe, was Mrs. Cooper, was it not?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: They commenced to interrogate her about the Sylvia Hull incident, and it was my position that that was not within the scope of the remand, that the only things within the scope of the remand were the things offered and denied by the Examiner. The Sylvia Hull incident was gone into thoroughly in 1939, and we put in the testimony in the Judge Miller trial, and they put in their testimony on that, and that was a closed book. And it was never maintained by the Circuit Court of Appeals that that should be gone into again, but they have done it with every witness they have put on the stand now.

[fol. 6181] The question occurs to me, if we have a right to keep the book opened?

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Langsdale correctly said this afternoon, there are two classifications of defense evidence—

Mr. Langsdale: Of Mrs. Reed's evidence.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. One is of a defensive character, and the other is, as he contends, new matter. Now, for the first time, I find myself in genuine accord with him on a legal proposition.

Trial Examiner Batten: You had better be sure of it, because it will be in writing.

Mr. Hogsett: I am in accord with that legal proposition. I admit that, as to any new matter that any of our witnesses have given, they are entitled to rebut. I haven't denied that. You haven't heard me say a word that even squinted of opposition to that, but this Sylvia Hull incident evidence is in no sense new matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, my remark quoted by Mr. Hogsett was with reference to Mrs. Reed's testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: But it is true, as a legal proposition.

Mr. Langsdale: The Examiner admitted the testimony of Mrs. Reed, not because of the remand, but because she had been ill and unable to attend this hearing before. It wasn't for the certain testimony she gave, and if he had admitted it for that reason, I would have objected to [fol. 6182] it on the ground that it was a closed book. But she opened the whole book, beginning with 1941—

Trial Examiner Batten: Perhaps I made a mistake in accepting her testimony, its not being within the remand.

Mr. Langsdale: I am not objecting to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: No. But I say, perhaps I did.

Mr. Langsdale: When I characterize Mrs. Reed's testimony as falling into two classifications, one as defensive, which she would have had a right to give had she been at the other hearing, and which you admitted because she wasn't able to be at the other hearing, and the other, the new matter, which we have a right to reply to now, that doesn't apply to other witnesses. No other witness had any right, in my opinion of the remand, to go into something that had been closed and both sides had a full opportunity to be heard on in the last hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I recall, both witnesses presented by the Board so far have been permitted to testify about the matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Miss Weyand.

Is there a question pending?

Miss Weyand: Will you read the last question, please?

(Thereupon, the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Do you recall what happened that morning?")

[fol. 6183] Miss Weyand: The morning of the Sylvia Hull incident.

A. Well, it was in the morning that this demonstration, or whatever the commotion was, took place, and there was girls come from other floors, and when I first noticed it, there was just a bunch of girls crowded around over in the corner where she was.

I didn't even know who the girl was then, who the trouble was over, until someone told me. And I went over—I didn't get real close to her, but close enough that I could tell what was going on, and there was a commotion over there.

I came back over to my section. I happened to be in 415, right there in front of the door, and then I saw them take her out.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you hear anything said, or any noises of any sort?

A. Yes. I heard booing and loud talking, and the girls, from what I could gather, were talking to her. I wasn't close, and there were so many girls around her, you couldn't hardly get a glimpse of her, but I did see them taking her out.

Q. Do you know whether she was continuing to work?

A. You mean, while the demonstration was going on?

Q. Yes.

A. She was trying to, but there was so much talking, and talking to her, that she couldn't work, and she was crying.

Q. Do you know whether the power on her shaft was turned off?

[fol. 6184] A. I saw the power turned on, but—you know, just walk up and turn the switch on. And one of the girls would turn it off, and somebody else would turn it on, and somebody else would turn it off. It was turned off and on about three different times while I happened to be over there.

Q. Did you know Fern Sigler?

A. I didn't know her even when I seen her. I didn't know the girl at all.

Q. Did you go down to the sixth floor on the day of the Sylvia Hull demonstration?

A. Yes. I understood there was some commotion down there, so out of curiosity—some of the girls went down, and I went with them.

Q. What did you see on the sixth floor?

A. There was girls bunched up around her machine, and loud talking—talking to her. I didn't stay down there but just a few minutes and came back.

Q. Do you know whether there was any deduction from your pay for the time you were away?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know whether the instructors on the eighth floor made any effort to get the girls to work during the time that demonstration was going on?

A. It seems to me our power was turned on for us to work—so we could work.

[fol. 6185] Q. Do you remember who your instructor was on that day?

A. To the best of my memory, I believe it was Etta Dorsey. I feel sure that's who it was.

Q. Did you attend a meeting around the time the strikes were going on at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants, at which Mrs. Reed spoke? A. Yes.

Q. How were you notified [at] that meeting?

A. We were always notified of our meetings through our instructor, or, along towards the last, by i. d. m.'s.

57, Tabulation relative to Comparative Earnings of Piece Work Operators—First Six Months—1937 and 1938	7131	4321

[fol. 6189] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Where was your machine located at the time of the Sylvia Hull incident?

A. I was working in 415 on the eighth floor. That section was the first section as you come in the door, the first section that you come to, and I was about the third or fourth machine, something like that, from the end of the table. That was the east end of the building, across the table; I faced the door, I was facing north.

Q. Did you consider your instructors as supervisors?

A. Absolutely.

[fol. 6190] Mr. Ingraham: Now—

Miss Weyand (Interrupting): Why?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move to strike the answer out as not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the answer may be stricken. While you make your objection—I assume you had one?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I object to the question on the ground that it is not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Absolutely, I regarded her as being my supervisor.

Miss Weyand: Why?

Mr. Ingraham: May I have a continuing objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Well, I think there is already a continuing objection on this witness.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if not, I want a continuing objection.

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Why did you consider your instructor to be a supervisor?

[fol. 6191] A. Well, the instructor—everything that we—like changing a price on a ticket or anything like that, it had to be O. K.ed by the instructor. The instructor always gave us our checks or had our checks brought to the section, and she would pass the checks around from girl to girl, and more than one time when I was unable to be at work, I would call, and I have talked to Mrs. Dorsey myself when I was working for her, I notified her that I wouldn't be able to be at work that day.

She was in full charge of the section, the girls looked to her for everything in regard to work or anything that they might be in doubt about; it was always the instructor you went to about the work.

Q. Did the instructors determine whether to divide the work, and lay off girls when the work was slack?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Do you know of any instance of that?

A. Yes, I know that I have been sent home by the instructor whenever there was a lack of work in the section, and the instructor could—she distributed work the way she wanted to. If we had four or five different embroidery numbers in the line, and maybe there would be a few bundles in the number, that had different styles of dresses, maybe one of one price and one another price, maybe she could give that to one girl—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6192] Miss Weyand: By dividing the work I mean whether it was distributed among all the girls in the section, or just given to some of the girls, part of them, and the rest go home.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

A. Yes, I understand the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer it.

A. Well, they could do that. If there was just a small amount of work, just a few bundles, they could give that to one or two girls and send two or three girls home.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you ever been sent home? A. Yes.

Q. Who was the instructor that sent you home, any incident?

A. Well, I don't remember. I have been sent home for [fol. 6193] the lack of embroidery work when Mrs. Dorsey was my instructor.

Q. Do instructors ever have girls transferred into or out of their sections?

A. Yes, to the extent that if they run out of work, like the special section, if they run out of work and have no work for the girls, they can be sent to Mrs. Hyde and then taken to another section.

Q. And who determines whether the girls are sent to Mrs. Hyde? A. The instructor.

Miss Weyand: I ask that this be marked as Board's exhibit No. 38 for identification.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 38, Witness Copenhaver," for identification.)

Do you want to look at this, Mr. Trial Examiner? I was just explaining I want to use it for the form only.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Mrs. Copenhaver, I would like to have you look at Board's exhibit 38 for identification, and tell me what that slip was used for.

A. Well, this is the kind of a slip that was given you by Mrs. Hyde, or whoever took care of you when you went down to the office, when you were transferred from one department to another. The department that you were going from was put on here, and the department that you were going to, and the [the] time that you left your original department and the time that you went into the other [fol. 6194] section was marked on here, and then this was to be O. K.ed by your instructor.

Q. Does the slip I hand you contain the initials of an instructor? A. It is signed by—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Just a minute, please. I understood Miss Weyand to say she was submitting this just as to form and not anything—

Miss Weyand: Not to prove any facts of the transfer. I would like to use it as an illustration to show where the instructor signed on the slip.

A. Now, this is signed—

Trial Examiner Batten: Wait just a moment.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to this witness testifying that it is signed by the instructor or anybody else. It speaks for itself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she will testify, if she knows, who signed it or initialed it.

A. The instructor signed it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, did you see her sign this one?

A. I don't remember about this one special one, but I have certainly seen them signed, a lot of them.

Miss Weyand: Do you know whose initials are on that?

[fol. 6195] A. This is C. F. I can't be certain who it was, however, I do know an instructor whom it might be.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You don't know who put the initials on there?

A. No, I couldn't testify to it.

Q. You didn't see them put on there?

A. I may have, but I wouldn't be certain of that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That was a slip that was used when you were transferred from one section—

A. (Interrupting) To another?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. And it was used continuously before July, 1939, at the time you were transferred?

A. To the best of my knowledge they used this slip.

Q. Now, did the check you received show the section you worked in when you were transferred, or the one you were transferred into?

A. The check showed the section you were working in. If I was working in section 415 one week, and if I was in another section another week, and received another check, it would still have 415 on it.

Miss Weyand: I offer this in evidence, for the purpose previously stated.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean merely for the pur- [fol. 6196] pose of showing it is a slip that was used in effecting a transfer:

Miss Weyand: And to illustrate the method and procedure used in making a transfer from one section to another, and the instructor's duties in that regard.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course—

Mr. Lane: (Interrupting) I object to it for the latter reason.

Trial Examiner Batten: This doesn't show anything about an instructor.

Miss Weyand: It is just an illustration of the type of slip the company prepared, which the instructor regularly approves, as the young lady said, when she goes to a certain section; she says it is approved by the instructor of the section she is transferred to.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is no testimony here that those initials are an instructor's initials.

Miss Weyand: She said usually they sent those around—there is an instructor down there, and these initials coincide with her handwriting in another exhibit I have. I am not offering to prove that, but I am offering this as a form the company used, and which instructors usually approved.

Mr. Langsdale: The testimony is, further, that this is the form that was always used, and she had seen many of them just like this, and had them herself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it will be received as to [fol. 6197] form. This witness testified it was used to effect a transfer.

(The document heretofore marked "Board's Exhibit No. 38, Witness Copenhaver," for identification, was received in evidence.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When the instructor signs on this, what line does she usually put her name on, or initials on?

A. Right on the bottom line, right there (indicating).
Q. Following the words "Approved by"?
A. Yes.
Q. And that is the instructor, not in your permanent section, but in the section you are temporarily working in?
A. Yes.
Q. Do instructors eat in the cafeteria with the other girls? A. They eat—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Now, I object to that question for the reason it is immaterial to any issue in this case, and it is not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Hogsett: If I may supplement by this suggestion, that illustrates the thin character of this Board's case, that they would have to rely on the fact that domination could be shown by an instructor eating in the same cafeteria. Now, that is getting down to pretty thin stuff, I submit, and the subject matter is wholly immaterial.

Miss Weyand: I don't offer to prove they eat in the [fol. 6198] same cafeteria. That isn't the purpose of this question.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, it is in the same field, the same atmosphere.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer the question.

Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection, it is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. There is one cafeteria I know of in the building. There is a room in the back of the building, a little, small room, closed off to itself, and that is where the instructors eat their lunches.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. Who else eats in that room?
A. Well, Cecile Ealy and all the instructors.
Q. Anyone in addition to the instructors eat there?
A. The thread girls, I believe, eat in there.
Q. Does Mr. Baty eat in there?
A. Yes, I have seen Mr. Baty go in.
Q. Does Lena Tyhurst eat in there? A. Yes.

Q. Did Mrs. Wherry, when she was working for the company? A. Yes.

Q. Did any of the operators eat in there? A. No.

Q. Did Rose Todd ever make out one of those tickets for time for you?

[fol. 6199] A. I remember of one time that I worked up in the designing room on some work that I understood was for Miss Baty, it was bridge sets or lunch cloths and table cloths and napkins, it was embroidery work; and Rose Todd made out my time ticket to be turned in for my pay for that.

Q. Who requested you to do that work?

A. I don't remember who came down and got me and took me up there to do that.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say "time ticket". What do you mean?

A. Well, like if I was up there an hour or an hour and a half, well, then, I had to be paid for that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: You don't mean one of those slips, these transfer slips, do you?

A. Well, I don't know as it was the same form, but it was a ticket like that. I don't remember exactly whether it was exactly that same identical ticket but it was another one similar to that, but it was a ticket that you turned in as to how much time you spent up there, and you were paid for that time.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What is an i. d. m.?

A. Well, it is a little note that might come from Mr. Baty or anyone that they want to get to the girls. It usually has "i. d. m." at the top of it, and they are usually brought to the sections by the basket boy, they call them, and the [fol. 6200] instructor passes it around through the section.

Q. When you say "anyone that they want to get to the girls," whom do you mean by "they"?

A. Well, if Mr. Baty wanted the girls to know something, in regard to the work, or there was too much talking going on in the plant, why, he may write that on an i. d. m., or have it written on there and sign his name on it, and it would be brought around to the different sections.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. When did you say you left the employ of the company? A. You mean the last time?

Q. Yes, the last time.

A. It was in 1939, and if I am not wrong about the month, it was sometime during the month of August, but I know that it was in 1939.

Q. Now, had you been sick prior to that time?

A. Prior to the time when I left the company?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 6201] A. That was my reason for leaving.

Q. Well, had you drawn 12 weeks of insurance?

A. I did.

Q. Now, how long had you been off at that time?

A. You mean —

Q. (Interrupting) In 1939.

A. When I drew my insurance?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, you had to be off a certain length of time before you could draw insurance. I don't remember just exactly what the length of time was.

* * * * * *

Q. Now, since you have left the employ of the company have you been employed?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. At Brooke Wholesale Embroidery.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6202] Q. And what work do you do there?

A. I don't work there now.

Q. Well, when you did work there?

A. My last job was as instructor.

Q. How soon after you left the employ of the Donnelly Garment Company did you go to work for this concern?

A. I left Donnelly's in — as I say, I believe it was in August of 1939, and I went to work for the Brooke Embroidery two days before Christmas — let's see. Well, it was a year from the following Christmas — let's see. That would have been 1940; it was two days before Christmas in the year of 1940.

Q. And what work did you do when you started in with that concern?

A. The Brooke Embroidery?

Q. Yes.

A. I ran embroidery machines.

Q. And how long was it before you were made instructor?

A. Well — let me see. It was in October of the next year. I quit there this last summer — this summer, it was the middle of this summer, and I went to work there — I mean I was an instructor about the first of this year until [fol. 6203] I quit.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. You mean the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I never belonged to any other union but the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Now, do you recall in June of 1939, signing an affidavit under oath with respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. June?

Q. Yes.

A. Of 1939?

Q. Yes.

A. Under oath?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. I will hand you intervener's exhibit 20, and refer you to page 6077, and ask you if that is your signature.

A. Yes, that is my signature.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6204] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, I will ask you to read this petition, and state if you recall signing that affidavit.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. This affidavit states each signer hereby further states that he or she has either —

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Just a moment. I object for the reason the affidavit is the best evidence of its contents.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Reading) "That he or she has either read or had read to him or her the contents of this affidavit." Do you recall having read this affidavit?

A. As I remember that affidavit, it was read to us in groups of a few girls at a time.

Q. But it was read to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was the affidavit that you made at that time, was that true or false?

Mr. Langsdale: Let her see it. She hasn't read the affidavit yet.

Mr. Ingraham: She read it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, she read it.

[fol. 6205] A. I don't understand what you mean.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, was that affidavit correct when it was read to you?

A. Well it is correct to the extent they weren't standing over me, threatening my life, or anything like that.

Q. That isn't the question. The question is: Are the facts stated in the affidavit you signed at that time correct? That is the question to you.

A. You mean to point out that I signed it of my own free will?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Hogsett: True or false.

Miss Weyand: The contents of the affidavit itself had to do with her joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You proceed, Mr. Ingraham. I was going to try to simplify it, but I guess I complicated it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You swore, when you signed this affidavit, that the things mentioned — you just read these matters that are contained in the affidavit — that they were true.

• • • • • •

[fol. 6206] Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

A. I am afraid I don't.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, this affidavit was read to you?

A. Yes.

Q. After it was read to you, you signed it, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the statements in there, were they true and correct at the time you signed the affidavit?

• • • • • •

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you recall what is in the affidavit? You just read it.

A. Well, to the best of my memory, in the affidavit —

[fol. 6207] Q. No, I am asking you if you remember what was in it. You just read it.

A. Well, maybe I didn't understand it. That is the point I mean, maybe I didn't understand what that covers.

Q. Well, you take it then and read it again.

A. Well, as I understand it, I signed this affidavit to the effect that I joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of my own free will?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, the affidavit contains all the statements that you swore to.

A. What I mean by that, I don't know — I don't know whether this refers to whether I was forced into the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or if I just signed a card because I wasn't forced to.

Q. Yes, that is one of the things in the affidavit. The affidavit is very plain and simple. You have just read it now, and I want you to state whether or not it was true or false.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think the witness should be required to state that the whole affidavit was either true or false.

Mr. Reed: I think that is manifestly an improper suggestion.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6208] Trial Examiner Batten: I think the question is proper to the witness, when she gets through reading it again.

A. Well, I still don't know just exactly how I should answer that question.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, you are the one that is answering the questions, Miss Witness.

A. If I can express myself the way I felt about that when I signed it; it seems to me there are so many questions in there, that that covers, that maybe wouldn't apply all the way through; one answer wouldn't apply to it.

Q. Well then, are there parts in there that you don't consider to be true?

A. No, not necessarily that, but he asked me if I considered that complete statement to be true or false.

Q. Well, do you consider there are parts of it that are true and parts of it that are false?

A. No; but as I read that, the way I understand it, that we signed that as more or less of a petition to prove that [fol. 6209] we had joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union under our own free will.

Q. Well, that part of the affidavit, then, you consider true, is that right?

A. To the extent that I wasn't threatened in any way, or forced by any means into signing a card or signing my name into the union — to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well now, what is the next part there, Mr. Ingraham? Or do you care to proceed in that manner?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, that's right.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Let me read it then: "We, the undersigned employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, below the rank of officer or any position carrying with it the right to hire or discharge, again reassert under oath that it is our free, voluntary and considered wish and choice to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and not to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other union." Is that true or false?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6210] Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Witness. Do you understand the part Mr. Ingraham just read?

A. Yes, I understand it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, was that true or false, that you joined it of your own free will?

A. But my point is this, the impression I got of that, when I signed it, was that I was signing a card to join the union. They didn't force me in any way by threats — the company never intimidated me one way or the other, they never told me that if I didn't join the union I would be fired; and when I signed that, that was the impression I got of it.

Q. Well, then, with that interpretation on that sentence, it is true, is that right, as you have explained it?

A. Well, if I am making myself clear, I guess that is right. It is kind of hard to express yourself. I know how I felt about it. Maybe I didn't understand it when it was read to me, but that was the impression I got from it, that we were signing that card — that we had signed the card to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that we [fol. 6211] weren't forced to sign it in any way. Now, that was the impression I got of it when I signed it.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, was that sentence I have read true or false?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think it is. The witness has answered it and explained it in her way, and I don't think, Mr. Ingraham, that you, no matter how many times you ask the question, "Is it true or false," you will get any other answer.

Mr. Reed: Well, let's see.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that is about the third or fourth time. You may ask again, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: I want you to read that first sentence, it is a very plain and simple sentence, and state whether or not that is true or false.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to that question as it contemplates a "yes" or "no" answer, when the witness says she can't give a "yes" or "no" answer, but gives her explanation for it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she may read it again.

A. Well, I am sorry. That is just about the best answer I can give you, because I really and sincerely—that is the truth. Maybe I didn't understand it, I am not saying that I did. Maybe I didn't just see through it, but [fol. 6212] when I signed it that was really what I got from it, when it was read to me.

Mr. Ingraham: What did you get from it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, Miss Witness, you have no other answer than you gave once or twice?

A. No, that is the best I can do.

Mr. Ingraham: Are you now stating that that sentence that I have read was not true?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition. It is certainly the same question in another form.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I don't—I wouldn't say it was true or untrue, because right now you have convinced me that maybe I didn't understand that when it was read to me.

Mr. Ingraham: No, I haven't convinced you of anything.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative, and ask it be stricken out.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it is responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it may stand. It is not a question.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, it is responsive to the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, will you read the answer [fol. 6213] thus far, of the witness?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"A. Well, I don't—I wouldn't say it was true or untrue, because right now you have convinced me that maybe I didn't understand that when it was read to me.")

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I want you to take that affidavit and point out what fact is contained in that affidavit that you swore to at the time, that now you testify was untrue.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

A. (Interrupting) I haven't testified it was untrue.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Witness.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I object to the question as repetition, for that includes the sentence that has just been read and inquired about six times and answered six times.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, as far as that first sentence is concerned, you'd better proceed to the next part of it, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: I want her to point out anything in that affidavit that was sworn to under oath that is untrue.

Mr. Langsdale: And I object to "sworn to under oath," it doesn't make any difference whether it was sworn to under oath or not, the question is was it true.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I want her—

Trial Examiner Batten: Both of you, please, just a [fol. 6214] moment. Will you read that question—tell us if there is anything in that that you consider to be untrue?

Mr. Ingraham: I suppose a false affidavit you consider to be untrue.

Mr. Langsdale: You had hundreds of them down there.

Trial Examiner Batten: Both of you, let's proceed with this hearing.

A. Now, what is it you want me to read?

Mr. Ingraham: I want you to point out any fact of anything in that affidavit that you now are willing to testify is untrue.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, as I understand the Examiner's ruling, that doesn't include the sentence that has been gone over.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may read the entire matter and tell us if there is anything in there she considers to be untrue at the time she signed it.

[fol. 6215] (Thereupon the affidavit above referred to was read by the witness.)

A. Well, I wouldn't say there was anything in there that was untrue to the way that I understood this when it was read to me.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, it isn't hard to understand, is it?

A. Well, maybe I'm dense, but—

Q. Is it hard to understand?

A. I do think it is worded in a little bit complicated way, yes.

Q. What is hard to understand about it?

A. Well, I don't know—in general. But I don't seem to have the same impression of this as you do.

Q. What impression do you have?

A. Just like I said before in my answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think she has testified to that several times, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it is a very plain, clear statement. I can't understand why the witness quibbles about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that isn't the first thing in this hearing we have had that probably was plain but was explained by witnesses. Now, it is obvious that the witness will not definitely say Yes or No on this document, and I will not require her to say it.

[fol. 6216] Mr. Ingraham: All right. Let me ask this witness—

First, I offer page 6077 of intervener's exhibit No. 20 (rejected) as a part of the cross-examination.

Miss Weyand: I object to it as not containing anything inconsistent with her testimony, on the grounds I have previously objected to the offer of this exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received on the same basis as the other pages.

Mr. Ingraham, has anything been done with reference to photostating those pages?

Mr. Ingraham: Not yet.

Trial Examiner Batten: I believe this is three of them, isn't it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: I believe you testified yesterday this:—.

Miss Weyand: The page number, please.

Mr. Ingraham: 6172.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Weyand was asking you about the April 27 meeting. Do you know what meeting that was?

A. Was that the first meeting, where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was—where we signed the cards, or had that right?

Q. It was the meeting where the union was formed.

A. Where it was formed, and we signed cards and joined?

[fol. 6217] Q. (Reading from transcript.)

"Q. Why did you sign the card?

"A. Well, I felt like I'd better, if I wanted my job. That was the impression I got from it. I needed my job and needed it badly, and I got the impression that if I didn't, I wouldn't have a job very long."

A. That's right, I testified to that.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

A. Well, I joined it of my own free will to the extent of this, I was never threatened or told if I didn't join the union I would be fired, or anything of the kind, by the company, or anybody who had any authority down there. But it was just clear in my own mind that if I didn't belong to the union I wouldn't have a job there very long, and I still feel that way about it.

Q. So, then, when you made this affidavit that you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union—when you made this affidavit under oath, "It is our free, voluntary and considered wish and choice to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union," that wasn't true?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No, I don't understand it that way. When I signed that [fol. 6218] petition right there, as I understood that, the way I took it, I wasn't forced, by any means at all, to sign the union card, but in my own mind I felt just as sure that if I didn't do that I wouldn't have a job.

Mr. Ingraham: So, at the time in 1939 when you made this affidavit under oath you felt that it wasn't a voluntary act, that you wouldn't have a job unless you did join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and, yet, you stated in this affidavit that it was your voluntary act?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question as, not a double-barreled one, but a about a quadruple-barreled one, and for the further reason that it is argumentative and, also, repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is argumentative.

Mr. Ingraham: Did you sustain the objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I think it is argumentative.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Miss Witness, you know what the word "voluntary" means, don't you? A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you know what "free act" means?

A. Well, I think I do.

Q. Now, do you want to tell this Examiner that you can't understand what the language "It is our free, voluntary and considered wish and choice to belong to the Dom- [fol. 6219] nelly Garment Workers' Union"—that you don't know what that means?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. I object to that question as not based on her testimony, for she said she knew what "voluntary" meant and what "free act" meant.

Mr. Ingraham: All right,—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute.

Are you going to withdraw the question?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Langsdale: The question now involves other matters which have already been answered, and I object to it as repetitious.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is repetitious. However, I may be mistaken, but it seems to me that this is the question to the witness, Mr. Ingraham:—

If it isn't, say so. What distinction does she make between signing the card as a voluntary act and signing this affidavit as her voluntary act?

Mr. Ingraham: That isn't my question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, you state your question.

Mr. Ingraham: She says she understands what these words mean.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I want you to state what you understand "free" and "voluntary" mean.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not a proper question, unless it is used in connection with the other words they [fol. 6220] are used with in this affidavit. She says she knows what "voluntary" means and what "free act" means, and she has said what she understood them to mean in their context with these other words, which makes it repetition, and I object to it.

The Witness: What is it you want me to explain?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Now, I want you to state what you understand 'free' and 'voluntary' mean.")

A. Well, I'd say that "free" meant you were not bound in any way to anything—that you were not bound in any way or obligated. And "voluntary" would mean you did it because you wanted to, I suppose. That would be as near as I could— Well, that you were not forced.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, don't you understand, then, that that meant that you were free to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Q. (Continuing) —without regard to anything that anybody had threatened, or that you thought might be threatening, to prevent you from joining?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question as repetition. [fol. 6221] Now, she has gone over all of those matters and stated what she understood by those words as contained in the context of the affidavit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

The Witness: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you restate it, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: When you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, was that your free and voluntary act?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as repetition. That is the sentence that they have been interrogating her about now for forty minutes, and she has answered it many times.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. You mean, the day I signed the card, did I do that—

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

A. I signed that card because, as I said yesterday,—

Mr. Ingraham: Now, just a minute. I want my question answered, and then she may explain.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question to the witness, please?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the interruption. Her answer as it was coming out was certainly responsive and proper.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

[fol. 6222] (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"When you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, was that your free and voluntary act?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. It was my free and voluntary act to the extent that I wasn't threatened in any way to sign that card—forced in any way. They didn't force me or threaten me, or anything, to make me join that union at any time.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, you stated yesterday—

Mr. Langsdale: What page are you going to read from?

Mr. Ingraham: 6172.

Q. (Continuing) "Q. Could you state why you had that impression?"

That referred to the part I just read, being "I got the impression that if I didn't, I wouldn't have my job very long."

Then, the next question:

"Could you state why you had that impression?"

"A. I didn't know anybody that didn't sign one, and I didn't know anybody that didn't belong to it after it was formed."

Then, the answer goes on:

"I remember of one meeting—I don't know which one—where it was brought up in the meeting—someone asked [fol. 6223] if new employees coming into the plant would have a chance to join the union, and they said, yes, they did. And it went on in the conversation, if the new employee had any doubt as to whether they wanted to join the union, there would be a doubt in their mind as to whether they wanted to work for the company."

Do you remember making that answer yesterday?

A. I do.

Q. Now, did you consider at the time you joined this union that if new people came to work in the plant and they didn't want to join the union, there would be doubt in their minds as to whether they wanted to work for the company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. When did this meeting take place?

A. Which meeting?

Q. You stated that at a meeting that was said, that if new employees—

A. I don't remember which meeting that occurred in. I do remember of that statement being made, but I couldn't tell you—We went to so many union meetings that I have no idea which meeting that occurred in.

Q. How many meetings did you have a week?

A. Oh, I don't know how many meetings we had, but it seems to me like we were having meetings all the time, just one right after the other.

[fol. 6224] Q. Every two or three weeks?

A. I wouldn't designate how many we had.

Q. Approximately how many a week?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. How many a month?

A. At first, it seemed to me, they had— Now, this is just my own recollection—my own idea about it; I'm not certain. It seems to me we had three or four a month.

Q. At least three or four a month?

A. Yes, I'd say that.

Q. Now, will you state what occurred at the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Well, as I remember, the meeting took place in the afternoon, and we went down to the meeting in our uniforms, Mr. Tyler was there and he talked to the employees, and that was when Rose Todd told us that we were going to sign cards—or they had cards there for us to sign, and they were passed out through the meeting and we kept them, and at the end of the meeting the cards were taken up—the boys that passed out the cards walked down the aisles and collected the cards from each row and took them back and turned them in. I remember that.

Q. Anything else?

A. Well, not that I recall right now.

Q. All right, now, the next meeting that you attended, [fol. 6225] when did that meeting take place?

A. I don't know as I could tell you that, because I don't remember the dates when they had the meetings.

Q. What occurred at the meeting?

A. I don't know what occurred. I can't specify what happened at this meeting and what happened at that meeting. I just can't—

Q. What happened at any meeting after this first meeting you referred to?

A. Usually Miss Rose Todd conducted the meeting and they talked about different union matters, and things of that kind.

Q. What were those matters?

A. You mean, what were the union matters?

Q. Yes.

A. In regard to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and in regard to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. Those were their subjects.

Q. What was ever said—in substance, now? I am not asking you to quote anybody.

A. You mean at any of the meetings after the first meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Just like I told you there, I remember very distinctly that one time about that being said about the new employees having a chance to—

Q. Have you read copies of the union meeting minutes? [fol. 6226] A. Yes, I have.

Q. When did you read those?

A. Well, let's see. I read them last night.

Q. Where did you read them?

A. At Miss Weyand's—

Q. What minutes did you read?

A. Well, I couldn't tell you which ones I read. I just read some minutes. I don't know which ones they were, whether they were all of them, part of them, or of the first, second, or third—I don't know what they were.

Q. After reading the minutes last night, state what you recall took place at any union meetings, outside of what you referred to.

A. I would rather not depend on what I read in the minutes. I would rather tell you what I actually remember myself, without what I got out of the minutes I read.

Q. What do you remember, then?

A. Very little. Just like I said, I remember that instance— That just happened to impress me.

Q. Now, did you testify that you attended a meeting in March, a meeting of employees?

A. I don't know just what you mean now.

Q. Did the employees hold a meeting in the month of March, 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as assum-[fol. 6227] ing that she said "employees." I don't think she said who held the meeting, except that there was a meeting in the plant.

Miss Weyand: I didn't ask her about the March meeting, I don't believe.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness was, was there a meeting of the employees in March; is that correct?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall reading in the paper about those strikes? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Was there a general discussion among the employees at the Donnelly plant of the violence going on in those strikes?

A. Oh, you heard some girls talking about it.

Q. But there wasn't much talk?

A. Oh, it was discussed quite a bit, naturally.

Q. Were you of the opinion that there was going to be any violence at the Donnelly plant?

A. I never had the slightest bit of fear, in going in and out of the Donnelly plant—going back and forth to work, of being bothered by the union in any way. I was never approached— I drove my car back and forth every day and parked it there and I never saw anything in front of [fol. 6228] the Donnelly plant that might bother us.

Q. Did you ever hear that the Donnelly plant would be next?

A. I think there was something to that effect in the paper.

Q. Did you know what was going on at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants in the way of violence?

A. Only what I read in the papers and heard people tell. I didn't see it.

Q. Did you think there was any violence going on at these other plants?

A. I suppose there was. I didn't pay a whole lot of attention to it.

Q. Did you hear that the International strikers were beating employees at those plants?

A. Oh, I knew about what was going on up there, just from hearsay and what I read in the paper. I just read it in the papers.

Q. Did you ever hear that the strikers were pulling the employees' hair and tearing their clothes off?

A. Yes.

Q. And kicking them with razor blades?

A. I heard about them pulling their hair.

Q. And tearing their clothes off?

A. I did hear that.

Q. And that didn't bother you?

A. Well, if I had seen somebody out in front of Don- [fol. 6229] nelly's that looked like they might do that, it might have, but there was never a picket or anything I saw in front of the Donnelly plant that would put any fear in me whatsoever, so those things didn't bother me.

Q. But you just testified you heard that the Donnelly plant was going to be next? A. Yes.

Q. So it wouldn't bother you to have your clothes stripped off in the public streets in Kansas City?

A. Yes, it would bother me to have my clothes stripped off in the streets, but I would have to see somebody out there to do it before I would get excited about it.

Q. You would have to wait until they were ready to do it before you would be bothered about it?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. Now,—

A. Absolutely, I wasn't one bit frightened about that. I was in and out of there all of the time, and I drove my own car to work and parked it out in front every day.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, did you have something you wanted to say?

Mr. Langsdale: No. I think she is taking care of herself all right.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, she has demonstrated what she thinks—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

The Witness: Isn't that what I am supposed to do when—[fol. 6230] Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Witness, you just answer the questions that are asked of you.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Mrs. Copenhaver, did you hear any discussion among the Donnelly employees of what they could do to protect themselves?

A. Oh, not other than just what a few girls passed as their opinion.

Q. Who were the few girls?

A. Oh, I don't remember who they were—just girls who might happen to be going in and out of the building, and so forth.

Q. So there wasn't any such general discussion down there at all?

A. I don't remember whether there was or not. I can't remember. There were different girls we would go in and out of the plant with and we would discuss it among ourselves and talk about the things that might have gone on in these other plants.

Q. Did the employees ride in buses?
A. Yes, they did.
Q. For weeks and weeks?
A. I don't know how long.
Q. Did you? A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did the newspaper have articles about the strikes?
A. You mean, the strikes at the Missouri and those places?
[fol. 6231] Q. Yes.
A. I read articles about those strikes.
Q. Were there pictures in the papers?
A. I believe there was.
Q. Were there very many?
A. I don't remember about that.
Q. Did the articles describe any violence at the Gernes plant?
A. As I remember, they did, yes.
Q. Did the pictures show the violence?
A. I don't remember about that.
Q. But what you read didn't cause you to be afraid that the International was going to come down to the Donnelly plant and use the same violence?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition. She has answered that several times.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is somewhat repetitious, but you may answer.

A. No, it didn't frighten me to the extent that I was afraid to go to work.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I am not asking you if you were afraid to go to work.
[fol. 6232] A. Well, I didn't worry about it, thinking they might come down there some morning and meet us down there. That didn't worry me.
Q. You never thought they were going to do it; is that right?
A. I didn't know. I wouldn't say that. I didn't know whether they would or not.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 16 and ask you if you saw that article or saw that edition of the Kansas City Times?

A. I believe I remember seeing those pictures.

Q. What did those pictures indicate to you?

A. Well, it looked like a pretty good fight in progress.

Q. But you wouldn't be afraid of any fight like that?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative and having been asked and answered—repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is repetition.

Mr. Ingraham: I am referring to this article—that the article didn't cause her to be afraid of fights like that.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. It is still repetition. He has asked her that question generally, specifically, and back and forth, and she has said she wasn't afraid of being in any fight, she drove her car up and parked it in front of the plant every day.

Mr. Ingraham: Did you sustain the objection?

[fol. 6233] Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I sustain the objection.

Mr. Ingraham: I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 20 and ask you if you saw that edition of the Kansas City Journal-Post, Monday, March 22, 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: What is that? Is that the Sylvia Hull article?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Langsdale: The strike article?

Mr. Ingraham: "Violence Marks Garment Strike."

A. Well, I think I saw those pictures.

Mr. Ingraham: I am not referring to the pictures.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you read that article?

A. Yes, I think I read it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did that have on you?

A. Well, it didn't have any effect on me. I wasn't implicated in it. I didn't work up there. I didn't have to argue with them.

Q. But you have testified you had heard discussed that the International was coming next to the Donnelly plant and was going to use the same violence—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

I object to that. She hasn't testified to anything of the sort. She said she heard rumors that they might come down there next, but nothing about using violence, or "the same violence."

[fol. 6234] Mr. Hogsett: Do they use different types of violence?

Mr. Langsdale: They didn't use all of the violence you people claim they did.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did you understand they were going to use the same methods down at the Donnelly plant as they had used at the other plants?

A. I heard that.

Q. You heard that from the other girls?

A. Just in general conversation.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, will you please read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"But you have testified you had heard discussed that the International was coming next to the Donnelly plant and was going to use the same violence—")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Ingraham: I believe she answered that question in—

Trial Examiner Batten: She answered it in answer to my question. I used the word "methods" instead of "violence." But I thought you still wanted an answer to your question.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please answer that?

The Witness: What was the question?

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read it again, please?

(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter.)

A. Yes, I heard that.

[fol. 6235] By Mr. Ingraham: I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 29, which is an article in the Kansas City Star for March 25, 1937, and ask you if you read the article that is entitled "The Hair Pulling Grows."

(Thereupon the article referred to in the last question was read by the witness.)

The Witness: Now, you asked me if I read that?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. What effect did the reading of that article have on you?

A. Well, maybe I was hard to convince that they were going to come down there, but I still had no fear— I had to see somebody out there first, before it would have frightened me that they were going to do something to me.

Q. Now, did the same type of article appear for weeks and weeks in the papers?

A. There were several articles about that, as I remember.

Q. What do you mean by "several"?

A. Well, the papers had write-ups in them in the mornings, and sometimes in the evening paper.

Q. Every day?

A. I don't know as it was every day, but there were several articles I remember reading.

Q. Was that for three or four weeks?

A. I don't know how long it went on. It seems like it [fol. 6236] did go on for quite a little while.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 31, which is the Kansas City Journal-Post edition of April 5, 1937, with the streamer across the front page, "Twenty Women Strikers In Fight. New Fights Stir Action." Did you read that article?

[fol. 6237] A. Yes, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you read that article?

A. Yes.

Q. What effect did the reading of that article have on you?

A. Well, it didn't have any particular effect on me, it didn't apply to me.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibits 18 through 38 inclusive and ask you to state if you read the other articles that you have testified about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's see. She has testified on 20, 29 and 31, I believe.

Mr. Ingraham: I think that's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you go through these articles, Miss Witness, and as you go through them tell us whether you read them or not, and give us the number that is on the page.

A. You want me to read each one of these?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. Do you recall reading that article?

Trial Examiner Batten: You read it sufficiently so you can tell us whether you did read it at the time or not. If you have to read it all the way through, you do so; of course, if you don't it is unnecessary.

A. I believe I read this one.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What is the number of it?

A. Exhibit 18.

[fol. 6238] Q. Exhibit 18?

A. Yes. I think I remember reading this one too.

Q. What number is that?

A. Exhibit No. 19.

Q. And I believe you have testified before that you read 20, the next one, is that right.

A. Yes. I read most everything that was in the paper at the time.

Q. Well, you go through each one. The next one would be 21.

A. I believe I read this one too, Exhibit 21.

Q. 21?
A. Yes. The next one is 22.
Q. 22. You read that?
A. I read that. I don't remember definitely about this 23, I wouldn't be certain about that.
Q. 23?
A. Yes. I think I read 24.

I don't remember this.

Q. What one was that?
A. No. 25.
Q. 25?
A. I don't believe I read that one.

I don't remember about this 26, whether I read it or not.

Q. 26?
[fol. 6239] A. Yes.

* * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Miss Witness, will you start again to read?
A. I believe I read this exhibit.
Q. Wait until Mr. Ingraham gets here. I think you left off at exhibit 31, did you not.

Miss Weyand: 26 is the last one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, pardon me; 26.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Well, then, you start in with 27.
A. I believe I read this exhibit 27.
Q. 27?
A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: While the witness is reading this next exhibit, I think it was Mr. Lane or Mr. Stottle called my attention to the fact that the 3—this doesn't concern you, Miss Witness—3 pages out of intervener's exhibit 20, which was rejected, and are now received, aren't given new exhibit numbers, but simply identified as a cer-[fol. 6240] tain page number. Now, that appears to me to be satisfactory.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6241] Trial Examiner Batten: The witness states that she has read 28—

A. (Interrupting) And 29.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing) And 29.

A. I believe I read No: 30, too.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. 30?

A. Yes.

Q. And 31, I believe you have already testified about that?

A. Yes, I have already testified to that.

I believe I read No. 32.

Q. 32?

A. Yes.

I don't remember whether I read No. 33 or not. I don't believe I read 34. I don't remember whether I read No. 35 or not. I don't remember about this 36.

Q. 36?

A. Yes. I don't remember whether I read that or not for sure.

I read No. 37.

Q. Was there some question about 38? I notice you looking at it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I think the witness has some question about it.

A. Is this what you wanted me to read and see whether I had read it or not?

[fol. 6242] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Yes. Do you recall reading that article?

A. No, I don't believe I do. I don't believe I recall reading that 38.

Is that all?

Q. Yes. What effect, if any, did the reading of these articles about the violence at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants have on you?

A. At that time, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it didn't have any effect on me. I wasn't implicated in it, I didn't work there, and I didn't think a whole lot about it. I talked—I heard comments and discussed it, and things of that kind, like it said, the hair pulling.

Q Were employees discussing the violence at those plants?

A. You mean the Donnelly employees?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I have talked to the girls myself about it, discussed it.

Q. Now, is it not a fact that the violence at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants caused the Donnelly employees to organize the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I guess that is what brought it about.

Q. Yes. I believe you stated that in March and April of 1937 you were in section 415?

[fol. 6243] A. In March and April?

Q. Yes.

A. Was that during the Sylvia Hull demonstration?

Q. Yes.

A. To the best of my knowledge, yes, that is where I was; it was on the eighth floor in section 415.

Q. Now, was section 415 a large section that ran across the entire floor of the building?

A. I couldn't be certain about that. There was an aisle that run north and south in the building; whether it was all one section at that time I don't remember. I don't remember whether that whole row completely even with the division was one section, or to where the aisle was [was] one section, from there east, and from the aisle west was another section, I can't say about that, I don't remember.

Q. Which side of the aisle did you work on?

A. As I remember I worked on the east side of the aisle.

Q. Now, did that section have in it more than one instructor?

A. Well, if that section was divided, as I say, from the aisle, which was about the middle of the building, if it was divided there into two sections, and the section from the aisle east—if there was just that one row of machines in there, as a rule we just had one instructor, no other girl on the floor; and if it was a whole row clear from the east side of the building to the west side of the build-[fol. 6244] ing, they generally had an instructor and a thread girl.

Q. Do you recall who the instructor was for section 415 during the months of March and April, 1937?

A. As I recall, it was Etta Dorsey.

Q. Do you recall any other instructors that worked in that section?

A. There was only one instructor to the section.

Q. I mean at any time?

A. An instructor that had that section?

Q. When you were in the section.

A. Well, I wouldn't say that any other instructor had that section, I wouldn't remember whether or not any other instructor had that section when I worked in that one particular place or not.

Q. I believe you stated that you worked in 1928 at the plant and then left in 1929?

A. To the best of my memory, yes. I know I left there in 1929.

Q. Then when did you come back?

A. In, I believe it was, in September; I am not certain about the month, but I know it was 1938—I mean 1935.

Q. 1935? A. 1935.

Q. Well now, will you state what section you worked in when you first came back?

[fol. 6245] A. In 1935?

Q. Yes.

A. I went to work in the—well, it was that same section, I presume it was the same number, 415, but it was in that one particular place in the building, on the eighth floor, I remember that.

Q. Then how long did you remain in 415?

A. Well, it seems to me that it was quite a little while, because at that time I was embroidering, and I know I stayed in that section as long as—during rush season, on the embroidery machine, I couldn't say exactly how long it was, I don't remember.

Q. Do you ever remember working in any other section than 415?

A. Oh, I have worked in any number of different sections than 415. I was changed from one section to the other and from one floor to the other, all over the place.

Q. Has 415 always been on the eighth floor?

A. Well, I can't say definitely about that, because they change those sections around. 415 was a special section.

Q. Did you ever work in 415 on any other floor than the eighth floor?

A. Well, I don't remember about that, whether I did or not.

Q. Do you recall the names of any girls that were working in 415 in the months of March and April, 1937?

[fol. 6246] A. In 1937, in March and April—as I remember I was running an embroidery machine at that time. I am not absolutely certain, but I feel sure that there were Elsie Holloway and Ann Perry, Mabel Spielbusch—Ann Perry and Mable Spielbusch were embroidery operators—those girls that I remember were embroidery operators that were working right there with me. Maybe they were, but I wouldn't be positive about that.

Q. And you don't recall any other instructor for 415 than Etta Dorsey?

A. I wouldn't know whether there was, because they might have had other instructors for that section at different times.

Q. I mean when you worked in the section.

A. I don't recall. I remember working in 415 for Etta Dorsey; I don't know whether I worked for anybody else in that same section or not, I don't remember.

Q. What other instructors were in the section in which you worked, in any other sections?

A. In any other sections, any other instructors that I worked for?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, let's see. I worked for Carrie Abrams and Mrs. Niemeyer, Kathryn Rosen, Grace Davis, and there were probably others, but those are the ones I remember working for in other sections.

Q. Now, you testified yesterday that you went over to [fol. 6247] Sylvia Hull's section on or about April 23, 1937. Is that correct?

A. Yes, I walked over to the section.

Q. And I believe you testified that you saw Sylvia taken out?

A. Yes, I seen that—I was back in the section when I saw that.

Q. What did they do, drag her out?

A. No, I wouldn't say they drug her out.

Q. What do you mean, by "taking her out"?

A. Well, there was a bunch of girls around her. I don't mean they picked her up bodily and carried her out, or dragged her out through the doors, or anything of the kind.

Q. Did they push her out?

A. I don't know that they pushed her out; I just saw a bunch of girls around her.

Q. What was Sylvia doing?

A. She was walking on her own two feet, she was going out under her own power, as far as that goes, but there was a bunch around her. I don't mean to say they were, you know, taking her out by any force.

Q. You don't mean then that they were forcing her out?

A. I mean they didn't have ahold of her, dragging her out, or anything like that; there was a bunch of girls around her, and she was walking.

[fol. 6248] Q. Did you hear girls say they weren't going to work so long as she stayed there? A. Yes, I did.

Q. I believe you stated this morning that the instructor sent you home. Now, when the instructor sent you home, had you been guilty of misconduct?

A. Not that I know of; I never was told that, anyway.

Q. Why did she send you home?

A. For the lack of work.

Q. Isn't it a fact that when work ran out, that the instructor would receive orders to notify the girls there was a lack of work?

A. I don't know what kind of instructions the instructors got. I don't know anything about that.

Q. You wouldn't know whether she had received instructions from Mr. Baty to notify you to go home?

A. I don't know what they told her.

Q. I believe you stated that instructors—or an instructor had transferred you at some time. Did you say that this morning?

A. No, I don't mean that the instructor had transferred me. The instructor had sent me down to Mrs. Hyde. Mrs. Hyde would give me the transfer and tell me what section to go to or Kathleen, or whoever happened to be in Mrs. Hyde's office.

Q. That is a girl who worked there then?

[fol. 6249] A. I didn't know her last name, I just knew her first name.

Q. Would that occur when there was a lack of work?

A. When I would be transferred to other sections?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Are you a married woman?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. What is your husband's full name?

A. Robert Copenhaver.

Q. What is his occupation?

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. I object to that as immaterial.

* * * * * *

Mr. Lane: I think it is proper cross-examination to show this witness' relation to any situation that affects her testimony here.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so, as far as her [fol. 6251] family relationship is concerned.

Mr. Lane: I intend to ask her whether her husband is a member of any union and—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material, and I now so rule.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6252] Q. Now, without asking you specifically what your age is,—

A. I don't mind telling you.

Q. At any rate, you are past 30, aren't you?
A. Yes. I was 31 in June.
Q. And you know the nature of an oath, don't you?
A. I certainly do. I think I do.
Q. And you know the obligation entailed when you take an oath, don't you? A. I think I do.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6253] Mr. Lane: Now, when you made this affidavit referred to on page 6077 you thought you understood what that affidavit meant, didn't you?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6254] By Mr. Lane:
Q. Did you think you understood what that statement was that you were signing?
A. I thought I did.
Q. As a matter of fact, when you sign your name, you think you understand what you are signing your name to, don't you?

* * * * * *

A. I wouldn't say I thoroughly understood everything I signed down at Donnelly's.

[fol. 6255] By Mr. Lane:
Q. Don't you think at the time you sign your name to something you understand what you are signing?
A. I think I should. I know now that I should. But at that time we signed so many things down there, you would sign them hurriedly and you didn't have time to stop and read those things thoroughly and absorb them like you should.
Q. So you did sign things down there that you didn't understand?
A. Yes. There is no doubt in my mind that I signed things down there that I didn't understand as thoroughly as I should have understood them.
Q. But at the time you signed this you thought you understood it?
A. I signed my name and didn't think much about it.
Q. Did you know there was a hearing going on before the National Labor Relations Board in 1939?
A. Pertaining to the Donnelly case?

Q. Yes.

A. I knew they were having hearings and things of that kind, yes.

Q. Wasn't that matter discussed at the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. I believe it was.

Q. You knew witnesses were being produced and testifying under oath?

[fol. 6256] A. I knew of two witnesses from my section that were brought to some sort of a trial down here.

Q. When was the first time you ever talked with anybody about this affidavit that was shown you this morning, this intervener's exhibit No. 20?

A. When? You mean, just recently?

Q. When was any time, other than the time you signed it? A. Other than when I signed it?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know when the first time was.

Q. Well, you have talked with somebody about it before you took the witness stand, haven't you? A. Yes.

Q. Who was that? A. Miss Weyand.

Q. When did you talk with her about it?

A. Last night.

Q. Any time prior to last night?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. When did you talk with Miss Weyand about your testimony in this case prior to last night?

A. Let's see. I believe it was in July.

Q. Now, are those the only two times you have talked with Miss Weyand?

A. No. I talked with her one other time, about a week ago.

[fol. 6257] Q. And you can't remember now whether on any occasion other than last night she showed you this affidavit, which is intervener's exhibit No. 20?

A. No, I don't remember whether she did or whether she didn't.

Q. She may have done so, so far as your memory—

A. I don't remember whether she did or didn't. I wouldn't say she did or she didn't.

Q. Have you talked with anyone else connected with the National Labor Relations Board other than Miss Weyand? A. In regard to that?

Q. About your testimony in this case?

A. Well, Miss Blue—the young lady over there (indicating)—

Miss Weyand: Miss Boyls.

A. (Continuing) Miss Boyls. She was there last night.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. I mean anyone at the National Labor Relations Board, represented by Miss Weyand—anyone else connected with her that you talked with?

A. No one other than Miss Boyls.

Q. When did you talk with her? A. Last night.

Q. You mentioned Miss Blue. When did you talk with Miss Blue?

A. I was mistaken. I was calling Miss Boyls "Miss Blue."

Q. Did you ever talk with Miss Blue?

[fol. 6258] A. Yes.

Q. About your testimony in this case?

A. I don't know as it was about my testimony. Just talking—

Q. Where was that conversation?

A. Just here and there in the hall when we would happen to meet.

Q. You have talked with her only during your attendance at this hearing?

A. Yes. I never saw her before.

Q. You never saw her before? A. No.

Q. And the first person you talked with connected with the National Labor Relations Board was Miss Weyand?

A. Yes.

Q. And she showed you this affidavit? A. Yes.

Q. And you had given some thought about the answers you were going to make when you were confronted with it this morning?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as immaterial, not tending to prove or disprove any issue in the case, and certainly not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is improper. She may tell us if she has given any thought to it.

[fol. 6259] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Will you answer the question, please? Have you given any thought to what you were going to answer when you were confronted with this affidavit?

A. Yes, I thought about what questions might be asked me and what answers I would make, naturally.

Q. You were told by Miss Weyand that you would likely be confronted with that affidavit this morning, weren't you?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment.

Has he a right to pry into the preparation Miss Weyand makes of her case in talking to the witnesses?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, under the ruling I made in answer to Mr. Hogsett I would say no, but— She may proceed.

The Witness: May I have the question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't remember whether she told me that that would be shown me this morning or not.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. At any rate, you thought it might, didn't you?

A. Well, I would expect to be shown most anything that might pertain to anything I had my name on.

Q. And you did think in your own mind about what answer you would give when that affidavit was shown to [fol. 6260] you, didn't you?

A. I thought about different things that might be asked me, yes.

Q. I show Board's exhibit No. 1-RRRR, which begins on page 3471 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to read that.

Trial Examiner Batten: What page is that, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: 3471.

(Thereupon the exhibit referred to in the last question was read by the witness.)

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Now, I call your attention to the signature appearing on the fourth page of signatures, which is page 3477 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and particularly to the last signature in the first column on that page, and ask you to state whether that is your signature?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Did you in your conversation with Miss Weyand about this case have this offer of proof called to your attention? A. You mean, did I see that?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I saw that.

Q. You signed this offer of proof, didn't you, in 1939?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you read it before you signed it?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

[fol. 6261] Q. Did you have it read to you before you signed it? A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember this portion of it:

"The undersigned, all being employees of the Donnelly Garment Company or Donnelly Garment Sales Company below the rank of anyone with authority to employ or discharge or reprimand employees, and all being members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, hereby state that they have read this statement in full, signed it of their own free will and choice, and if present in Court they would testify under oath to the following facts:"

Did you read that statement or hear it read to you before you signed this?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. By saying you don't remember, you don't mean to say it wasn't read to you, do you?

A. I don't mean to say I did or didn't read it, or somebody did or didn't read it to me. I don't remember whether it was read to me or whether I read it or whether I didn't.

Q. Is there anything in this offer of proof that you now think was untrue at the time you signed it?

I will hand it back to you and you can go through it, and I will ask you to indicate anything in there, in that offer of proof, that you now think is untrue.

[fol. 6262] Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, now or—

Mr. Lane: That she now thinks was untrue at the time she signed it.

A. I would like to ask a question about this here (indicating). When they would have these signed, they would tell us that we were to sign—that they had something for us to sign—

Mr. Langsdale: Will you speak a little louder, please?

A. (Continuing) They would tell us they had something for us to sign. Of course, naturally, it was read to you, or you were supposed to read it yourself.

But right here (indicating) it says, " . . . Donnelly Garment Workers hereby state they have read this statement in full, signed it of their own free will and choice . . ." I suppose that would be your choice, if they put it before you to sign. Would that be considered your choice?

Mr. Lane: Now, I am asking the witness to answer my question. I would like the reporter to read the question to her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Is there anything in this offer of proof that you now think was untrue at the time you signed it?

I will hand it back to you and you can go through it, [fol. 6263] and I will ask you to indicate anything in there, in that offer of proof, that you now think is untrue.")

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

Mr. Lane: And I have no objection to her making any explanation of anything she wants to explain.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer the question.

A. Well, the point that I meant to bring out there was, did the employees choose to bring this up and have this signed? I was notified. I didn't know they had it until I got down there. That's what I mean.

Mr. Lane: You go ahead and pick out anything in there you think is false.

A. I don't know as it was my choice. I was told that it was down there to be signed and I knew I was expected to sign it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Go on through it and tell us whether or not any of those items mentioned in there were true or—was that it—or untrue?

Miss Weyand: The witness was pointing out one item and stating whether it was her choice.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking her to proceed with it—

Miss Weyand: I wish she would finish with that one.

Mr. Lane: Let me ask the specific question.

[fol. 6264] By Mr. Lane:

Q. When you read in there, ". . . hereby state that they have read this statement in full, signed it of their own free will and choice, and if present in Court they would testify under oath to the following facts:" did you have the impression that you were not acting on your own choice?

A. At the time I signed this?

Q. Yes.

A. I'm not sure I even read this through.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. I'm not sure that I even knew what there was in it when I signed it.

Q. Go ahead and see if there is anything in there you think was untrue at the time you signed it.

A. Here (indicating) is something else:

"To the best of their knowledge and belief, the meeting of March 18, 1937, was called by employees." Of course, it was called by employees, but I never knew a meeting to be called actually by the girls that work in the factory. That's my point. The meetings were called by Rose Todd, or someone like that—they were not factory girls, the girls that were really the union members, because that was—the biggest part of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were factory girls, the girls that worked right in the factory. Those meetings were called— As I remember, Rose [fol. 6265] Todd called the first few.

Now, maybe that wouldn't prove that this was untrue, but that's my version of it.

This part right here (indicating) I don't think covers me:

"As a result of this information the attitude of the mind of the undersigned parties and of the employees of the company in general was one of apprehension, uneasiness, and fear that the employees of the Donnelly companies would be shortly subject to similar violence and intimidation which they understood and believed was being carried on in connection with the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri strikes."

I didn't have any fear. I had no fear of them coming down there and bothering me, as I said before.

Q. Now, your answer applies only to you?

A. To me. I can't speak for anyone only myself.

Q. Did you read that in this statement before you signed it?

A. As I said, I don't remember whether I read this or not.

Q. You may have read it?

A. I don't know whether I did or not. I won't say I did and I won't say I didn't.

Here (indicating) it says that those things that happened at these other places was what influenced a belief as [fol. 6266] to possible and probable violence or intimidation by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that that was one of the reasons which caused the undersigned to approve and to take a part in the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. That didn't apply to me.

Q. That was not one of the reasons you thought caused the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I mean, in signing this.

Q. I say, you now say the intimidation and things recited here did not apply to you, as far as the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was concerned?

A. No. I had no fear of the outside unions intimidating me.

Q. Do you have any recollection of having read that at the time you signed that?

A. I don't remember whether I read this or not.

Q. So far as your memory now serves, you may have read this when you signed it?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition.

A. I won't commit myself to say whether I did or did not read this, because I don't know.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you have it read to you?

A. I don't know.

Q. Your memory on that is the same, you may have read that—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition. It has [fol. 6267] been gone over and over and over again.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I understand it, she says she doesn't remember whether—

Mr. Lane: I am inquiring now as to a specific portion of this, and it isn't repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is repetitious, where it has been asked several times, but you may ask the question.

Mr. Lane: She doesn't say she has no recollection about the document. She says she doesn't know whether she read all of it or any portion.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Is there a question pending, Miss Reporter?

Miss Weyand: She hasn't finished, has she?

Mr. Lane: I think I asked a question she hasn't yet answered.

Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me there is a question that the witness was asked and tried to answer.

The question, as I recall it, is; is there, whether you read it or not, anything in that document that you say is untrue? Isn't that the question to the witness?

Mr. Lane: No.

The Witness: That is why I understood I was reading that.

Miss Weyand: And you have not completed it?

[fol. 6268] The Witness: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, complete your reading of the document.

(Witness complies.)

A. Well, I don't know how to express the last part of this, whether utterly this was true or untrue, but I still stick to the theory that I had the feeling that, according to the last part of this, that if I didn't belong to the union, I wouldn't have had a job. I still feel that way about it. I suppose if I had refused to sign any of these papers or pay my dues in the union, or such thing, I would have been without a job.

Mr. Lane: The question with respect to this instrument was, whether, having read it now, you now say there was anything in that which you in 1939, at the time you signed it, regarded as being untrue?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

A. In 1939—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Witness.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question as repetition. She has gone through the document and answered that several things there were untrue in her opinion. It has been covered from one end to the other.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think she has answered.

[fol. 6269] By Mr. Lane:

Q. In 1939, at the time you signed it, did you then think there was anything in it that was untrue?

A. I couldn't say, because I don't know whether I read this or not.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you ever hear of a closed shop contract between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Company?

A. Yes, I have heard that mentioned.

Q. And don't you know that a closed shop agreement is an agreement by which the employees who are eligible for that union must belong to the union which has the closed shop agreement?

A. I don't know as I ever had it explained to me.

Q. Did you hear it discussed in the meeting of May 11, 1937?

A. Closed shop agreement?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you hear it discussed by the members of the executive committee and by Rose Todd that they contemplated asking the Donnelly Garment Company for a closed shop contract?

A. I don't remember.

Q. And wasn't it explained in that meeting, if they got a closed shop contract, everybody in the company eligible [fol. 6270] for membership in the union would have to belong to the union?

A. That's the way I got it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6274] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Copenhaver, were you subpoenaed to come to this hearing?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6275] A. Well, I don't know. I believe I was. I may be wrong, but I believe I was.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, do you have—

A. (Interrupting) I have a paper that was given me.

Q. Do you have it with you? A. Yes, I do.

Q. May I have it, please? When was that served on you?

* * * * * *

A. Day before yesterday.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. On April 27, 1937, at the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, what time did you go to that meeting?

[fol. 6276] A. In the afternoon.

Q. What time in the afternoon?

A. I don't know the exact time, but I know it was along in the middle of the afternoon.

Q. How many hours did you work during the week on which April 27 fell?

A. Well, I don't remember that.

Q. And you can't fix the time you went to that meeting?

A. Only that it was along in the afternoon; I would say around probably between 2 and 3, 2 or 3:30, something like that.

Q. Did you go with the other girls in your section?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go in your uniform, or did you change?

A. No, I went in my uniform.

Q. And did you stay during the entire meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you do after the meeting?

A. I don't remember whether I went back upstairs or whether I went directly—I will take that back; I remember I went back upstairs.

Q. Did you resume your work?

A. Well, I don't remember whether or not I worked any more, but I remember going back upstairs.

Q. You mean back up to the eighth floor?

[fol. 6277] A. Yes.

Q. Was your locker on the eighth floor? A. No.

Q. Where was your locker?

A. I don't remember whether it was on the second or third floor; it was where all the rest of the lockers were.

Q. You went back to the eighth floor?

A. I went back to the eighth floor, I am sure of that.

Q. But you don't know whether you worked any, yourself?

A. I don't remember whether I went back to work any more or not.

Q. What was your purpose in going back to the eighth floor?

A. I don't remember whether I went back to do more work or went back to put my work away, or left something back up there that took me up there, but I don't remember whether I went back to work or not.

Q. When you went down to the meeting that day, did you punch your time clock, your time card?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember whether you punched your time clock before you went to the meeting or afterwards?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember how many hours you worked that day? A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know what time quitting time was for the [fol. 6278] section that day?

A. I know what quitting time should have been.

Q. Well, on that day, on April 27, 1937?

A. Our regular working hours was that I would have quit work, say, at 4 o'clock, I believe.

Q. Did you quit work at 4 o'clock every day that week?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you quit that day at 4 o'clock?

A. I don't remember because I don't remember whether I went back up and went to work or not.

Q. Mrs. Copenhaver, don't you know that in any shop that has a closed shop agreement, the employees eligible to that union are required to belong to that union in order to keep their employment?

A. Really, I know nothing about unions.

Q. Well, do you know that particular matter? Do you know in a shop where a closed shop contract exists, those employees are required to belong to that union in order to keep their employment?

A. I know that now. I didn't say that I knew it then.

Q. Well, you know it now?

A. Yes, you have told me that.

Q. Well, I am asking you if you know.

A. Well, I know after you have told me.

Q. Were you paid for the time spent at the meeting on [fol. 6279] April 27, 1937, in which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. I never noticed any deductions from my pay.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear the answer.

A. I never noticed any deductions from my pay.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. You didn't notice any deductions? A. No.

Q. Well, you were a time worker, weren't you?

A. Well, I worked piece work.

Q. I mean to say piece work.

A. Yes, I done piece work.

Mr. Lane: I think that's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: No questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's all. Oh, that subpoena, young lady, you'd better have it or you won't possibly be able to collect your money.

What is it you want? You want to know how Miss Weyand got it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I issued that at her request, a written request.

That is all, young lady.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I want to ask her one question.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6280] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You stated already that the violence and the newspaper articles and talk of violence had nothing whatever to do with your joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know any person who did join on that account? A. Because of the—

Q. (Interrupting) Violence and the newspaper articles and everything of that sort? A. No, I don't.

Mr. Lane: That is objected to for the reason she said that was one of the reasons why it was formed.

Mr. Langsdale: Oh, no, she didn't.

Mr. Lane: And it is an attempt to rehabilitate the witness.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6281] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. (Continuing) Because of the violence and newspaper articles shown you, or any fear or threats of violence?

A. You mean, is that why I joined?

Q. No. A. Why anyone else joined?

Q. Do you know of anyone else who joined on that account?

A. Because they were afraid of that violence?

Q. Yes, do you know of anybody, any single human being?

A. No, I don't know of anybody that joined because of that.

Q. And do you know why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, did anyone ever tell you?

A. Well, I don't know whether they told me or not; I had my conclusion of why I myself—my opinion—

Q. (Interrupting) I know, but did anyone ever tell you that? A. I don't know as anyone did.

Q. Did anyone connected with the management tell you why they were forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. To keep other unions out.

Mr. Lane: Just a moment. I move to strike the answer [fol. 6282] out.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

Mr. Lane (Continuing) Because it was made before I had a chance to object. The question implies something that is not in evidence as far as this witness is concerned. The question was: Did anyone ever tell you why the management was forming that union.

Mr. Langsdale: No, that was not the question.

Mr. Lane: Will you read the question, please?

Mr. Langsdale: Please read the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't recall it that way.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did anyone connected with the management tell you why they were forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?")

Mr. Lane: I object to that as—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Let me amend that to read in this way:

Mr. Langsdale: Did anyone connected with the management of the Donnelly Garment Company ever tell you why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was being formed?

Mr. Stottle: The respondent objects to that unless it is identified who it was that was connected with the management which he refers to, because that leaves open as to her interpretation of who was connected with the management.

Mr. Langsdale: Her answer can be "yes" or "no" on that.

[fol. 6283] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think we have had quite a few questions about whether anyone connected with the management did this or did that.

Do you recall the question, Miss Witness?

A. Well, as I understand the question is, was the people that told us—

Mr. Langsdale: No. Read the question, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Please read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did anyone connected with the management of the Donnelly Garment Company ever tell you why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was being formed?")

Mr. Langsdale: You may answer that "yes" or "no".

Trial Examiner Batten: But you don't have to.

A. What I want to know is, do they consider Rose Todd as being connected with the management?

Mr. Lane: That is the purpose of the objection. Obviously she doesn't know.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, it was just as obvious with the questions asked many others, except perhaps the witnesses didn't ask the question this witness did, as to who is management.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Will you answer that "yes" or "no"?

A. If Rose Todd—

Q. (Interrupting) No, just answer it "yes" or "no".

[fol. 6284] Trial Examiner Batten: She doesn't have to answer it "yes" or "no".

Mr. Langsdale: I know she doesn't, but I wondered if she could.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is for the witness to determine; but she certainly doesn't have to.

Now, may we have the question read again?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did anyone connected with the management of the Donnelly Garment Company ever tell you why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was being formed?")

Mr. Reed: Now, let the witness say.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if there aren't any more interruptions, so we don't have to have it read again.

Now, will you answer the question, Miss Witness?

A. I don't know how to word it.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, let me reframe it. Did anyone ever tell you why the Donnelly Garment Union was being formed?

A. Rose Todd did.

Mr. Reed: Just a minute. We object to that as incompetent and immaterial, and in no wise binding upon the respondent in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer, whether anyone ever told her it was being organized.

[fol. 6285] Mr. Langsdale: She has answered it.

Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"A. Rose Todd did.")

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did Rose Todd tell you?

A. Well, I can't remember in words, but it was—the way I grasped it, the expression was that if we had a union of our own, we wouldn't be bothered with an outside union.

Q. Now, when you answered Mr. Ingraham's question this morning, which question was to the effect, was the violence at the plants where the strikes were going on, the reason for forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, your answer was, "I guess that was the cause." Did you know any more about the cause than you have stated here in answer to my questions?

A. Not other than I thought it was organized to keep the other unions out. I guess that probably made the situation—well, complicated, when all that other trouble started up there, that was just some more to bring into it, but I felt it was being organized to keep the other unions out, because it was organized at the time all that was going on.

Q. Do you remember where you signed this document that has been marked Board's exhibit 1-RRRR?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6286] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you remember where you signed that document, that is, the one you were shown, to which a lot of names were signed?

A. I don't know as I remember exactly where I was when I signed that one.

Q. You said something about a half a dozen of you together being called somewhere and signing it together.

A. That was the one we swore to?

Q. That was the one you swore to.

A. Yes, where there was a group of five or six of us together.

Q. I see. Now, do you have any recollection at all as to where you signed this Board's 1-RRRR?

A. You mean the one where we swore to it?

Q. No, I mean the other one.

A. I don't remember a whole lot about that one.

Q. Was it somewhere in the plant?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6287] A. (Interrupting) It was on the premises.

Trial Examiner Batten: She said it was on the premises.

A. It was on the premises. I never signed one that was away from the building. Every one I ever signed was right there in the building, some place in the building.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Were you ever shown any document down there to sign that you didn't sign?

A. No.

Q. You signed them all?

A. Every one that I was presented with.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: So the record will be clear, you testified this morning that the violence at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants caused the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment,—

A. (Interrupting) No, I didn't.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What did you testify to?

A. I said I guessed it did. I didn't know that it did, I had no proof that it did.

Q. Now, after Mr. Langsdale's leading and suggestive questions, do you want to change your guess?

[fol. 6288] A. No, I do not.

Q. Are you standing on your answer to that question?

A. I am standing on my answer that I am guessing.

Mr. Ingraham: All right, she is standing on her answer, Mr. Langsdale.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, on April 27, that is the date of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, had you attended any other meetings of employees prior to that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. There at the plant.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I don't recall when they were.

Miss Weyand: I object to this as not proper recross.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think it is either.

Mr. Ingraham: I wanted the witness to clarify her testimony with respect to meetings she attended. She doesn't recall dates and I think I have a right to ask the witness if, instead of: "Did you attend a meeting in March or April," to ask her if she attended meetings prior to that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, as a practical matter, I think perhaps you have, Mr. Ingraham, because I remember Mr. Lane asked quite a bit about meetings, but that question illustrates the exceedingly difficult situation we find ourselves in, proceeding on the basis—unless I take [fol. 6289] out a 3-hour course—but if it is a matter of a few questions, go ahead, Mr. Ingraham.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall the time of any meeting prior to April 27?

A. You mean the date?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Do you recall going to any meeting in the year 1937 prior to that date?

A. Well, it seems as though we had some sort of meetings, I don't know when they were or what month they were held, or what years they were held in, I couldn't remember.

Q. All right. Tell me anything that occurred at any of those meetings, prior to the meeting of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Court please, this certainly doesn't clarify anything; this is a further effort to search her memory, and certainly it is not recross. He had an opportunity to do that on his first cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

A. I believe—now, I am not certain, but I believe there was a meeting held just a short time before.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Before the April 27 meeting?

A. The April 27 meeting.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

[fol. 6290] A. Well, I don't know as I can remember exactly what occurred, but it seems to me like we had a meeting of some description just before that.

Q. Do you recall anything that occurred at any meeting that you say you went to, prior to the meeting of April 27?

A. That was prior to the meeting where the union was organized, and we signed the cards?

Q. That is correct.

A. Well there is one meeting we had, I don't know when it was, that Mrs. Reed spoke, I remember going to a meeting where she spoke.

Q. You were at that meeting?

A. I was at that meeting.

Q. Now, when did that meeting occur?

A. I don't remember when.

Q. What floor was it held on?

A. Well, I wouldn't be certain about that either.

Q. Do you know anything that took place at the meeting?

A. No; I just remember of Mrs. Reed speaking at a meeting one time.

Q. Are you sure this was in 1937?

A. Yes, I am sure that Mrs. Reed spoke in a meeting in 1937.

Q. Did you ever hear Mrs. Reed speak at more than one meeting?

A. I don't remember about that, I can't say definitely whether I did or not.

[fol. 6291] Q. Now, were you in Etta Dorsey's section at that time, at the time that meeting was held?

A. I believe I was, but I won't be positive on that, but I feel that I was.

Q. And did Etta Dorsey tell you to go to that meeting?

A. Well, I don't remember. I couldn't say definitely that Etta Dorsey did, because I may not have been in her section, but whoever the instructor was told me.

Q. But did Etta Dorsey tell you to go to the meeting of April 27?

A. If she was the instructor there she did. The instructor in that section told me, and I have already testified that I think it was Etta Dorsey, and if Etta Dorsey was the instructor there in that section at that time, she was the one that told me.

Q. So, you aren't sure now that Etta Dorsey was the instructor?

A. I could be wrong about that, but I feel sure that Etta Dorsey was the instructor at that time.

Q. So whoever the instructor was in your section told you personally to go to the meeting?

A. Well, I wouldn't say personally. They usually told a group of girls at a time, they would just walk up and—

Q. (Interrupting) Who was in the group of girls—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Mr. Ingraham, [fol. 6292] I don't think this is recross at all.

Mr. Langsdale: It is not recross.

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought you wanted to explain something here. It seems to me you are going into matters that under no classification could be considered as anything that was brought up since you finished with this witness.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, Miss Weyand didn't re-examine.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, she didn't but because she didn't re-examine the witness doesn't give you the privilege of continuing on.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I didn't know that there was any strict rule to rebuttal or redirect, if applied—

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there isn't any strict rule, but I think I said yesterday, with the first witness, that I thought the witness was being passed around too freely.

Naturally, when you take turns, I expect you to complete with everything up to that point.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I take it you are ruling that my questions aren't proper recross.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think they are.

Mr. Ingraham: I mean that you are ruling that way.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, I don't think they are. Do you?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, I do; yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think they are, [fol. 6293] and I'll rule that they are not, at least the last question.

Mr. Ingraham: That's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you have any further questions I am not ruling on those.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I kind of thought someone did examine the witness further about these meetings.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you ask this witness as many as you have.

Mr. Ingraham: You have stated that you went to the meeting of April 27, I believe? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what time was that meeting held?

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to as not proper re-cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

A. In the afternoon.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What time in the afternoon?

A. I couldn't be positive about that, I don't remember the time.

Q. Was it between 2 and 3?

A. I would say between 2 and 3 to 3:30; that is just an estimate of mine.

Q. Now, did you go to the meeting with the other girls in your section? A. Yes.

[fol. 6294] Q. Do you recall how many hours you were working during that time? A. No.

Q. Well, what was your usual time of quitting work?

A. As I remember, 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you have plenty of work at that time?

A. Well, I don't remember about that, how plentiful the work was.

Q. Now, how long did the meeting last?

A. I don't know, I don't remember how long it lasted.

Q. Would you say an hour?

A. Well, I just judge an hour, I would say an hour. I don't know how long it lasted, I don't know that it lasted an hour, or 2 hours, or an hour and a half, or half an hour, but I imagine it lasted at least an hour.

Q. Then, you say, you went back up to your section after the meeting?

Miss Weyand: I object to this as entirely repetitious and not proper recross.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. What was the question?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you return to your section after the meeting?

A. I went back upstairs, yes.

Q. Did you go with the girls in your section?

[fol. 6295] A. Girls—I don't know whether they were girls in my section or not, but there were other girls that went up with me.

Q. Did you continue work then, after you returned?

A. I don't remember whether I went back to work or what my purpose was to go back up there, whether it was something I had forgotten, or something, or whether I went to put my work away, or I went back up there to go to work, or what took me back upstairs.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, the last two or three questions, do you think that is co-operating with me when I asked you and the intervener to not cover the same ground? They are identically the same questions.

Mr. Ingraham: The next question, I don't think, will be. Maybe that was.

Trial Examiner Batten: Perhaps it won't be.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. If you quit work ordinarily in the middle of the afternoon, did you then leave the plant?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. Well, if, say, work ran out, there wouldn't be any further work, then would you leave the plant?

A. If there wasn't any further work in my section I was sent to Ella Mae, and if Ella Mae didn't put me in another section to finish out the day, I went home.

Q. You went home?

[fol. 6296] A. If I wasn't placed someplace else in the plant, but I didn't just stay around there if I wasn't doing anything.

Q. If work ran out at 3 o'clock, say, in the afternoon, you would report to Ella Mae, and if there wasn't any work you would go home. Is that a fact?

A. If I ran out of work in my section, I was sent to Ella Mae, even if it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Is that what you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. And if she didn't place me in some other section, I was sent home.

Q. Now, on April 27, do you recall running out of work about 3 o'clock? A. No, I don't.

Q. Or shortly thereafter? A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recall there being a lack of work at that time, during that week, in your section?

A. I don't remember how much work we had, whether we were short on work or work was plentiful at that time. I don't remember about that.

Q. Now, do you say that you were paid for a full day's work on April 27, 1937?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I do not remember any deductions being taken from my pay.

[fol. 6297] Q. You don't recall not having any work the morning of April 27?

A. I stated before that I don't remember whether work was plentiful that day or at that time, or whether we were out of work. I know that I was working when I was called to the meeting, I do know that.

Q. And you also know that you were paid for the time you spent at the meeting?

A. I don't remember of any money being deducted from my check other than what I figured I would draw that week; I don't remember any money being deducted from my check.

Q. Do you recall what your check was that week?

A. No, I do not.

Q. If you worked less than 40 hours that week, would that indicate that you didn't work the full 8 hours a day?

A. If I worked less than 40 hours that week?

Q. Well, if your pay was less than your usual pay for 40 hours, would that indicate you didn't work the full 40 hours?

A. Well, if I had any time off, I knew how much time I had off, if I had been off any.

Q. Did you have any time off that week?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Would you say that you didn't quit work on Wednesday—I mean on the day of this meeting, around 3 o'clock?

A. I absolutely know I was working when I was called [fol. 6298] to that meeting, I do know that.

Q. Are you sure you went to the meeting?

A. Why, absolutely.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper recross examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I have indicated two or three times that I don't think it is; clearly it is not. But Mr. Ingraham may proceed.

A. Do you want me to tell you?

Trial Examiner Batten: He seems to think it is.

A. What happened at that meeting, do you want me to tell?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Yes.

A. On April 27, when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

Q. That is correct.

A. That was the meeting whereby we signed the cards joining the union.

Q. Did you do anything else?

A. At the meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Nothing other than sit and listen.

Q. Listen to what?

A. The discussion of the union.

Q. Who talked?

[fol. 6299] A. Mr. Tyler, Miss Todd, I remember those two very distinctly.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed talk?

A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves?

A. Not that I remember of. I remember very distinctly of Mr. Tyler and Miss Todd talking, but I couldn't be positive of anybody else that talked.

Q. And you don't recall how long that meeting lasted?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, do you recall anything that either Mr. Tyler or Miss Todd said?

A. I remember when the cards were passed out that Miss Todd told them to pass the cards out and not to take them up until she told them to, to see that everybody had a card, and not to take the cards up until she told them to take them up, because I know we had the cards quite a little while during the meeting there; at the time the meeting was going on, we had the cards in our possession and they weren't taken up until the last part of the meeting.

Q. Did some of the people sign the cards the next day?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did Miss Todd say anything about that, that they could take the cards, that they didn't have to sign there?

A. Well, I was under the impression that everybody [fol. 6300] that was in there was to sign their cards and hand them back.

Q. And she didn't say they could keep them overnight?

A. Not that I ever remember her saying that, no.

Q. Did anybody outside of Rose Todd ever discuss with you or in your presence why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. No. The only time I heard Rose Todd say that was at a meeting, that it was—

Q. (Interrupting) which meeting?

A. I don't remember which meeting, particularly, that it was. I can't remember what happened at all the meetings we had.

Q. But nobody outside of Rose Todd, according to your recollection, ever discussed why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Now, this statement that you have referred to, of Rose Todd's that was made at a union meeting?

A. What statement was that?

Q. As to why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. As I remember it, that statement was made at a meeting.

Q. And that was not made to you personally?

A. Oh, no.

[fol. 6301] Q. You have been sitting in the courtroom while the Board's witnesses have testified, have you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You have heard their testimony?

A. I heard Mrs. Dorsey's and Mrs. Skeens'.

Q. When you worked for Mrs. Dorsey did she discriminate against you in giving you work?

A. No. Mrs. Dorsey was one of the nicest instructors I ever worked for.

Q. Did you understand that the work was planned in the office upstairs?

A. I had the understanding that the work was planned. I didn't know where it was planned, whether upstairs, or where.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, do you think this is the subject of recross-examination?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it may not be strictly recross-examination, but I think I have a right to ask the witness briefly about that subject.

Trial Examiner Batten: Why?

Mr. Ingraham: It wasn't asked on direct, but I notice in my notes that she testified about work being given out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, you mean you overlooked it; is that right?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, I did.

Mr. Langsdale: May I suggest that if he is stalling for [fol. 6302] some message of Mrs. Hyde's, we will keep her here and you can recall her.

Mr. Ingraham: I am not stalling. I have a note here that she testified about dividing work.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's proceed.

How much more do you have that you have overlooked, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten. Well, let's proceed.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You understand that the work was planned in the office?

A. I didn't understand it was planned in the office. I was under the impression that it was planned. A company as large as that would have to plan its work. I didn't know where it was planned, whether in the office, or where it was.

Q. Who brought the work to the sections?

A. It was brought down to the floors and they had bundle boys that brought the work from section to section in baskets.

Q. And if you were an embroidery operator, you would be given embroidery work?

A. If I was doing embroidery work, I was given embroidery work.

Q. And other embroidery operators would be given that kind of work, too?

A. That was the only kind of work they could do on the [fol. 6303] embroidery machine, was embroidery work.

Q. Have you ever gone up and gotten a bundle yourself? A. No.

Q. You have never done that?

A. No. We were not allowed to do that.

Q. You were not allowed to? A. No.

Q. Did you feel if Etta Dorsey didn't want to give you a bundle she didn't have to give you a bundle?

A. I felt that was entirely up to her. She had the privilege of giving the bundles to who she wanted to.

Q. And you couldn't do anything about that?

A. Oh, I don't know. If I had wanted to fuss about it, I could probably have fussed about it to different ones.

Q. Did you ever know of her doing anything like that?

A. You mean, not dividing the work up evenly?

Q. Yes.

A. She was always awfully fair with me.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of fact, that was her absolute instructions, to give the bundles to the people that were ready for the bundles?

A. I don't know a thing about her instructions.

Q. Did the bundles come down, if you know, with directions?

A. No. As I remember, all that I ever saw of the bundles, they came down with tickets but no directions written on the bundle.

[fol. 6304] Q. What were the tickets?

A. The price tickets, the number of the bundle, and the size, and the cut number.

Q. Now, if it was a bundle that was to be given to girls on the embroidery machine, would that be indicated?

A. Yes, it would be indicated that it was embroidery, either by number or with "Embroidery" written on there. I don't know if it had a number showing it pertained to the embroidery section or if it was written on there—I don't remember about that, but it was always designated what section it was to go to.

Q. And then Mrs. Dorsey would give you a bundle and the other embroidery operators bundles after they came to the section; is that correct?

A. She gave out the work when she was the instructor in my section.

Q. And you never knew of any time that she didn't give the work out fairly?

A. To me, Mrs. Dorsey was perfectly fair.

Q. And you don't know what her instructions were from the office?

A. I know nothing about her instructions.

Q. And you don't know what the bundle boys' instructions were, do you? A. No, I don't.

[fol. 6305] Q. Did you make your minimum during the last three months that you were at the plant?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. Do you have any recollection about that at all?

A. I don't remember whether I made my guarantee or not. I don't remember how much I made.

Q. Do you recall, as a matter of fact, that the company had to make up to you practically your guarantee during the last period you were there at work?

A. No, I don't recall that. They may have had to make up some to me, but I don't think they had to make it up every week.

Q. The last six weeks you were there?

A. I don't know what I drew the last six weeks. I don't even know whether I drew my guarantee the last six weeks.

Q. That is what I am asking you. You have no recollection of what the company had to make up to you because you didn't have your guarantee?

A. I don't remember about that. I don't remember whether I had my guarantee or not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6306] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Copenhaver, you testified in response to a question by Mr. Langsdale that you didn't know of anyone who joined the union because of the violence and the disturbances that were occurring at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants; is that correct?

A. No one told me that that was why they were joining.

Q. You said you didn't know of any individual—

A. No individual told me that, no.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6307] Q. You testified that there was no other individual you could name who joined the union for that reason? A. No one told me that.

. . . . . .

Mr. Lane: All right. Do you know of anyone who was not influenced by that?

. . . . . .

A. I would rather not testify to anybody else's ideas in that case. I would rather just testify to my own.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Then, when you answered Mr. Langsdale that you didn't know of any individual who joined for that reason, your answer is, you had no information at all about it; is that correct?

A. No. What I mean is, nobody came to me and told me that—that that was why they were or why there were not joining and helping form the union.

[fol. 6308] Q. And nobody came to you and told you they were not influenced by that violence?

A. Nobody told me either way. That is why I say I would rather not testify to anybody else's ideas.

Q. But you have no personal knowledge about that at all?

A. I don't know whether anybody was influenced or was not influenced by that.

* * * * * * *

BESSIE WEILERT, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Bessie Weilert.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6309] By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you begin to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. One season before they moved to the Corrigan Building, when they were at the Coca-Cola Building.

Q. When was the next time you worked at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. In the spring of 1933 or 1934.

Q. How long did you continue to work at the Donnelly Garment Company at that time?

A. With the exception of about three short periods off, until March of this year.

Q. What was the longest of those periods off?

A. About fourteen months.

Q. When did those fourteen months off occur?

A. It was the last of 1940 and all—almost all of 1941.

Q. What was the next longest period off?

A. About three months.

Q. When was that off?

* * * * * * *

A. 1938, I believe.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company in March and April of 1937?

[fol. 6310] A. I was.

Q. What sections were you working in during those months?

A. 413, Lola Skeens' section.

Q. And that was on what floor? A. Eighth floor.

Q. Who was the thread girl in that section at that time?

A. Nellie Biggs.

Q. Did you attend the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. I did.

Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

A. My instructor told me.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Was it during working hours or after working hours?

A. During working hours.

Q. Did you time out before going to the meeting?

A. No.

Q. Do you have any specific way of remembering that?

A. I certainly do, because I thought I never would get out of the place, because we had to change our uniforms after we came back upstairs, and it was just a terrible mess.

Q. Did you get home late?

A. Not very.

Q. Did you get paid for the time you spent at that meeting?

[fol. 6311] A. I must have. I didn't time out until after I came back upstairs.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the answer, she "must have," as being speculation.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Miss Weyand: Had you ever seen Mr. Tyler before the meeting at which the union was formed? A. No.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, with respect to all of these questions, the intervener objects, with respect to this witness, as not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Had you ever heard of Mr. Tyler before that meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you sign a card at that meeting? A. I did.

Q. Why?

A. Well, I felt it was our duty, if we wanted to work there.

Q. Do you know if any effort was made to have everyone sign a card before he left the meeting?

[fol. 6312] A. There certainly was. Rose Todd had the cards given out by boys, and those cards were numbered, so many in the row, that was sitting in the row—they were numbered and everybody got one, and no more than one, and they were taken up likewise, and they were counted, because she told them to count the cards as they took them up.

Q. When you say "numbered" you don't mean there was a number written on—

Mr. Lane: I object to the leading question. I think it is improper for counsel to put words in a witness' mouth, when she has an answer she thinks is unfavorable.

Mr. Langsdale: I think it is a little late for Mr. Lane to be talking about leading questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed. I have stated I am not going to instruct counsel how to ask their questions. If they persist in asking the witness questions that do not give the witness an opportunity to answer but simply say Yes or No, I presume that whoever passes upon this will give such weight to these answers as is proper.

Mr. Reed: May the question be read, the last question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You hadn't finished your question.

Miss Weyand: (Continuing)—the card, do you?

[fol. 6313] Mr. Reed: Now, that is objectionable on other grounds. The witness has just given an answer—

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is objectionable. I think the question to the witness should be, "What do you mean by numbers on the card?"

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What do you mean by "numbered"? I believe that was your expression.

A. There were so many seated in the row, the numbers were counted out, and that number was your—

Q. By "numbered" you meant "counted"?

Mr. Reed: Now, that is an effort to supplement the answer of the witness by a statement of counsel. That isn't proper.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember how the cards were taken up?

A. The same as they were given out.

Q. And that was what? A. By boys.

Q. Do you know whether they counted them?

A. They did. They seen that everyone gave their cards back.

Q. Did Rose Todd say anything about that in your presence?

A. She said, "Now, does everyone have a card?" She kept mentioning that, "Does everyone have a card? Now, [fol. 6314] don't leave until you have all of the cards."

Q. Do you remember any other meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, plenty of them.

Q. Did you attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union quite regularly? A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember happening at any other meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, Rose Todd presided at the meetings and Marjorie Green took notes, and—

Mr. Lane: Excuse me. Are you referring now to the organization meeting or a subsequent meeting?

The Witness: Meetings.

Trial Examiner Batten: She is talking about union meetings.

A. (Continuing) And when there was a motion made of any kind, or anything came up, someone would say, "I make a motion—", and we would say, "Well,—", someone would say "Second the motion," and everyone said "Aye."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever see an instructor attend a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whether instructors continued to attend up to July 15, 1939?

[fol. 6315] A. They were still attending meetings when I quit for that year.

Q. Did you ever complain about instructors attending meetings? A. Many times.

Q. Why?

A. Because I didn't think the girls felt free to talk before their instructors, and I told Rose Todd many times I didn't think that should be permitted.

Q. What authority does an instructor exercise over the girls in her section?

A. Well, one exercised enough to keep me home three weeks from work, without it, apparently, being know in the office.

Q. Who was that?

A. Well, with due respect to the instructor now,—I think very much of her now—it was Grace Gliotta.

Q. Why did she send you home?

A. Well, I had just come over to the Corrigan Building from their other building at Twenty-sixth and McGee, and I guess she just didn't understand me and I didn't understand her—

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may I ask a preliminary question before making an objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you will let the witness answer before interrupting—

[fol. 6316] Mr. Lane: Excuse me.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer thus far, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Well, I had just come over to the Corrigan Building from their other building at Twenty-sixth and McGee, and I guess she just didn't understand me and I didn't understand her—")

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, complete your answer.

A. (Continuing) —and she told me she wanted to put a hemmer on my machine—there was no other vacant machine— and I was supposed to come back, I supposed, when the hemmer had finished her work. And about three weeks later I called the office and told Ella Mae Hyde I wanted some definite answer about when I was coming back, because I was going to make other arrangements, and she said, "Why aren't you working, Bessie?" And I told her. And she said, "You come in tomorrow morning." And I did.

Mr. Ingraham: I move to strike—

Mr. Lane: May I ask the preliminary question I wanted to ask before objecting?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. May I ask what year that was?

A. That would be 1934 or 1935. I worked a few months in the building on McGee, and then we transferred over to [fol. 6317] the Corrigan Building, and it was my first instructor when I first come over there.

Q. What year was it you moved from the Coca-Cola Building to the Corrigan Building?

A. I don't have reference to the Coca-Cola Building. They had a small factory on McGee Street, at about Twenty-sixth and McGee.

Q. And you say it was in 1934 or 1935 that this occurred? A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: The intervener moves to strike all of the testimony with reference to that incident for the reason that it is prior to the effective date of the Wagner Act and is in no way binding upon the intervener.

Miss Weyand: I shall ask the witness next whether the instructors' duties and authority in that repect changed, so far as she knew, at any time prior to July 15, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that hasn't anything to do with the objection.

Miss Weyand: I think it has, because—

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you start to make an objection, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether at any time prior to July 15, 1939, the instructors' authority was lessened so that an [fol. 6318] instructor could not do what Grace Gnotta did to you on that occasion? A. Never.

Q. By that you mean you do know about it, whether it was lessened, do you?

A. It wasn't lessened.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, now.

Let's have the question and the answer read.

You mean you don't understand your own question; is that what you mean, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I should have asked that the question be read. I don't think the answer was responsive to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will have the question and the answer read, and see.

Read the next to the last question and answer.

(Thereupon the next to the last question and answer were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether at any time prior to July 15, 1939, the instructors' authority was lessened so that an instructor could not do what Grace Gnotta did to you on that occasion?

"A. Never.")

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What do you mean by "Never"?

A. Because there was another incident happened to me [fol. 6319] in 1939, when I—

Q. No, I asked you, what did you mean when you answered "Never."?

A. Their authority was never lessened.

Miss Weyand: Will you tell us about the incident in 1939 you started to mention?

Mr. Lane: What time in 1939?

The Witness: I can't say. It was while I was on the committee as chairman.

Mr. Lane: Was it before or after July 15?

The Witness: I couldn't say.

Mr. Lane: I object for the reason, then, that the witness is unable to identify the time in 1939, so that we are able to determine whether it was before or after July 15.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if the time cannot be placed, it wouldn't be of any value, unless—

Miss Weyand: It is illustrative of the instructors' authority, and it did not change around that time. I think the incident is appropriate, regardless of whether it is placed as to—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I know your position, because you have stated that before. I think your position is the same as Mr. Hogsett stated the other day, but, of course, I do not agree with your position.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you ever a chairman in the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6320] Workers' Union?

A. I was.

Q. When were you elected as a chairman?

A. It was the last of April 1938.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Miss Weyand: How long did you continue to be a chairman?

A. Active, for about six months, I would say, and I refused to carry on after that time.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, do you remember when you were elected?

A. Well, it was the last of April, because the first of May we really was taking off.

Miss Weyand: What year was that?

A. 1939.

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me. I understood the witness to say "1938" before.

The Witness: 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand she was a committee chairman in 1939.

The Witness: Chairman on the committee.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you get her former answer, Miss Reporter?

Miss Weyand: She had said "1938," but she is saying [fol. 6321] now "1939" in correction.

Mr. Langsdale: I just wanted to be sure it was a correction.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How were you notified of meetings of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union chairmen?

A. Rose Todd called the section I worked in and my instructor delivered the message, or the basket boy, the bundle boy—or whatever it is—would bring a message through the section, an i. d. m., signed "Rose Todd"—one way or the other.

Q. Did your check from the company include pay for the time you spent at chairmen meetings?

A. It did. Rose Todd told us to turn in the time.

Q. How did you turn in your time?

A. I wrote it out on paper and signed my name and gave it to my instructor and she O. K.'d it.

Q. Do you know what rate of pay you were given for the time you spent at meetings?

A. According to my guarantee.

Q. Do you know whether girls are paid for the time they spend in making repairs?

A. Well, that was an argument, too, while I was on the committee.

Q. Will you explain the situation in that regard?

A. The girls, of course, on piecework, when they lose time, I considered that was plenty sufficient for repairs, [fol. 6322] and at one time there was a rumor through the factory that they were going to take out for repairs from girls who did not make their guarantee, and I objected to that. I said, "I don't believe they will do such a thing." And in just a very short while they did begin that practice.

Immediately I went to Rose Todd, the chairman of our union, and objected strenuously about that, and I asked her who authorized such a thing, and she said, "Mrs. Reed did." And I told her I would not believe that from her—unless Mrs. Reed told me herself, I wouldn't believe it from anyone. And she and I sort of argued about it, and she said, "Well, maybe we had better talk to Mrs. Reed about it, herself." And I said, "Go ahead."

Q. Did you ask Rose Todd to take the matter up?

A. I certainly did. I asked her if she, as chairman of the union, was going to stand for such a thing. And she said, maybe they had been a little hasty in that. And I said, "Rose, don't you think this has broken our contract?" And I said, "Whoever authorized that should put on our check stubs what that was taken out for." I said, "Why haven't they done so?" And she said, "Well, the girls would understand what it was taken out for." And I said, "Certainly, they would know— They know what the social security is taken out for, and the insurance, and the union dues, and all, but it's stamped on our check stubs."

[fol. 6323] Mr. Reed: I move to strike out the answer of the witness as being mere hearsay, incompetent and immaterial, and binding on no one.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. When was this, do you know?

A. Right at the Donnelly Company—

Q. No. What time? The year, or the month?

A. In 1939, when I was on the committee.

Q. Was it before July 15, 1939?

A. I certainly think it was. I wouldn't say for sure, but I believe it was.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Senator, your objection?

Mr. Reed: I move to strike out the answer of the witness because it relates to a conversation between her and Miss Todd, the president of the union, and is in no manner binding upon the respondent in this case, and is incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, there are two things about it I don't understand. First, how is it rebuttal?

Miss Weyand: I hadn't finished the line of questioning. I was leading up to a matter which pertained to an instructor's authority over the girls.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6324] Mr. Langsdale: I think it is rebuttal of their evidence that they continued to belong to the union of their own free will and accord, when the chairman of the union testifies to something that carries with it the inference that the union was functioning. The witnesses testified they not only joined of their own free will and accord, but they remained members—the union was functioning. Certainly, this witness, who was one of their committee chairmen—

Mr. Reed: The testimony that Mr. Langsdale refers to is that the person remained a member of the union of their [fol. 6325] own free will and accord. Now, he proposes to rebut that by showing that there was some dispute between one of these chairmen and the president of the union. That doesn't meet the question.

Miss Weyand: That is not what I propose to show by this witness—Senator Reed's statement isn't. I think, if you will allow her to continue telling her story, you can then determine whether or not it is proper rebuttal.

Mr. Lane: Under your ruling that no matters are to be inquired into that are subsequent to July 15, 1939,—and certainly the intervener has been so prohibited—I think it is incumbent upon the Board, to make anything admissible on that ground, to show that the incident refers to a date prior to that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understood the witness to say she was certain it was.

Mr. Lane: No. She said she wasn't certain.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, what did you say when I asked you if this was prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I said I'm almost certain. I'm not positive, but I'm almost certain.

Mr. Lane: In view of that doubt and inability of the witness to fix that time, I think it isn't admissible.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I will receive it on the same basis I have received other testimony where the wit- [fol. 6326] ness thought it was prior to July 15, 1939.

You may proceed.

Miss Weyand: Will the witness continue telling the story?

[fol. 6327] A. (Continuing) Miss Todd and I argued about this incident. And I told her I wouldn't believe that from anyone, unless Mrs. Reed told me herself she authorized such a thing. And she said, "Maybe you can talk to Mrs. Reed yourself about it." I said, "I certainly will." She said, "I will see if I can get you an appointment." And I said, "I will get one myself." And I did get an appointment with Mrs. Reed later, and Mrs. Reed admitted that she did that thing, and I apologized to Rose Todd for what I said to her.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you continue to attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No. Just a day or so after that I turned my contract back to Rose Todd and I told her I didn't want a thing to do with it.

Q. Did anyone tell you you were to continue going to meetings?

A. At one time. I told her I didn't want anything more to do with it. Then, when the next chairmen's meeting was called I refused to go down, and she called my section—Ada Vining was my instructor—and told Ada to ask me to come down, there was a chairmen's meeting on two—

By Mr. Reed:

Q. Did you hear that?

A. She called Ada Vining—

Q. I say, did you hear that?

[fol. 6328] Mr. Langsdale: I object to the interruption of the witness' testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think there should be the interruption of the witness' answer, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Well, I don't think the witness should be allowed to ramble along here and—

Trial Examiner Batten: I think if you will let the witness answer, and then make your objection—

Read the answer, please.

(Thereupon the answer referred to was read by the reporter, as follows:

"At one time. I told her I didn't want anything more to do with it. Then, when the next chairmen's meeting was called I refused to go down, and she called my section—Ada Vining was my instructor—and told Ada to ask me to come down, there was a chairmen's meeting on two—")

The Witness: I will correct that. It was on the first floor.

A. (Continuing) —and Ada delivered that same message to me three times, and at the last I said, "Well, I'll go down, but I'm taking no part in this affair."

So, when I went down to the meeting I said to Rose, "I don't know what you want me here for." And she told me to calm down—I was mad about it. And I said, "Well, I'm just going to sit here, I'm not going to take any part in [fol. 6329] these meetings." And she said, "Well, Bessie, aren't you pleased with some of the things that are being done?"

Mr. Reed: I object to that as not responsive to the question at all. I would like to have the question read.

Trial Examiner Batten: You proceed, and then we will have the question read.

A. (Continuing) And I said, "Yes, with what is being done, but there isn't nearly enough being done, Rose." And I said, "From now on don't expect me to do anything about it." I said, "I'm through." And I did—I really sat in from then on.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6330] Trial Examiner Batten: These incidents you have related between you and Rose Todd and the meeting you attended, to which you say your instructor told you to go, were those all matters that occurred before July 15, 1939?

A. I can't say. It was while I was on that committee, and that was in 1939. I haven't any specific dates in my mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, some date will have to be fixed on that incident.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, if the Examiner please, I think the date is fixed, of her conversation with Mrs. Reed, as occurring, according to her best judgment, prior to July 15.

[fol. 6331] Trial Examiner Batten: That is right. But I asked her about this other matter, this subsequent matter, where the instructor told her she was to go down to the meeting.

* * * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You have no recollection as to when in 1939 that was; is that right?

A. No, I don't.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That was shortly after the incident with Mrs. Reed, was it?

A. That was before I talked to Mrs. Reed.

Q. That Ada Vining notified you about the meeting?

A. Pardon me. It was after.

Q. How long after?

A. I just couldn't say that.

Q. Did you continue to go—

A. It was soon after, because that was what thoroughly disgusted me with it.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Miss Witness, do you have any idea whether it was before or after July 15, 1939?

The Witness: No, not offhand, without—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Miss Weyand, I don't think I can receive testimony on that basis; I haven't thus far, and I don't propose to do it now.

Miss Weyand: Do you know whether this incident that [fol. 6332] you started to tell about—

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me. Do I understand you are striking it out, then?

Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't yet. I have told Miss Weyand I do not propose to accept it, which means I am going to, unless some date is indicated with respect to it.

Miss Weyand: Do you know whether this incident I started to ask you about with regard to receiving difficult work because of complaints of girls occurred before July 15, 1939?

A. I feel rather sure that was in the spring of 1939, for this reason, that we was working on light dresses, and that was— I absolutely know that Rose Todd and Mary Copowycz framed two other operators and myself, because I caught her on it right after it was done.

Now, may I proceed to tell—

Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the answer as not responsive to any question, and for the further reason that it is a mere conclusion of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question please?

Mr. Reed: I would like to add, it is incompetent and immaterial and not redirect examination, and join in Mr. Lane's objection.

Miss Weyand: I will ask another preliminary question.

[fol. 6333] Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I want to hear the question. Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Do you know whether this incident I started to ask you about with regard to receiving difficult work because of complaints of girls occurred before July 15, 1939?")

Trial Examiner Batten: What was the answer about the date?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, that would be in the spring, because you were working on light dresses?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you through with this?

Miss Weyand: No. These things all tie into—

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, the incident I said I was going to strike the testimony about.

Miss Weyand: No. These are all a part of what I am getting to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Unless you determine a date of some kind, I will strike it.

Miss Weyand: You are not striking it now?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I am striking it, unless a date is set. If a date is set, it will be reinstated. I don't want to have to keep track of all of those things.

[fol. 6334] Miss Weyand: Will you state the incident with respect to Mary Copowycz and Rose Todd that you started to state?

A. Well, I had made numerous complaints about the joining section and the collar section, particularly. The system we had, it just seemed it didn't work out properly for the last two operations on that dress and it just held us up. And I took it up with Rose Todd several times. Our whole section even went to Mr. Baty's office on one occasion and tried to explain to him the reasons we couldn't make it. It didn't seem to be as much the price, of any of those things, as the way the work was coming to us, the way it was given out, and so on.

I suppose Rose Todd got tired of hearing about it, because evidently she was going to show me they could make their guarantee if they tried.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the part of the answer about "evidently she"—

Miss Weyand: I wish you would wait until she finishes her answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Finish your answer.

A. (Continuing) So Rose Todd come to the section and talked to Mary Copowycz, up by the bin. They would look toward my machine every once in a while, and I made a remark to these two operators—and I can present them, if necessary—that, "There must be something wrong." [fol. 6335] And I said, "We'll soon find out." And almost immediately Mary Copowycz began putting a very difficult operation—something none of us could make any money on—in my—we called it "horse"—it's where they put the bundles you work on.

And these other two operators, because they had always been friendly to me—almost the entire week we got that same work. Well, of course, we fell down. We knew when we had it we was going to.

And work was given to all of the other operators that would build their wages up for the week.

So after I thought they had had time to determine if they was going to make their guarantee that week, on my lunch period I went to the different machines in my section and inquired of these operators if they was making their guarantee that week.

Mr. Reed: I ask, Mr. Examiner, what is this in response to?

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will let the witness finish, Senator, I will try to determine.

Mr. Reed: But after the witness has plainly gone clear outside of the question, isn't it time to stop it, or do we have to hear it all, and then after it has been heard—

Trial Examiner Batten: You may go ahead.

A. (Continuing) One after another of those operators stated they were making it that week. Some of them [fol. 6336] stated it was the first time in weeks they had made it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean, on the same—

A. Not the same operation we were doing, but it was difficult to handle. Some of it was priced better than others.

And Mary said that they got better work, to see if they could make it that week, to prove to me that I was wrong.

After the time went in, Rose Todd called me to her desk on the seventh floor, and she had three figures on paper before her. I knew what was coming, in my mind. And she said, "Bessie, I want to show you that these girls can make their guarantee if they try." She said, "Now, all but three in your section made their guarantee this week." And before she said another word, I said, "Yes, and I can tell you who those three operators were. One of them was myself." And she said, "Yes, it was." And I said, "I think that largest figure there is mine." And she said, "Yes, Bessie, it is."

I said, "Rose, I saw you and Mary Copowyez talking over at the bin. I knew at the time you was up to something." And I said, "Do you know, I inquired of these operators during the week if they was making their guarantee?" I said, "They have told me, in particular, some of them, that they hadn't made it in weeks and they all made it last week." I said, "You're right; I knew they was making it."

Mr. Lane: Now, has the witness finished, so that I can make an objection?

[fol. 6337] Miss Weyand: I would like to have the record show Mary Copowycz was her instructor at that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, what has this to do with rebuttal or the issues in this case? Here is a difference of opinion between a girl who works in a section and her instructor and Rose Todd. What does this have to do with the issues in this case—

Mr. Hogsett: With anything?

Trial Examiner Batten: —or with rebuttal?

Miss Weyand: It shows the authority of the instructors in the plant and the extent to which it affects the girls' freedom in the presence of the instructor.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, it shows that as assuming—that we assume that what this lady evidently felt, that these two people got together and framed her—

Miss Weyand: No. She stated the fact that she had work that week that was poor and the other girls had good work.

Trial Examiner Batten: Someone has to do the poor work, don't they?

Miss Weyand: I wanted to point out the instructor could decide who would do it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, this seems to be a long way around of doing it. And then the question is raised, whether this incident means anything.

Miss Weyand: I think it shows the power of the in[fol. 6338] structors in this plant, and for that reason I think it is admissible.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it does, Miss Weyand, and I don't think it is rebuttal.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the entire answer of the witness.

Mr. Reed: We join in the motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I presume you both would expect me to concur with you, wouldn't you?

Mr. Lane: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you had waited a minute, maybe I would have made the motion.

Miss Weyand, I am seriously considering it. Now, I have told you what I think about it. What have you to say about it?

Miss Weyand: I think, in view of the testimony of eight or nine girls', adduced over my objection, under the remand, as to whether or not they regarded the instructor as having any power to affect their wages or their conditions at the plant, this is proper rebuttal to show that another witness felt differently and to show the facts upon which she based her feeling and the facts from which she drew her conclusion as to the instructors' power to affect the girls.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, you were going to say something?

[fol. 6339] Mr. Langsdale: Well, Miss Weyand about states my thought about it.

All of these witnesses testified the instructor was just another working girl, with no authority whatever over any of the sewing girls. Now, we have proved by other witnesses that the instructor was a supervisor with the power to give good work to some girls and bad work to others. This is just an incident of that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, if I were convinced that this is an incident of that, I wouldn't consider striking it, but I am not convinced that it is an incident of that.

Mr. Langsdale: She testified Mary Copowycz gave her and two other girls poor work and gave the others good work. Now, certainly, that is proven, that Mary Copowycz had the power to do that. Now, her conclusion as to why Mary Copowycz did it may be pure embellishment, but the gist of it is that Mary Copowycz had the power to do it and did do it, and that is certainly rebuttal.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I wish to direct your attention to the fact that in the original hearing the Board spent many days, a large part of which was endeavoring to show that the employees were dominated by instructors and other employees of the company.

The respondent and the intervener then put on witnesses [fol. 6340] who said, "We don't think we are dominated, and we don't think they have any authority."

Now, to go back and say that the—for the Board to go back and say, "We will put on some more people who think the instructors were supervisory employees, and show incidents of that," is merely to repeat their case in chief. Perhaps there are thousands of incidents in the plant which will reflect one way or the other. In that case the intervener and the respondent should have an opportunity to answer that all over again.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I am not considering it, I don't think, from the standpoint you just brought up.

Mr. Langsdale: May I say a word in reply to Mr. Tyler's argument?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I will hear you all.

Mr. Langsdale: I objected to their opening up their defense in chief when they put eleven witnesses on to say that the instructor had no authority. If this is no part of our rebuttal, it was certainly no part of their case on the remand.

Trial Examiner Batten. Mr. Langsdale, I am not saying you haven't a right to rebut it, because all of the witnesses thus far I have permitted to testify about the instructors and whether they were supervisors, over the objection of the intervener and the respondent, and they have had a continuing objection to that.

[fol. 6341] Mr. Langsdale: And you let them do it over our objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: But on the basis of that ruling which I have made as to other witnesses— The thing is, I can't see where this incident means anything.

Mr. Langsdale: I think it does sustain the Board's theory that the instructor was a supervisor.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, the witnesses Mr. Langsdale has mentioned being put on in this hearing were not put on by the respondent for the purpose of showing the instructor has no authority. They were put on solely in response to the direction of the Circuit Court of Appeals that they tell why they formed this union. Now, in telling why, a certain latitude of reasons would certainly be allowed, which was for the Examiner to determine. But that doesn't mean that all of the things they might mention are to be again put in the case to be decided all over again. Cross-examination is proper to break down any reasons they may say they relied on in joining the union, but rebuttal is not proper to meet those reasons, unless they present something entirely new, and the matter of the authority of the instructors certainly is not new.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will recess until a quarter after 4.

(Thereupon a 10-minute recess was taken.)

[fol. 6342] Trial Examiner Batten: I am just wondering if counsel understood me when I said a quarter after 4.

Mr. Langsdale: Personally I was watching the bench to see whether you were there or not. I came in as soon as I saw you.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to strike the last answer. It certainly hasn't any value in its present form, that is certain.

Let's proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: What did you do? Did you strike it?

Trial Examiner Batten: What is it?

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't get your ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: I strike it.

And I think I interrupted you, Miss Weyand, on the following question. Do you have it, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter: No. That was reported by Mrs. Creel.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want the question, Miss Weyand, the question and the answer that I struck, and the following question?

Miss Weyand: No, I'll drop that subject, I think.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I was.

Q. Did you have a pin?

A. I have.

Q. Do you remember how you got your pin?

[fol. 6343] A. My instructor gave it to me, — I bought it, rather, and she delivered it to me.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Gray?

A. I do.

Q. Who is she?

A. She was manager of our outside store.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't get the answer.

A. She was manager of our outside store, to my knowledge.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How do you know she is the manager?

A. Well, we always had to see Mrs. Gray if we wanted anything in the store, to see Mrs. Gray, and when it was remnant bundles, she would send i. d. m.'s, and say it was the remnant bundles.

Mr. Reed: I can't understand the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

A. And her signature was on the i. d. m.

Mr. Lane: Now, I move to strike out the answer that Mrs. Gray was manager of the store, for the reason it is a mere conclusion; and the following answer of the witness doesn't state any facts upon which the conclusion can properly be based.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How long has Mrs. Gray been the manager of the store?

A. As long as I was there.

[fol. 6344] Q. Did you know Sylvia Hull?

A. I did.

Q. Do you remember the last day she worked at the plant? A. I do.

Q. Was she on the same floor with you that day?

A. She was.

Q. What happened?

A. Well, when I came in to work that morning, there was quite a number that had newspaper clippings with Sylvia's picture on those clippings, and that is the first I knew of it, and they said, "And she even came in to work this morning," and I was very much surprised; and I went over in the section where Sylvia was working, Miss Allison's section, and Sylvia was crying and trying to work, and Miss Allison was standing at the end of the section crying.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear the last of that.

A. Miss Allison was standing at the end of her section crying, and I stayed around there for a while, and I talked to Miss Allison for a minute or so, really sympathizing with her because she was crying; and then I went back to my section; but I don't think any of us worked for some time.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did people from other floors come up there?

A. Yes, I saw Ella Mae a time or two; there was others, but I didn't particularly know them.

Q. And by Ella Mae you mean who?

[fol. 6345] A. Well, she was the girl in the office; and the reason I remember that, I thought probably Ella Mae was—

Q. (Interrupting) What is Ella Mae's last name?

A. Hyde.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6349] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you consider the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union a company dominated union, or a company union?

A. I did.

Mr. Lane: I object to that as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer. A. I do.

Miss Weyand: Why do you?

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me, I didn't hear that.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. As I recall, you both have a continuing objection.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Miss Weyand: Will you tell us why?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. Because it seemed it never done any good when you [fol. 6350] took grievances up with that committee; I never did get anywhere when I was on the committee, and everything went just as the company seen fit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, what is that in rebuttal of, the statement the witness just made?

Miss Weyand: The conclusionary statements by witnesses offered by the company, that the union was organized, formed, and run by the girls.

Mr. Lane: Wasn't that a part of the main case?

Miss Weyand: Well, at the main case, the Trial Examiner was not operating on a theory that such conclusionary or opinion evidence of employees was material; with the Court remand saying that such evidence should be taken, we are in the position of the company putting in such evidence, and the Board's not having put it on because of this theory of law under which the same case was tried.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will let it stand.

Miss Weyand: Did you attend a meeting in March—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Do I understand counsel to mean now that it is material to go into what the plant union did accomplish?

As I recall, counsel objected to those matters when we were putting on our witnesses.

Miss Weyand: I don't recall the objection of which you speak. Would you be more specific?

[fol. 6351] Mr. Ingraham: Well, as I recall, objection was made to whether the union was the preference of the employees, what the union had accomplished, why it was their preference.

Miss Weyand: I don't recall any objection to any such questions, that you weren't allowed to state that.

Mr. Ingraham: That is my recollection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the record will indicate. I sort of had that recollection myself.

Mr. Tyler: Of course, the union itself was not allowed to put on any witnesses whatever which would—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, Mr. Tyler, I don't presume that that is correct; at least, that is not my position, but if that is yours, why, the record should indicate it.

We will proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend a meeting in March, 1937, at which Mrs. Reed spoke? A. I did.

Q. How were you notified of that meeting?

A. Well, if I remember right, it was the same as it was when our union was organized.

Q. And that was how?

A. By our instructor.

Q. What time of day was the meeting held at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. I don't remember the exact time. I can't say the [fol. 6352] exact time.

Q. Was it during working hours or after working hours?

A. Yes, it was during working hours.

Q. Did you wear your uniform to that meeting?

A. I just don't remember if I did or not, that particular meeting.

Q. What do you recall that Mrs. Reed said at the meeting?

A. Well, that she would stand by us girls if we stood by her, and that—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Will you speak a little louder?

A. That she would stand by us girls if we stood by her, and that no one was going to run her plant, no buttinsky or 'sky, rather. She just explained that she was giving us the impression we would be protected in case of violence that was happening in other plants. That is about all I can remember of the exact words.

Q. Did you ever work in a section of the plant for a period of time and then move to another section, and the section number which appeared on your check stub was not changed for a period of time? A. I did.

Miss Weyand: I would like the court reporter to mark these check stubs Board's exhibits 39-A to 39-E inclusive for identification.

[fol. 6353] (Thereupon the check stubs above referred to were marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 39-A to 39-E inclusive, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Mr. Ingraham: I would like counsel to state the purpose of offering these stubs that are dated November, December, December, December, December, 1941.

Miss Weyand: Purely to show the practice of the company, in many cases, being very slow in changing the section number. I shall then ask the witness if that was the practice previously. It happens those are the only illustrations I have of check stubs with this witness.

We will try to put some others in that occurred during that period, with another witness.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I object to proving that point by matters that are outside the time set by the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: What have you to say about it, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Well, I think when I am proving merely a practice of the company in regard to having check stubs bear one section number and the girl actually be working, during a series of weeks for which the pay is covered, in another section, that I can put on check stubs for any time, if there is a showing there was no change in the company's practice in that regard during the time involved.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, doesn't that open up the [fol. 6354] whole thing to Mr. Tyler, to show there was no change in the conduct of the International Union prior, and then to a witness, after he has gone over the whole thing, and say, "Isn't that the same as it has always been?" What is the difference?

Miss Weyand: Because it has always been my theory that it has always been proper to prove something before by something that happens after.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you know the ruling I have made, don't you?

Miss Weyand: Well, I will offer this, then, and I will make an offer on that. I would like to say, in connection with the offer, that if the witness is willing to testify, will testify—shall I put it in this way, rather than to have her state what appears on these check stubs?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you put it on.

Miss Weyand: That the handwriting which appears in the upper right-hand corner of Board's exhibit 39-A for identification, was on the check stub when she received it, and that she received it in the section numbered in handwriting at the corner, No. 411, and continued to work in section 411 continuously from prior to November 28, 1941, until subsequent to December 26, 1941, and that during that period her check stubs for weeks ending November 28, 1941, December 5, 1941, December 12, 1941, and December 19, 1941, indicated that she was working in section [fol. 6355] 517, whereas she was working actually in section 411, where all the checks were delivered to her; and that only on the check dated December 26, 1941, did the actual change in section numbers appear, and on the check stub dated December 26, 1941, which is Board's Exhibit 39-E for identification, the change for the first time appears with the section number in the addressograph as 411.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: That is all the questions I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: No questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Weilert, I understood you to say that you took a 14-months leave of absence in 1940.

A. It was about that long, to my memory.

Q. When was that?

A. It was about 14 months before I came back this last time; it was in—

Q. (Interrupting) In 1940 to 1941, is that what you said? A. Yes.

[fol. 6356] Q. And you worked how long?

A. Until March of this year.

Q. Of this year?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, at that time did you object to doing repair work?

A. I certainly did.

Q. You had objected for some time, is that a fact?

A. No, only once, that is when I quit.

Q. That is the only time you objected to repair work?

A. Never before did I ever refuse to do repair work.

Q. But at that time you did refuse to do it?

A. I did, and I quit.

Q. Now, I understood you to say that you had objected to having to do repair work without being paid.

A. I objected to them taking out of those girls' checks when they made less than the guarantee; that didn't sound sensible to me. They didn't take it out of the girls' checks who made over their guarantee, it was the ones who did not make their guarantee; and in my opinion and in my argument I couldn't see where our contract stood up, because the girls had no guarantee after that. Where was their guarantee?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Ingraham, isn't that a matter I struck out?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, but the witness has just answered a question; Miss Weyand asked her whether she thought the [fol. 6357] Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was company dominated and she said—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I intended clearly—I thought I was not receiving those exhibits, and didn't I say on that question and answer that I wouldn't receive them?

Mr. Ingraham: I didn't understand you to say that. I thought the witness answered her question. Will you please go back—

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, pardon me, Mr. Ingraham. I made a note here: "Q. Is the union company dominated and why," to be stricken, and I meant to strike it out before you started with your examination.

Mr. Ingraham: I see.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have a note here, I see it now.

Mr. Langsdale: What was the objection to that question, that caused you to strike it? I didn't hear it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, because I didn't think—the first question, of course, is purely a conclusion, Mr. Langsdale, but we have had plenty of conclusions all the way through, and the why raises the whole issue of grievances, and yesterday, when she related one incident, I struck that out, and I think I intended, in the prior hearing, on several occasions—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Well, I think it is a question of conclusion, and the Examiner can't make an [fol. 6358] error to strike out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I wasn't going along on it because of conclusions alone, but the answer is based entirely on the fact this lady—that there had been some grievances that hadn't been properly taken care of, and that was the primary reason for my striking out; but I notice now I had this note, and I meant to do it before.

Miss Weyand: I want an exception to that, and I didn't know, of course, before I released the witness, you were going to strike that. I don't think her answer indicates it was purely a matter of grievance, not being settled completely, and I would like to have the answer read back to the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, will you release the witness back to Miss Weyand, in view of the fact I have struck the matter?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Direct Examination (Resumed)

Miss Weyand: Did you consider the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union an organization formed by the employees for their own benefit?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. The witness has already stated her basis for believing the union was company dominated.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer the question.

[fol. 6359] Miss Weyand: Will the reporter read the question to the witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: Please read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did you consider the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union an organization formed by the employees for their own benefit?")

A. At the time it was formed, I did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you later change your opinion?

A. I did.

Q. What opinion did you then form?

A. That it was most certainly company dominated.

Q. What did you mean by "company dominated"?

A. They operated everything just to suit themselves. I don't know of any incident where the girls had anything to say about it—or the union had anything to say about it.

Q. When you say "to suit themselves," whom do you mean by that?

A. The company.

Miss Weyand: That's all.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I contend that opens up this same question.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it opens up everything, if anything has been closed.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

[fol. 6360] Trial Examiner Batten: Clearly.

Mr. Langsdale, do you have anything?

Mr. Langsdale: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Langsdale: What was the ruling?

Trial Examiner Batten: I say I think it does open up everything that has been closed, if I have been able to close anything.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't hear any motion to strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, apparently there isn't any.

Go ahead, Mr. Ingraham.

Cross-Examination (Resumed).

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Mrs. Weilert, you stated that when the union was formed you thought that it was an organization formed by the voluntary action of the employees?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, yes. I don't know anything about unions, and if it was necessary, I felt that was what I should do.

Q. Did the violence at the other garment plants in 1937 cause you to feel that a plant union would protect the employees?

A. Well, I didn't know if it was the union that would protect us, that was a mystery to me; I didn't know any-[fol. 6361] thing about unions, but I did feel like we needed protection if they came down there.

Q. And did Mr. Tyler advise you that a plant union would; in a measure, protect the employees?

A. That's right.

Q. And did you take that into consideration when you voted?

A. I don't know as I took it into consideration or not; I thought if that was what was necessary, that was the proper thing to do.

Q. So you used your own judgment about the matter at the time?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, up to 1937 had you been satisfied in your work—

A. (Interrupting) Yes.

Q. (Continuing) At the plant?

A. Yes.

Q. And had you notified Mrs. Reed?

A. Mrs. Reed what?

Q. That you were satisfied?

A. Before 1937?

Q. Well, in 1937, had you notified Mrs. Reed that you were satisfied in your work?

A. Not directly, that I know of.

Q. Did you ever write her a letter?

A. Before 1937?

[fol. 6362] Q. No, in 1937.

A. In 1937?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. Positive.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Reporter, will you please mark this exhibit as respondent's exhibit No. 46?

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 46, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the letter. It is not the original, it is a copy. Show it to the witness.

Mr. Ingraham: I'll withdraw that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall writing a letter?

A. In 1939.

Q. In 1937?

A. 1939.

Q. Well, I'll hand you exhibit 46, respondent's exhibit No. 46, and ask you if you recall writing such a letter.

A. I did not.

Q. You did not?

A. I did not, positive.

Mr. Ingraham: I would like to get the original of this letter right now.

A. I wish you would.

[fol. 6363] Mr. Ingraham: Will you recess for about 5 or 10 minutes?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that all the longer it will take?

Mr. Ingraham: I think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: It seems you should have had the original here before you were going to present it to the witness.

Mr. Ingraham: I thought the witness would recollect writing this letter.

Mr. Hogsett: It is of no great delay, it is only a hundred feet from this courtroom. It is a record we are not at liberty to bring here, but we will have the clerk take it out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we wil recess for 10 minutes.

(Recess was accordingly taken.)

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read the last question and answer?

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Well, I'll hand you exhibit 46, respondent's exhibit No. 46, and ask you if you recall writing such a letter.

"A. I did not.

"Q. You did not?

[fol. 6364] "A. I did not, positive.")

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Reporter, will you please mark this exhibit?

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 47, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Mr. Ingraham: I will hand you now respondent's exhibit No. 47, which is the original of exhibit No. 46, which you just testified about,—

Mr. Hogsett: Let her compare that with the copy.

Mr. Ingraham: (Continuing) —and ask you if that is a fact?

Mr. Langsdale: And ask you what?

Mr. Ingraham: If Exhibit 46, which she has just testified about, was a copy of exhibit No. 47.

A. That is not my signature.

Mr. Ingraham: Is this your signature to that affidavit?

A. That is my signature, but I don't know how it got on there.

Mr. Hogsett: Take that away from her and have her write the entire thing in her own handwriting right now.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that, and I think she is not required to make any such asseveration.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Interrupting) Is this a letter in your handwriting?

[fol. 6367] A. It is not; but this is my signature.

Q. On the affidavit? A. On this, yes.

Q. Now, will you please write what is contained—

A. (Interrupting) Yes, I will.

Q. (Continuing)—in this exhibit?

A. Yes, I will.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just move up to the table, Mrs. Weilert.

(Thereupon the witness wrote as requested.)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Reading) "Kansas City, Missouri, July 15, '37. To whom it may concern:

"During the past 4½ years—"

A. (Interrupting) Four and a half?

Q. 4½ years. (Reading) "I have been employed as operator by the Donnelly Garment Company."

Mr. Langsdale: I submit the whole counsel table doesn't have to stand up and look over her shoulder while she is doing this, and one counsel is enough.

A. I am left-handed.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you write with your right hand?

A. No, you couldn't read it if I did. I admit I am a little nervous writing here, but I can still sign my name, I think.

Q. Well, are you too nervous to write?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object—

[fol. 6366] A. (Interrupting) No, I don't think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just proceed, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Reading) "Working conditions and salary have been very satisfactory and I am very well satisfied with my present employer. I do not wish to join any outside organization, and I feel that—"

A. (Interrupting) Outside organization?

Q. (Reading) "—any outside organization—"

A. I will just have to write that over if you read it.

Q. (Reading) "—and I feel that I have the right to use my own judgment in this matter. Yours respectfully, Bessie Weilert, 3930—"

A. (Interrupting) 3920, is it, or 3930?

Q. Well, this has got a stamp over it. I can't see, "Wabash."

A. Well, which is it, 3930 or 3920?

Q. 3930.

A. I don't live there.

Mr. Hogsett: It is '20.

Mr. Ingraham: It is '20.

A. It must be.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please mark this as an exhibit?

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 48, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Trial Examiner Batten: What is that, 48, Mr. Reporter?

[fol. 6367] The Reporter: Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please pull your—let me push your chair up to the table again. Will you sign your name right-handed, please, on that table?

A. I sure will, if I can.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you using the same pen?

Mr. Ingraham: No. Push up farther to the table.

A. I know when I was at school I had a terrible time, I couldn't write. I always wrote this way when I was in school, and they were trying to get me over that, I wrote backwards.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You have written backwards right along?

A. In the first grade at school, but I can't write, and they had to let me write left-handed.

Q. And exhibit 48 was written with your left hand?

A. Absolutely. Any signature of mine would be with my left hand.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you just mark these, please?

(Thereupon the documents above referred to were marked as "Respondent's Exhibits No. 49-A through E inclusive, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Mr. Hogsett: Well, did she endorse the pay checks with the right hand or left hand?

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I object to the exhibits because [fol. 6368] she says she always wrote with her left hand.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 49-A and ask you if that is your signature in your hand-writing on a pay check from the Donnelly Garment Company, dated July 3, 1937? A. It is not my signature.

Q. It is not your signature? A. It is not.

Q. All right. At that time, on July 3, 1937, were you in section 413? A. In 1937?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I was in Lola Skeens' section.

Q. What was your time clock number, 14?

A. It must have been from that.

Q. And is that check made out to Bessie Weilert?

A. Yes.

Q. And cashed through the bank?

A. Where was that cashed at?

Q. One is the Union National Bank, the other is—

Miss Weyand: (Interrupting) May I see that a minute?

A. There is nothing I can explain, unless my husband made a payment on the house and signed the check, maybe I forgot to sign it or something; that is the only thing I know of. I used to send my checks about that time to the [fol. 6369] savings company where we were paying on our home. I used to just—most of the time I didn't cash them, I would sign them and send them down there.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't hear that answer. Will you read it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

A. Or maybe at Katz', maybe I would cash them and send the money down there, or something of that sort.

Mr. Langsdale: You mean by that the banker may have signed your name on the back of the check?

A. No, I don't mean that. It may be my husband signed it, in sending it to the bank, they know him down there; but I didn't sign that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is this your pay check? A. Yes.

Q. Well, who signed your name on the back?

A. I don't know, unless it is my husband, but I didn't sign that; that could be possible.

Q. Now, the number over your name, is that your social security number? A. I suppose it is.

Mr. Langsdale: That is immaterial. She admits that is her pay check.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

[fol. 6370] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, I'll hand you respondent's exhibit 49-B and ask you if that is your pay check.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, is that your endorsement on the back?

A. Yes.

Q. It is?

A. Yes. It was a habit of mine to stop on my way home and cash my checks; of course, there might have been exceptions.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit 49-C. Is that your pay check? A. It is.

Mr. Langsdale: I think one counsel hanging over the witness is sufficient, and I ask one counsel be requested to take his seat at the counsel table.

Mr. Ingraham: I am not hanging over the witness, I am merely questioning the witness.

A. That is my signature.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. That is your signature on respondent's exhibit 49-C? A. It is.

Q. I'll hand you respondent's exhibit 49-D and ask you if that is your pay check? A. It is.

Q. And I'll ask you if that is your signature?

A. It is.

[fol. 6371] Q. I'll hand you respondent's exhibit 49-E and ask you if that is your pay check? A. It is.

Q. And I'll ask you if that is your signature?

A. It is. There is only one there that is not my signature, and that could be possible that it was signed by my husband.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please mark this as an exhibit?

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 50, Witness Weilert," for identification.)

Mr. Ingraham: I'll hand you respondent's exhibit 50, and ask you if you made the writing on that page with your right hand. A. With my right hand, yes.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I offer in evidence respondent's exhibits 47, 48, 49-A, B, C, D, and E, and 50.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any objections?

Miss Weyand: Well, I object to them being received, the one which is the letter she wrote; I don't object to the receipt of 48 nor 49-A, B, C, D, and E, nor 50. I understand those can be received, but I do object to the receipt of No. 47 in evidence until it is determined who wrote it, and the circumstances under which it was written.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the copy?

Miss Weyand: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you say No. 47?

[fol. 6372] Miss Weyand: That is the original, purported original hand writing. I don't object to the receipt of the copy for what it is worth.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer included all the exhibits?

Mr. Ingraham: I stated 47, 48, 49—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) A to E.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, and 50; and I am also offering respondent's exhibit 46.

Trial Examiner Batten: What would be the purpose of offering the copy, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, the witness said she didn't sign any such letter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, I see. That is in relation to her testimony?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

The Witness: To my memory I did not.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the offer of either 46 or 47 as not having been identified; therefore they are not competent.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, Mrs. Weilert—

Mr. Langsdale: Wait just a minute.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think they should all be received, but the question that is to be determined, I presume, is whether or not that is her letter, her signature.

[fol. 6373] Miss Weyand: I think they should be identified and not received in evidence until it is determined where those copies came from and what they are.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will receive them in evidence in connection with this witness's testimony; and of course, any questions, I presume, will be determined as with respect to any exhibits. Of course, this exhibit 47 will be received, but we will have to have the original, I won't accept the photostat, because if the issue of the handwriting is an issue, of course I am not going to accept a photostat.

(The documents heretofore marked "Respondent's Exhibits 46, 47, 48, 49-A, 49-B, 49-C, 49-D, 49-E, and 50, Witness Weilert," for identification, were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit 47, and ask you if you did sign your name on the affidavit?

A. I must have. That is my signature.

Q. Now, that is dated the 27th day of October, 1937?

A. October 27, 1937?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: When?

Mr. Ingraham: October, 1937.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, do you recall making that affidavit?

A. No, I don't recall making that, but that is my signa[fol. 6374] ture; and what is in the letter is the way I felt, that would be all right.

Q. Your felt what was stated in the letter was all right?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And so when you did sign the affidavit which stated: "I, Bessie Weilert, being duly sworn, state I wrote the attached letter of my own free will and that the facts contained therein are true," that was a fact? A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Wait a minute. Let's get the question. Just a minute—

Mr. Ingraham: She has answered.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Let's have the question.

Mr. Langsdale: You hadn't finished your question when she started to answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Wait just a moment. Let's have the question read.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question as including that part of the affidavit in which she said she wrote the letter and which she says she didn't sign. If the question is only to get at the contents of the letter as to the way she felt, then I have no objection to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean, Miss Witness, that the contents of the letter were true, or that you [fol. 6375] wrote the letter?

A. That is the way I felt at that time, yes, that I was pleased with my work.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You were referring to the contents of the letter?

A. Yes.

Q. And not to the fact that you wrote that?

A. No, I didn't write it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Why did you sign this paper?

A. That is what I don't know, that is what the mystery is to me.

Q. You have no recollection of it?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You have no recollection of being sworn?

A. No, I didn't sign that at that time; I know I would have, just that way. We signed a lot of things we didn't have to read.

Q. Now, this affidavit states: "I, Bessie Weilert, being duly sworn, state I wrote the attached letter."

A. Yes, I probably signed that.

Q. You signed that?

A. I signed a lot of things I didn't have to read, yes.

Q. And you swore to it?

A. Yes, I guess I did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6376] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. So, Mrs. Weilert, in October, 1937, you were satisfied?

A. Apparently from that, if it was in October.

Q. Well, you stated—

A. (Interrupting) I was rather satisfied there until I was on the committee as chairman, that is when I could really see the unsatisfactory view of things, and then I wasn't satisfied.

Q. And that was in 1939? A. 1939.

Q. And I believe you stated you were elected on the committee in the spring of 1939? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Do you recall the month?

A. It was in April, it must have been.

Q. In April? A. Yes.

Q. And then how soon after that? A. Immediately.

Q. Immediately?

A. Afterwards, the first chairman meeting.

Q. And you think it was in the month of May?

A. Yes, I do.

[fol. 6377] Q. The early part of May?

A. Yes, I think so, I wouldn't say exactly.

Q. How often did you have meetings?

A. Well, if I recall it was once a week.

Q. Once a week?

A. I believe it was once a week.

Q. I didn't quite understand what you meant by "committee of chairmen." Was that a representative of the section?

A. That's right, for the operators. There were two representatives for the operators for that union.

Q. And you were one of them on the general executive committee?

A. Yes, I suppose that is what you would call it.

Q. Now, I'll hand you intervener's exhibit No. 20.

Miss Weyand: I would like to, in order to expedite matters, ask if the company could undertake to produce a letter that was written in 1939, or search its files to see if they can find the letter.

A. It was not written, Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: It was not? A. I dictated that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And it was typewritten? A. Yes.

Q. It wouldn't show your handwriting, then?

A. No.

[fol. 6378] Mr. Ingraham: I hand the witness intervener's exhibit No. 20 and refer to page 6076 of the Circuit Court record and ask the witness if her signature appears on that page.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is that rejected exhibit, is it not?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

A. Yes, that is it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. That is your signature? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I'll ask the witness to read the writing that is on that page, please.

[fol. 6379] A. I have finished.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall making that affidavit?

A. When did you say it was, May—

Q. (Interrupting) May 31, 1939.

A. Is that the one where the Notary Public was in the auditorium?

Q. I don't know anything about it.

A. Where we were called in groups to sign that?

Q. I don't know a thing about it. I had nothing to do with it.

A. Well, I really only remember one time where a paper was notarized, and it was in the auditorium on the first floor, and if that is the paper, why, yes, I signed it.

Q. Now, it states in the affidavit: "Each signer further states that he or she has either read or had read to him or her the contents of this affidavit."

A. That was read to us, he read it to us, the notary public.

Q. Now, you have read this—

A. (Interrupting) Just now.

Q. (Continuing) —just now?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were the facts you swore to at that time true or [fol. 6380] false?

A. It must have been awfully early in May if I felt that way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it was in May, 1939.

A. Well, I didn't feel that way, no.

Mr. Ingraham: So you swore to something that was not true?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as argumentative. Her answer speaks for itself, and the affidavit speaks for itself. It is purely argumentative, and in an effort to—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Will you read the last answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to it for the further reason it is repetition. She said she didn't feel that way, and she did sign it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Please read the last question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Ingraham: She did.

A. It seems I did.

Mr. Hogsett: Just now she answered it: "It seems I did."

Mr. Ingraham: So, in 1939, under oath, you swore to certain facts—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Just a moment.

[fol. 6381] Trial Examiner Batten: You haven't finished yet, have you?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Langsdale: No, I say the witness shouldn't answer until I put in my objection.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You swore to certain facts with respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that weren't true?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is entirely repetitious. She just got through saying, didn't she? If you want to ask her what part of the affidavit she considers not to be true, all right.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you the affidavit and ask you to state what was not true.

A. Well, I didn't consider that "wish" and "choice" correct. It wasn't our wish and our choice, it was just a matter of duty, I felt it was our duty to belong to that union, if that was what they wanted us to do. I can't really say it was my wish and choice, but that it was necessary.

Q. What was the next item that was untrue at the time you swore to it?

Trial Examiner Batten: If any?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

[fol. 6382] A. I suppose that it is supposed to be a choice, and I just can't say it was a choice, it was more of a duty to me.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What item are you referring to now?

A. Where it says: "We understand that there is in some quarters a disposition to question the fact that membership in our own union is our own voluntary choice, and therefore, for the purpose of establishing that fact to the satisfaction of the Labor Board, the public, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and any and all others who may be interested."

Q. Now, is that the only false statement that you swore to?

A. That is one.

Q. What other false statements did you swear to?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. The witness hasn't said they were false statements, Mr. Ingraham. She says they were untrue.

Mr. Hogsett: What is the difference?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, why don't you use the witness's language?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't have to follow the language of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't assume the use of the words, "false statement" is correct. The questions have been to this witness: what in here was untrue.

Mr. Hogsett: Does your Honor draw a distinction be-[fol. 6383] tween "false" and "untrue"?

Trial Examiner Batten: It is immaterial whether I draw a distinction or not.

Mr. Langsdale: I draw a great distinction —.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment. Unfortunately I think you two men will have to decide that matter.

A. When we signed this we were on our lunch period, we have a half an hour for lunch, or we did have, and when we were told to go to the first floor — this impressed me as something that hadn't been done properly; probably we had signed the same thing before, but it hadn't been done properly, and now was being notarized, and we rushed in there after lunch and rushed out, and goodness, I don't suppose — I know I didn't absorb half of this.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. So you now testify —

A. (Interrupting) That I didn't know the seriousness of this, if it is serious.

Mr. Langsdale: What is the answer?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is your memory better now, Mrs. Wellert, than it was in 1939, about those facts?

A. About these facts?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 6384] A. Well, I feel different than I did then.

Q. Yes. In May 1939 you felt differently than you feel now, is that a fact?

A. It could have been, maybe; I said if it wasn't the first it was mighty soon after the first meeting that I felt different about the union.

Q. So, at the time that affidavit was made you felt differently?

A. It could have been.

Q. And your feeling now is that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union should have forced the company to pay for repairs?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the word "forced" as not based on anything she said. All she said is: they should at least have made an effort to do it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I have stricken out that part, didn't I, about pay for repairs?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I feel that Miss Weyand opened the whole door.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean even the part I have stricken out of her testimony?

Mr. Ingraham: I feel so, yes. Miss Weyand went into — Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) We will proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I am objecting to the use of the word "forced" in there, as not based on her testimony. Her testimony was she thought the union should make an [fol. 6385] effort to do it. The word "forced" carries an entirely different interpretation.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, do you understand the question, Mrs. Weilert?

A. Well, I don't know if I do or not.

Q. Well, it is about that incident you related.

A. Taking out of their pay for repairs?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it was something they never had done before in that way, to my knowledge.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, how had it been done before?

A. Well, lost time, that is all I ever knew of, that they lost time seemed sufficient.

Q. Well, Mrs. Weilert, wasn't it a fact the company paid operators to perform certain particular work, and if an operator performed that work in such a way that the company was obliged to have it done over, then the operators hadn't performed what they were hired to do and wouldn't be entitled to be paid for that?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question as argumentative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

Mr. Langsdale: The issue as to whether Mrs. Weilert was right or wrong isn't here. The issue that is here is, did she protest against it, and was she dissatisfied on that account.

[fol. 6386] Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Well, Mrs. Weilert, wasn't it a fact the company paid operators to perform certain particular work, and if an operator performed that work in such a way that the company was obliged to have it done over, that then the operators hadn't performed what they were hired to do and wouldn't be entitled to be paid for that?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, she still had a guarantee. I suppose those mistakes were allowed for, they must have been.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, do you feel, Mrs. Weilert, that if you performed an operation in such a way that it has to be done over, the company should pay you for that?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. I object to the question as argumentative, purely. The witness had based her opposition to that requirement of the company on her contract which guaranteed so much per week, and as I understand her testimony, when this was taken out, then her guaranteed contract was broken, and that was what she said, and that's all.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I would like to have the witness answer my question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

[fol. 6387] (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Well, do you feel, Mrs. Weilert, that if you performed an operation in such a way that it has to be done over, the company should pay you for that?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. When you are on piece work, I feel the time you lose — no girl ever makes mistakes deliberately — because she loses time when she does that over, it is a loss to her or sometimes it is to the company; and I always thought it was allowed off. Of course, if the girl is intolerable, they should fire her, I think they have the right to fire someone if they don't do the work the way it should be done, but I don't think they have the right to take that out of a set guarantee.

Q. Didn't you have quite a bit of repair work?

A. I didn't have. I had no more than the average.

Q. But you did have repair work?

A. I have had repair work, and I have always done it willingly.

Q. And have you personally complained about your own repair work?

A. I did when I quit, yes. I suppose I have made little remarks about it, probably, about it not being my operation, or something, but I did particularly when I quit.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6389] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Weilert, I show you the signature, the endorsement, on respondent's exhibit No. 49-A, which you say is in your husband's handwriting, and ask you if that isn't the same signature that is on respondent's exhibit No. 47.

A. That's what I think it is.

Q. You think your husband wrote that letter?

A. Yes, I do. I think he did, and I had forgotten about it.

Q. And the facts in the letter are true, I think you testified?

A. Yes.

Q. And you told your husband to write that letter?

A. I probably did. I had forgotten about it entirely, though.

[fol. 6390] Q. And it was written at your home?

A. It must have been.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Weilert, you were elected to the committee of representatives of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in April 1939, were you not?

A. I think that's the date.

Q. That was about two years after the union had been formed, approximately?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the time of your election you believed the union was representing the wishes and the interests of the employees?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you attended the meetings of the committee held after you were elected to the committee of representatives, did you?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Tyler, may I interrupt a moment?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Examiner, in view of the testimony of the witness given to the last of Mr. Ingraham's cross-examination, do you now think it necessary that we go through the requirement of having this original letter withdrawn?

[fol. 6391] I suggest this as a reason why you may not think it is necessary: It appears now that the letter, according to the best knowledge of the witness, is in the handwriting of her husband, written at her home, at her request. Now, for all practical purposes, that is all we care about. It represented her views and communicated them to the company, at her request, so that the signature and the handwriting are no longer important.

Mr. Langsdale: You raise no further question about that?

Mr. Hogsett: No. I am convinced—

Trial Examiner Batten: If you raise no further question about that, there is no need—I would say, however, that you have a photostat.

Mr. Hogsett: Oh, yes, just like all exhibits.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you have two photostats made, so that there will be one for—

Mr. Langsdale: I think the exhibit of the writing here this morning should be stricken. In other words, there is going to be no point raised about whether or not this is in her handwriting, this exhibit No. 47?

Mr. Hogsett: I think now that is true.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, why don't counsel agree on the withdrawal of any of these exhibits you do not now think necessary?

Mr. Hogsett: Let it be by agreement understood that all [fol. 6392] of the exhibits which Mr. Ingraham exhibited to Mrs. Weilert with the view of testing the accuracy of her testimony on the subject of the handwriting in this original letter be withdrawn.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is respondent's exhibit No. 48. Now, I don't know whether I want to have them withdrawn—

Mr. Hogsett: For this reason, that it is now apparently no longer in issue that the letter was written by Mrs. Weilert's husband at her home, at her request and truly represented her views. Now, that being true, whether she wrote it personally is just wholly immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true. But whether they should be withdrawn—I still think—

Mr. Hogsett: You mean—

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean physically withdrawn. I have no objection, Mr. Hogsett, if you will provide photostats of those, and photostats of those of which there is only one copy, and then have the record show they are withdrawn. I don't want them withdrawn physically. I want them in the record.

Mr. Langsdale: Why shouldn't the record be cleared of them completely?

Mr. Hogsett: Which way do you want it? We are agreed to anything.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6394] Mr. Hogsett: I will state my personal belief, that this letter, exhibit No. 47, was actually written by Mrs. Weilert's husband, as she says it was.

Mr. Langsdale: Do you agree to that, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: If the evidence shows that is a fact.

Mr. Hogsett: I think that is a fair inference from this check that she says she endorsed.

Mr. Tyler: I made no study of the comparative handwriting, but I am willing to let that stand.

Mr. Langsdale: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, that may stand. And you will, then, have photostats made in the usual way?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6395] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. After you were elected to the committee did the [fol. 6396] Donnelly Garment Workers' Union pay committee members for any expenses they incurred in connection with work for the union or time lost for the union?

A. You mean my time that I spent—

Q. I mean, any members of the committee. Were they paid by the union for time lost?

A. I never seen or had read to me any report of such. They might have, but I never had read to me or seen any report of it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6397] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What meetings of the executive committee did the company pay you for attending?

A. Why, I was under the impression they paid me for all of them—for the time lost on those meetings. I turned in the time to the instructor, and I don't know where else it went. It didn't go to the union, to my knowledge.

Q. Where did you get that impression?

A. Rose Todd told me to turn in the time for our union meetings.

[fol. 6398] Q. You turned in slips for all union meetings and the company paid you for all of them?

A. I wouldn't say the company paid me, but they must have paid me. I turned it in to my instructor, just the same as anything else.

Q. Do you remember a meeting of the group chairmen on May 2—that would be shortly after you were elected—at which contracts of other companies were discussed and at which the Labor Board hearing was discussed—on May 2, 1939?

A. I don't remember that particular meeting, but I know there was discussions of the trials and hearings all of the time.

Mr. Langsdale: That is the May 2 meeting, you say?

Mr. Tyler: May 2, 1939.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. If you attend that meeting, you are under the impression you were paid for it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will show you the minutes of that meeting, which is on page 4681 of the exhibits, and ask you to look at the minutes, and especially the first sentence, and see if that refreshes your memory as to the time at which that meeting was held.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the number of that exhibit, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: That is page—

[fol. 6399] Trial Examiner Batten: —4681. But what is the number of the exhibit?

Mr. Tyler: Board's exhibit 9-104.

Mr. Langsdale: That is the meeting of May 2?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Miss Weyand: That is one meeting of May 2. There were two meetings on May 2.

Trial Examiner Batten: This is page—

Miss Weyand: Page 4679 has a meeting of May 2, an earlier meeting.

Mr. Tyler: This is the second meeting of May 2.

(Thereupon the exhibit referred to in the last question was read by the witness.)

A. What I am reading here is just what was my big disappointment. It was in your talk that we should always hold in mind that we was representing those operators, who we was supposed to be representing, and I only felt I done my duty when I done so, but I didn't get anywhere with it. I was always put off and told to talk to them. And there was just the same complaints coming up week after week—no action being done. This is just why I was sincere when I went on this committee. I was sincere, but I seen that they wasn't sincere.

Mr. Tyler: Now, I move that the witness' answer be stricken as not responsive and she be directed to answer the question.

[fol. 6400] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. The question is, do the minutes of this meeting that I show you on this page refresh your recollection as to the time of day it was held?

A. No, not the time of day. I think I remember the first [fol. 6401] meeting. It seems it was held—

Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking you, do the minutes of this meeting refresh your recollection as to the time of day it was held?

A. This says, in the evening, but—

Q. That does not refresh your recollection?

A. No.

[fol. 6404] Mr. Tyler: You mean your meetings began at 10 after 4?

A. No. We got off at the early time, 10 after 4, and the meetings didn't take up until 5, the regular meetings.

[fol. 6405] Mr. Tyler: I am going to make this perfectly clear, now.

The minutes of the first meeting I show the witness state that a meeting of the union chairmen was held on Tuesday evening, May 2, and the date above it is 1939.

The witness says that statement does not refresh her memory as to the time that meeting was held. That is on page, Circuit Court record, 4681; that has already been stated.

I then show her the minutes of the group chairmen meeting for May 2, consisting of one page and one paragraph preceding that meeting, which commences with the sentence, "Mr. Tyler is to be here at 5 o'clock this evening [fol. 6406] for the purpose of meeting the new chairmen." That is all I consider relevant. And I ask her if that statement refreshes her recollection as to when the second meeting on May 2 was held.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question for the reason that the witness has never stated anything about the time of the meeting of the second—

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the witness has already testified these matters do not refresh her recollection as to the time of the meetings.

Is that right, Miss Witness?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, the minutes of the first meeting are just over a page long, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. Let me read it.

(Thereupon the minutes above referred to were handed to the witness by Mr. Tyler and read by the witness.)

A. Yes, I do remember that.

Q. Wasn't it held at noon?

A. I just couldn't say the time of day.

Q. And wasn't it held on your own time?

A. On my own time?

Q. Not on company time?

A. Well, I was always late getting back to work. I [fol. 6407] always had some time to turn in.

Q. You were always late?

A. Back to my machine, yes.

Q. Were you late after this second meeting of May 2?

A. I couldn't say about that particular meeting.

Q. Were you paid for that particular meeting?

A. If that meeting was held at the time stated here (indicating), I wasn't. I had time out.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of the group chairmen held on May 16, 1939?

A. Well, I don't know, but I imagine I did, if I was there.

Q. Didn't you state that after the first meeting you attended you became disgusted with the union and didn't take any part in it?

A. About the first—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that. She didn't say anything of the sort. She didn't say "after the first meeting."

Mr. Tyler: She said—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the record will show what she said.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You don't know whether you attended the meeting of group chairmen on May 16, 1939?

A. Not that particular day, no. I might have been absent; I don't think I was, though.

Q. Did you make a motion at that meeting on that date?

[fol. 6408] A. Not to my remembrance now.

Q. Did you ever make a motion that the fees of attorneys for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union be paid? A. I don't recall right now.

Q. I will show you the minutes of the meeting of group chairmen of May 16, 1939, Board's exhibit No. 9-111, at page 4689. You may read the entire minutes, if you wish to, but all I wish to call your attention to is the statement in the middle of the page as to your making the motion, and I will ask you if that is true or false.

(Thereupon the minutes above referred to were read by the witness.)

[fol. 6409] A. I may have done so; I may have made the motion.

Q. If you did make it, did anybody force you to make it, by threats or—

A. No, nobody threatened me with anything.

Q. And if you did make it, did you still believe that the union was a good thing and was the actual choice of the employees—if you made this motion?

A. I thought it was necessary.

Q. You were willing at that time to move that the union pay attorneys for representing it, were you?

A. I knew that—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question. Her willingness to pay counsel has no relation whatever to her belief about the union.

Mr. Tyler: I think it has a bearing.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think it has any relationship at all.

[fol. 6410] Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. I knew if we had a union, it was necessary to have an attorney.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6413] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer whether you attended meetings regularly up to that one you recall in Mr. Tyler's office.

A. It seems to me in between these union meetings we were having meetings at noon, too.

[fol. 6414] Q. If you were, were you attending all of the meetings up to that time?

A. I couldn't say if I attended each one.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. But you were attending regularly up to and including the meeting we have just referred to on June 1, haven't you?

A. I don't remember whether it was every one or not.

Q. I don't mean every one, but you were attending regularly, were you not?

A. Fairly regularly, yes.

Q. And some of those meetings were at noon, you say?

A. I couldn't say whether it was at that particular time or not, but at some of these evening meetings, when we had them, we had noon meetings, too.

Q. You were doing piecework, were you, then?

A. Oh, yes. I have always done piecework.

Q. And in what way did the company pay you for attending these meetings, or any of them?

A. By me handing my time slip to my instructor, as I stated before.

Q. And what did the instructor put on the time slip?

A. I don't know. I would put on, "Time spent at chairmen union meetings," and sign my name, and give it to the instructor.

Q. You got paid by the amount of work you turned out [fol. 6415] as a pieceworker, did you?

A. I had a guarantee for the week, and I usually made over my guarantee.

Q. If you didn't turn out as much work as you would otherwise, you wouldn't get as much pay; is that right?

A. I would always get the guaranteed amount. If you didn't get that much that week, you would get the guarantee.

Q. And that guarantee would apply whether you were taking time out for union meetings or whether you were not, wouldn't it?

A. I could tell if I was paid, because, as I say, I almost always made over my guarantee.

Q. Don't you know as a fact that the company never paid you for time spent at union meetings?

A. I didn't know that. That's news to me.

Q. Who was your instructor in May, 1939?

A. I believe it was Mary Copowycz.

Q. When did you last see your pay cards for May, 1939?

A. I can't say that.

Q. Not for a couple of years, did you?

A. I don't get that question clearly.

Q. When did you last see the cards that indicate the time for which you were paid? When did you last see them? A. I never did see any cards.

Q. You never did see them?

[fol. 6416] A. No.

Q. I now show you Board's exhibit 1-RRRR, which is an offer of proof by the intervener, and I show you what is apparently your name on the third page of signatures, being the ninth name down on the right-hand side, and ask you if that is your signature. A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: That offer of proof begins on page 3471, Circuit Court of Appeals record, and the page containing the signature is page 3476.

* * * * * * *

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6423] Mr. Stoffle: Yes, Mr. Examiner. We have had photostated respondent's exhibit 44, and we now offer the photostats and ask leave to withdraw the original exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection—

Miss Weyand: (Interrupting). I object. The original has not been identified as a record of the company. It appears on a card which is practically new, and the dates purport to go back to 1925. It is all in one handwriting, as far as I can observe, and all in the same ink, and under the circumstances I do not think it should be withdrawn at this time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if there is any objection I won't permit its withdrawal.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6427] Mr. Tyler: Mrs. Weilert, just before we recessed for noon I think you had identified your signature to offer of proof of Intervener which I now show you and which is page 3490 of the record.

Mr. Langsdale: Is that on the one that has the largest number of names in the section?

Miss Weyand: That is a smaller one.

Mr. Tyler: No, it is only the bottom of one page of names, a half a page of names.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Am I correct in my memory that you said that was [fol. 6428] your signature? A. That is my signature.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to read this offer of proof, Mrs. Weilert? A. No.

Q. Well, I am going to read you two parts of it, and I think it will be proper to ask questions about those parts, but you will certainly have the right to read the whole letter if you want to add any explanation.

Miss Weyand: You don't mean letter, you mean offer.

Mr. Tyler: I mean offer.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. At the bottom of the second page appears this paragraph:

"The chairman then passed out cards which said in substance: 'I hereby agree to become a charter member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and agree to abide by its by-laws and regulations.' It was explained that the employees could sign these cards or not as they chose, and that they should sign them when if doing so was their own voluntary choice."

Is that statement true or false?

A. They were always passing out those cards, but in signing that I don't think we used our best judgment.

Q. Now, your memory as to passing out those cards was just as good when you made this affidavit in 1939 as it is [fol. 6429] now, wasn't it?

Miss Weyand: That is not an affidavit.

Mr. Tyler: I am sorry.

Trial Examiner Batten: An offer of proof.

Mr. Tyler: An offer of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative.

Mr. Tyler: I think that is proper in testing her memory.

Trial Examiner Batten: He is asking if her memory was as good then as it is now.

A. That was in 1939?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, this offer of proof was made in 1939.

Miss Weyand: You have not designated what chairman passed out what cards at what meeting. You will have to point out.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Isn't it clear to you it was the organizational meeting when the cards were passed out?

A. It is now since you mentioned it.

Q. Well, I believe you answered that it is true the employees were told they could sign those cards or not as they chose, and that they should sign them if in so doing it was their own voluntary choice.

A. I was always told that.

Q. When you signed that did you believe that in sub-[fol. 6430] stance was not true, that the employees were not free to sign the cards?

A. I don't know whether everyone felt free but I think everyone of them did sign that.

Q. Well, was it true you felt free to sign it or not when it was passed out?

A. I felt like if I didn't sign it I wouldn't have a job.

Q. And you felt you were not free then, didn't you?

A. I don't know what you would call it.

Q. All right. And when you signed this statement you then signed something you believed was not true, is that correct?

A. I don't know whether it was true or not. I told you how I felt about it.

Q. I'll read you the last sentence — or the first sentence in the last paragraph of the offer of proof, which would be 3492, or possibly 3493 of the record:

"That organization meeting convened at 4:30 or 4 —"

I think that is 45, as near as I can read it. The first hour is 4:30, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And the next one, I think, is 4:45?

A. Well, I can't tell.

Q. I can't either. Let's assume it is 4:45:

"This organization meeting convened at 4:30 or 4:45 o'clock and lasted about an hour and a half or longer." [fol. 6431]. Was that statement as to the time it convened true when you signed it?

A. If that was the organizing of our union I still think I am right.

Q. Well, was this true or not, that the meeting convened at 4:30 or 4:45?

A. I don't know what time it was over, I don't remember that. Is that the meeting where I said I went back and timed out?

Q. Well, this is the organizational meeting. And we are agreed "Convened" means "began", when it started.

A. Well, it was in the afternoon it started.

Q. Then, was the statement that it convened at 4:30 or 4:45 true or false?

A. It might have been; it might have been after our quitting time and we went back upstairs and timed out.

Q. And your memory, when you signed this, about those facts happening in March, was at least as good as it is now, wasn't it?

A. Why, I don't know what my memory was then.

Q. Don't you think your memory in 1939 as to events happening in April 1937 was as good as it is now, at least?

Mr. Langsdale. I object to the question as argumentative.

A. I don't know whether it was or not.

[fol. 6432] Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment —

Trial Examiner Batten: She has answered it, she says she doesn't know whether it was or not.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. When these offers of proof that have been shown you were signed by you were you still of the opinion that it was the full, free wish of the employees to belong to the union?

A. I felt it was what I should do if I wanted to work there.

Q. Please answer my question. When you signed these offers of proof were you of the opinion that the union was the free will choice of the employees?

A. As far as I knew about it then.

Q. You thought it was, as far as you knew about it?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you said something about telling Rose Todd that you were pleased with what had been done, but there wasn't nothing done?

A. That's right.

Q. You realized that the union had secured substantial advantages for the employees up to that time, had you?

A. I couldn't say that.

Q. You didn't see any signs —

A. (Interrupting) No.

Q. (Continuing) —that the contracts of the union had [fol. 6433] secured increases in minimums and additional holidays on up beyond what they had had before, you didn't know that?

A. I couldn't see that they were bettering things.

Q. Well, will you say that the union had not secured increases in minimum wages and holidays for which pay was allowed?

A. I just don't remember what the minimums were. That one incident, I think, that $15.00, that one incident; but they had been arguing about that for some time anyway, because after they had worked there a long time I think they would have been paid anyway without the union.

Q. You think they did get increases but they would have gotten them anyway whether there was a union or not?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the rule about not paying girls for repair time was rescinded, was changed by the company after about six weeks after it was put in?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6434] Miss Weyand: I object to the question in that you have misstated the rule that was supposedly put into effect and changed. I think if the question is allowed it should be cleared up what incident you are referring to because you said the matter of not paying girls for the time they did repairs was rescinded, whereas the testimony was that the change was that not only the girls weren't paid for the time, but that there was a further deduction made.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You heard Miss Weyand's statement, Mrs. Weilert?

A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't the rule she speaks of changed by the company about 6 weeks after it went into effect?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten. She may answer.

A. After the union went into effect?

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. No, after the rule went into effect the girls wouldn't be paid time spent on repairs. Wasn't that rule changed by the company after about 6 weeks?

A. It was changed after I objected to their practice, yes.

Q. And it was changed then partially either because you objected to it, or because the union objected or requested that it be changed, wasn't it?

[fol. 6435] A. My opinion is that it was changed because I demanded that put on their checks.

Q. You think the sole cause was your personal demand?

A. I don't know of anyone else that objected to it in that way on the committee.

Q. Don't you know whether the union took that up?

A. I don't know whether she did or not, Rose Todd, she was arguing for the company with me.

Q. Isn't it a fact you refused to do any repair work at all before you left the company even if the company had paid you for repair work?

A. I said that if it came back to me, after it came back I wouldn't rip it, and when it came back that is just what I done, I refused to rip it.

Q. Whether the company paid you for the time or not you refused to do any repair work, whether the company paid you for repair time or not, before you quit?

A. Well, I guess that is the way it was.

Redirect Examination.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state what the rule was about paying the girls for repairs prior to the change that you complained of?

[fol. 6436] A. Why, it has always been the same, as far as I know, that when they lost time I considered — no girl likes repairs, she didn't make mistakes deliberately.

Q. Well, was she paid for the time she spent making repairs?

A. If she didn't make her guarantee she certainly was because she got her guarantee in salary just the same.

Q. And if she was making her guarantee anyway did she get paid for the time she made repairs?

A. She couldn't have, she lost that time repairing.

Q. And she did it on her own time if she was making her guarantee for the week, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what was the change in the rule?

A. That those that didn't make their guarantee for the week — well, the way I would have to express it, that girl would have to pay the company to stay there and repair after she had lost her time and hadn't even made her guarantee anyway; now, that is my way of expressing it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, how would that work out?

A. Well, maybe if she hadn't had to repair she might have made her guarantee. Well, if she had repairs, why, that certainly kept her from making money on piece work, and time spent repairing she could have spent making money.

Trial Examiner Batten: What you mean is, if the [fol. 6437] minimum was $16.50 and she earned $15.00 making dresses —

A. (Interrupting) That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing) —and she had four hours of repair work —

A. (Interrupting) That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing) —she then lost that $1.50?

A. That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Which she would have made had she made a dozen more dresses?

A. That's right. When she received her check all the time that she spent on those repairs was deducted from that guarantee; and any time anyone, they did not have any guarantee because, you know, mistakes will happen to anyone — I don't know of anybody down there that didn't have repairs once in a while.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you went to Rose Todd about that matter what did you say to her?

A. I asked Rose Todd what was the meaning of taking out of these girls' checks for repairs, and she said, "Well, we have always taken out for the repairs, the company has always taken out for the repairs," and I said, "Rose, I have worked here a long time and I have had repairs the same as other people," and I said, "No one has ever taken money out of my check," and she said, "Well, that is Mrs. [fol. 6438] Reed's" — no, I asked her, I said, "Who authorized them to do this, Rose?" and she said, "Mrs. Reed did," and that is when I told her I didn't believe it, and I sincerely meant that, that didn't sound like Mrs. Reed to me.

Q. Did you know what the terms of the union contract with the company in regard to the minimum guarantee were at that time?

A. Well, if they were on a $20 guarantee they were supposed to have $20, that was my opinion; if they didn't make it they were supposed to get $20 anyway. There were lots of times when you waited for work, and other conditions existed that you wouldn't be able to make that amount, or over.

Q. When you spoke to Rose Todd did you mention the terms of the contract to her?

A. Yes, I did. I told her I felt it wasn't worth the paper it was written on to me, that an "if" or an "and" to the average person just changed the meaning of it, and in my opinion I didn't feel like that contract was worth anything.

Q. Did Rose Todd agree to take it up with the company on behalf of the employees?

A. I told her I didn't think it was fair or reasonable to make those deductions from the employees; she said maybe they had been a little hasty. I said, "Are you going to stand for it as our chairman?" and I said, "Well, I'll see Mrs. Reed myself," which I did later on.

[fol. 6439] Q. Did you ever receive any checks or money or payments in other forms from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for the time you spent at chairmen meetings?

A. No, not only my regular checks.

Q. And by regular checks you mean what?

A. My salary.

Q. From whom?

A. The Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. And those were the only payments you received?

A. Yes.

Q. This morning, in answer to a question, you said you became convinced, after the circumstances that you discovered at meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union chairmen that "They were not sincere." Whom do you mean by "they"? A. The company.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Wolfert, you were shown this offer of proof of the intervener on which your name was signed on the second page, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. You were shown that by Mr. Tyler? A. Yes.

[fol. 6440] Q. And did you read it?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Well, you read it all the way through.

Mr. Tyler: Which one is that, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: I don't know how you designate it. It is just one page of signatures.

Miss Weyand: That is 3490 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

[fol. 6441] A. No, I didn't read the first part until just now.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You have now read it all, have you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when you signed this document—pardon me.

Mr. Langsdale: Give me the exhibit number of this.

Mr. Lane: 1 quadruple R.

Mr. Langsdale: Are they all 1 quadruple R?

Mr. Lane: All the offers are, and that is page—

Miss Weyand (Interrupting): 3492 where her signature appears.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know where you signed this document?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know how you happened to sign it?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Do you know when you signed it?

A. No. We were signing so many things I can't designate any certain one.

Q. So your recollection of how, when and where, and under what circumstances you signed it, is absolutely nil, is it?

A. Well, I don't recall when I signed that particular paper, no.

Q. Now, I notice there are 36 names signed to this document. Were you all there at the same time, do you know?

[fol. 6442] A. I don't even remember of it.

Q. You have stated in your testimony that the instructor told you of the meeting of April 27?

A. That's right—well, all of them.

Q. I understand, but the organizational meeting of April 27, your instructor told you about it, did she?

A. Yes.

Q. That is true, is it, the instructor told you about it?

A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as an attempt to rehabilitate the witness.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did she say about it?

A. She said there was to be a meeting downstairs and to shut the power off, and we all just went down.

Q. And did she say anything more?

A. Well, once she told us they were going to organize our union.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6444] Mr. Langsdale: And you testified that meeting occurred during working hours?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: So then this part of this document, which you signed, is not true?

* * * * * *

Mr. Lane: May I have a continuing objection to all this examination? It is a mere attempt to get the witness to reverse what she has formerly said.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that comment because it is not an attempt to get the witness to reverse her previous testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6445] Mr. Langsdale: Or "That said meeting was convened after the close of working hours at the plant." That is not true, is it?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6446] A. I don't remember what time the meeting was over, but it was started in the afternoon sometime, and I went back up and timed out. I didn't time out before I went down there, I came all the way back to the eighth floor to time out and put my work away.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you understand the meaning of the word "convened"?

A. Maybe I don't, clearly.

Q. That means to start.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did the meeting start after working hours, or—

A. (Interrupting) No, it started in the afternoon before working hours were over.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, I will ask you if this part of this document [fol. 6447] signed by 36 people is true, "Nor did any instructor ask or direct the employees to attend."

A. They told us that there was to be a meeting, and they went along with us.

Q. All right. Did you hear any discussion that afternoon or any motion that came up?

A. No, we didn't discuss anything. We were told that we were going to have a union.

Q. But when the matter of the name of the union came up, did anybody debate it? A. No.

Q. The name was already printed on the cards, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you if this particular statement: "The name of the union was discussed," was true?

A. I don't know who it was discussed with.

Q. Well, did anybody debate it or—

A. (Interrupting) At that meeting?

Q. (Continuing)—question it or discuss it?

A. No.

Q. Now, the last paragraph in this document, it starts out: "This organization meeting convened at 4:30 or 4:45 o'clock," is that true? A. That it—

Q. (Interrupting) Convened that late in the afternoon? [fol. 6448] A. No.

[fol. 6458] Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

[fol. 6459] Q. Mrs. Weilert, you told Mr. Tyler, in substance, that you did not think that your Donnelly Garment Workers' Union contract had helped your wage situation any. Do you remember that—you thought the company would have done as well by you without it? Have I fairly stated that? A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you know of any other union contract with a garment manufacturing concern like the Donnelly Garment Company, with guarantees of as much as $16.50, $20.00, $22.50, and $25.60 a week?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case and involves a subject which has been ruled out by the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Do you know of any?

A. I'm not familiar with other factories' guarantees. I don't work at other places.

Q. I didn't know but what you might have some general familiarity with it.

A. No, I'm not familiar with other factories at all.

Q. In saying you didn't think this contract ha helped your situation any, did you know how the guarantees provided in that contract compared with other contracts?

A. Only what Rose Todd showed us.

Q. What did she show you?

[fol. 6460] Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It does not prove or disprove any issue in this case. If we are going into these contracts—

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. She showed us a list of garment factories and the—

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. —guarantees? A. Yes.

Q. She gave you the substance of what those contracts provided, as far as guarantees were concerned? A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: May I have a continuing objection to this?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Isn't it a fact, Mrs. Weilert, that the guarantees which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union contract provided were from 50 to 200 percent in excess of those in the contracts that Rose Todd told you about?

A. I don't—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as improper. The contracts themselves would be the best evidence. I object to this as an effort to prove what would be in an I. L. G. W. U. contract by secondary evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: No. It is simply an attempt to prove what Rose Todd said there. It isn't an attempt to prove what the contracts actually show.

[fol. 6461] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Isn't it true that the guarantees in the Donnelly contract were from 50—depending, of course, upon the varying character of service—from 50 to 200 percent in excess of the guarantees in these contracts that Rose Todd told you about?

A. I don't remember just the guarantee amounts of the other factories now, but I still say our union didn't help any.

Q. I know. And I am testing the reasonableness of your conclusion. That is why I am asking you these questions.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the line of examination. The witness' distinguishing, herself, between what would be proper and what would not be proper—

Mr. Hogsett: She wasn't comparing her wage scale with another factory's, but she was saying they were no better in the Donnelly factory because of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

Mr. Hogsett: Isn't this much true: From such knowledge as you acquired on the subject of wages at other garment factories, that the wages contracted for and the wages paid in the Donnelly plant were far in excess of those contracted for and paid in any other garment plant that you ever heard of?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Will you read that question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Not that you ever heard of—[fol. 6462] Mr. Hogsett: That you then heard of.

Trial Examiner Batten: That she then heard of, in this talk with Rose Todd, or what—

Mr. Langsdale: Is this confined to the talk with Rose Todd?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes; as far as the information Rose Todd disclosed to the witness.

The Witness: Maybe Rose didn't show me a list of the other factories.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Whether she showed you all of them or only one, were the contracts Rose Todd showed you and told you about—was there less guarantee in those than in the Donnelly Garment Company's?

A. Yes, the ones she showed me.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Do you know of any others she didn't show you?

A. No. I'm not familiar with their contracts.

Q. How many did she show you?

A. You mean, different factories?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recall.

Q. Nine or ten?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as assuming it was either nine or ten.

[fol. 6463] Mr. Hogsett: It's a question: Was it nine or ten?

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know, Miss Witness, how many it was?

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Can you tell me approximately how many contracts she showed you?

A. She didn't show me any contracts.

Q. You said awhile ago she hadn't shown you "all of the contracts." What did you mean by that?

A. She hadn't shown me any contracts.

Q. What did she show you, or tell you?

A. This that was in the trial, that they had brought it out in the trial.

Q. I thought that was probably what you meant. Isn't this a fact, that Rose Todd showed you the figures that had been sworn to under oath and produced in documentary form in nine contracts with the International in house dress and wash frock concerns in the Kansas City territory, and in the only silk shop, namely, the Marlene dress factory, in the Kansas City territory?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, did she show her the contracts?

Mr. Hogsett: The figures in those contracts.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did she have a list of those, the figures for each place, Miss Witness?

A. No. She just pointed out the shops that were paying [fol. 6464] less than the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Did she read the amounts? A. Yes.

Q. She went down the list— A. Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: In other words, she gave you indefinite figures that had been sworn to and produced in documentary form in the—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, Mr. Langsdale,—

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I—

Mr. Hogsett: Will you, please, before you answer a question for me, take a good look at Mr. Langsdale and see if he is objecting, so that I will not constantly be interrupted in my questioning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hogsett: —in the equity suit tried before Judge Miller, didn't she?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute.

Mr. Hogsett: Please wait until he objects.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to the question as assuming what Rose Todd showed her was in any documentary form sworn to or used in any court proceeding [fol. 6465] whatsoever, unless she knows. He doesn't ask her if she knows.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Of course, Miss Witness, you said she had a list, didn't you?

A. I started to answer in that way.

Q. All you know is, she had a list? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where she got the figures or the names?

A. No.

Q. Or the information? A. Not at all.

Mr. Hogsett: Didn't you tell me not ten minutes ago that she gave it to you as having been produced in the trial before Judge Miller?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. She didn't tell him any such thing. I object to the misquoting of the witness.

Mr. Hogsett: I am not misquoting.

Mr. Langsdale: I think he is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you tell him that?

A. I don't think I told you she gave it to me. She read it to me.

Mr. Hogsett: Oh, well, I won't quibble about whether she gave it to you or read it to you.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just push your chair back that [fol. 6466] way, Mr. Hogsett.

(Thereupon Mr. Hogsett moved his chair farther from the witness.)

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did she read it to you as having been produced at the trial before Judge Miller?

A. That's what she told me.

Q. How many different amounts or sets of figures did she read to you? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Was it nine or ten? A. I wouldn't say.

Q. Now, did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union do anything at all that you approved of?

A. Not the union, no.

Q. What was the guarantee in the Donnelly plant, the minimum, before the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Well, as I stated before, in that contract that was the one thing that was changed, but that would have come about without the union, I'm sure.

Q. Would you be kind enough to answer my question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

The question to you is, what was the guarantee before the union was organized?

A. Different guarantees.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. What was the minimum guarantee?

[fol. 6467] A. Fifteen.

Q. Fifteen dollars a week? A. Yes.

Q. For how long had that been the minimum guarantee in the Donnelly plant? A. I can't say how long.

Q. For years? All of the time you were there?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. How many years would that have been prior to 1937?

A. Three or four years.

Q. Now, this contract that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union negotiated provided for a minimum guarantee of $16.50; did it not?

A. That was the change that was made, yes.

[fol. 6479] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. That is not the question. Had you known Mrs. Reed to do an unjust thing to her employees in your entire employment there? A. I don't know what she does.

Q. Well, I am asking if you ever heard of her doing an unjust thing to her employees? A. Not deliberately.

Q. Deliberately or otherwise, have you ever known of an unjust thing that emanated from Mrs. Reed in your entire employment there?

Mr. Langsdale: I have a continuing objection there, [fol. 6480] I assume?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Will you kindly answer?

A. I never came in contact with Mrs. Reed.

Q. Would you mind giving me a direct answer, whether you ever came in contact with her or not, had you ever known any unjust thing that Mrs. Reed ever did during your entire employment there?

A. Not Mrs. Reed herself.

Q. Mrs. Reed directly or indirectly? I want an answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. What was that answer?

A. Not Mrs. Reed herself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you say "directly or indirectly." It seems to me you are taking in a lot of territory.

Mr. Hogsett: I mean to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I know you mean to. That is the reason I am asking you about it. What do you mean by "indirectly"? Do you mean through all her supervisory employees and management?

Mr. Hogsett: I mean exactly that.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to it on the ground the question is preposterous.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I wouldn't permit the witness to answer that question if she wanted to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6486] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. In spite of your dissatisfaction, which you say was complete so far as the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was concerned, you returned to work for the company after your absence in 1940, and again returned to work for the company after your absence in 1941, did you not?

A. I worked for the company, not the union.

Q. Yes, but you were entirely dissatisfied with everything the union had arranged with the company about employment, weren't you?

A. Just with the union I was dissatisfied, not the company.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6491] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Weilert, in answer to a question by Mr. Langsdale, about the request for an election, that these employees signed, as you have been shown, you made some statement that you were under the impression that related to something the union hadn't done properly in the first place. Do you mean that you believe or are under the impression that the labor union is not a valid labor union unless the Labor Board holds an election for it, is that your opinion?

[fol. 6492] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

A. I don't know as I understand those terms; but my answer was and is that we evidently had signed something that should have been notarized, and was not, and this was a repetition of that, and it was being notarized; it was merely a paper we had signed before and was doing it over again.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Well, do you remember that this paper said that the employees wanted an election? Was it your impression [fol. 6493] that a labor union was not a legal labor union unless the Labor Board had called an election in the plant?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just ask her the question. I mean, you ask her, "What do you mean when you said there was something wrong with the union?"

[fol. 6494] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Was there something in the fact the union hadn't had an election by the Labor Board that you felt that this application for an election was to cure?

A. I didn't know what was wrong.

Q. You didn't know whether it was the lack of an election or not?

A. There was something, or some rumor, it was something we had to sign again. I just don't remember that clearly.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, the question to you is, you say you thought there was something wrong. Mr. Tyler asked you what you thought was wrong.

A. Well, I don't know what it was myself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that is the answer, you don't know, is that it?

A. Yes, I guess it is.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Were these employees sincere in asking for an election?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to him asking for her to pass upon the sincerity of other employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think she can hardly pass on the sincerity of all the — is there 800 persons on there, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I think there is 1186.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't hardly think this witness could pass upon their sincerity.

[fol. 6495] Mr. Tyler: All right.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did anybody in the plant ever tell you that they really didn't want to have a secret election down there in which everybody would vote without the management knowing how they voted?

A. Well, I always wondered why they didn't have.

Q. You thought they were entitled to that, didn't you?

A. Well, I thought they should have it.

Q. And you still do?

A. I don't think anything about it.

Q. In the meeting of group chairmen on May 2, in 1939, in which Mr. Langsdale called attention to a statement made by Mr. Tyler, that 15 or 20 people from this union testified in Federal Court, and they did a swell job of it, do you remember Mr. Tyler saying in that same meeting this: "If any one on this committee thinks they aren't working for these 1300 people, but for Mrs. Reed or Mrs. Reeves or Mr. Baty or someone else, I want to know it. You are representing that you are going to make a good bargain and take care of these 1300 people. In working on this committee, you aren't working for Mrs. Reed, you are working for these 1300 employees. If there is any doubt about that, if you do not believe that, speak up now and say so." Do you remember Mr. Tyler saying that in that meeting?

A. To us chairmen?

[fol. 6496] Q. Yes.

A. I certainly do, and that is why I say, in all sincerity, about what I was trying to do, I thought I was doing my duty.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Why did you say you thought it would have been better to have gone without vacations rather than have the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Because I felt like that place was progressing just the same, and those nice things would have come along just as well without this union, far better; I think there would have been much more happiness in the plant without this union than there would have been with it.

Q. Can you explain that further, as to what you thought the union has done that lessened the happiness of the plant?

A. Why, it is just discontent since the union came in.

Q. What do you have reference to specifically?

A. Well, before the union, it seemed — well, I don't know — it seemed like when they go through with their grievances to the union, why, it is merely passed along to someone else, and before it is over, the very thing you have told them about is used against you.

Q. Do you know of any instance of that?

[fol. 6497] A. I have cited that in the instance where I was framed.

Q. Did you hear of any other girl ever complaining to the union and who felt that she got worse conditions because of making a complaint to the union?

A. I wouldn't —

Mr. Tyler: I object to that as hearsay. It wouldn't establish the truth of such an instance, if she merely heard of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer?

A. I wouldn't speak for others. I am speaking for myself.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I am asking if you ever heard any such a thing occur.

Mr. Tyler: I object on the ground it would be hearsay.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. On the committee, you mean, or in the factory?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you ever heard any girl, as a result of complaining in a union meeting or to a committee or anywhere, complain that she had been treated unfairly because she had made the complaint?

A. I don't know that they put it in those words, that it was merely because of the complaint, but I think it was done, plenty of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment —

Mr. Tyler: I move to strike that out as a conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: When you say "plenty of [fol. 6498] them," do you know the names of several girls who have been treated unfairly?

A. No, I know no names.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, if the Court please, that is pure speculation out of the blue sky. This witness is showing animus now, and she is willing to say, "I think it is done, plenty of it," without knowing the name of a single person; I move to strike it out.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the scurrilous comment made to this witness by Mr. Hogsett.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Hogsett, if you think that is true, why do you object to having this remain? Why do you want it stricken?

Mr. Hogsett: Because it will be here unobjected to, unless somebody on our side objects to it, and treated, maybe, as evidence, and it is not evidence, it is not worth the name of evidence.

Miss Weyand: There was plenty of things the company put out that I didn't think came under the head of evidence either.

Mr. Hogsett: This is not that type of case at all. Here is a fair question asked either by the Examiner or by somebody — I guess it was Miss Weyand — I think it was you, "Do you know anybody?" "No, I don't, but there was plenty of it." Now, she can't name a person, yet she is [fol. 6499] perfectly willing to leave that statement that "there was plenty of it." Now, that is not evidence.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question and answer, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean my question?

Mr. Langsdale: The question which she just answered, and where she said "plenty of it."

(Thereupon the question requested was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Have you ever heard any girl, as a result of complaining in a union meeting or to a committee or anywhere, complain that she had been treated unfairly because she had made the complaint?")

Miss Weyand. My question was — I don't think it was stated quite accurately — Did you ever hear that any operator felt that because she had made a complaint either to a committee or in a union meeting she received unfair treatment?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Reed: Now, we object to that as incompetent and immaterial, not redirect or recross-examination, whatever this is, and as calling for a mere speculation on the part of the witness, as to the feelings of somebody else, and if this was proven, it would be binding on no one.

Mr. Tyler: We object to it on the ground that if it would establish anything, it would tend to establish that injustice existed as to individuals and the union, and as [fol. 6500] being purely hearsay, without even the statement of the people themselves; and regardless of any fact it would be improper evidence, being hearsay.

Trial Examiner Batten: I still want the reporter to read my question and the answer to my question; that is what we started out to discuss.

(Thereupon the question requested was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. When you say 'plenty of them' do you know the names of several girls who have been treated unfairly?

"A. No, I know no names.")

Mr. Hogsett: And I would like to have you pass on the motion that you strike out that statement of the witness that "there was plenty of it."

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think my question was, when she added that on, "yes, plenty," I said to the witness, "Well, can you name any of the people," and she said she couldn't.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, I move to strike out the statement "there were plenty of complaints" on all the grounds heretofore given.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it may stand, Mr. Hogsett, in view of my question to the witness and her statement that she couldn't name anyone.

Mr. Hogsett: All right, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6502] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know it to be a fact there wasn't a single human being who received any raise at all by reason of the $16.50 minimum in the contract of June 22, 1937?

Mr. Reed: You mean by that question to assert that as a fact?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, sir.

Mr. Reed: And you ask it in this leading form?

Mr. Langsdale: I assert it is not a fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 6503] A. I don't know whether they did or not.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6512] Q. Now, when you signed this affidavit, asking for an election to determine which union had a majority in the Donnelly plant, did you think it was a nice time to ask for an election, when there was a closed shop agreement requiring everybody to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and recognizing some by-laws that said anyone that belonged to any other union would have to be fired? Did you think that was a convenient time for the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to ask for an election?

Mr. Reed: I think just this, that Mr. Langsdale ought to ask leave to print that; that is the custom of the men that want to make a speech, that is out of order.

Mr. Langsdale: You should know, Senator.

Mr. Reed: I do know.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please? Of course, I think it is repetition. If I remember correctly, you asked this witness once before about the closed shop.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I don't care whether it is in there or not.

(Thereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You asked this witness something about a closed shop contract, and if she didn't know that if it was a closed shop contract no one could join any other union, and it seems to me that you also said, "Isn't [fol. 6513] it true that no one could join any other union under the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union contract or by-laws?"

Mr. Langsdale: But, this question, I think, is proper cross-examination after Mr. Tyler had asked her if she wasn't in favor of having an election when she signed that document drawn up by Mr. Tyler back in May, 19— or June or July, 1939, he asked her if she wasn't in favor of one at that time, and I think she said, "yes." I am asking her now if she thought it was a nice, convenient time to have one, and if there wasn't a chance for anybody else to work there if they belonged to any other union.

Mr. Tyler: Now, I would like to enter my objection. In the first place, the fact that there was a closed shop wouldn't present the slightest difficulty in a secret election and allowing a secret election to govern, because any closed shop agreement could be set aside by a secret election, and Mr. Langsdale knows it; and in the second place, the witness has already answered the question, and said she thought there should be an election, and his only object is to get her to say, "No, I don't think there should have been an election," which is not proper.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there isn't a prompt objection to the question, I'll now enter one and sustain it.

So, let's proceed.

[fol. 6514] Q. Did you have a thought that by a secret election the employees might get rid of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. That was my opinion.

Recross-Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Just briefly— You told Mr. Langsdale in this last series of questions of his that this contract didn't get you a single thing of benefit. That has been the substance of what you told him.

I read from 4378 this term in the contract:

"The employer recognizes the union as the sole bargaining agency of the employees."

Prior to this contract did the Donnelly employees have any bargaining agent?

A. I didn't think we needed any.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness is, did they have a bargaining agent prior to this contract?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you didn't, did you?

A. No.

[fol. 6515] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. You didn't have any before this contract, did you?

A. Before the union was formed, no.

Q. You didn't have any agreement for arbitration such as you got in this contract, did you—had no agreement of any kind about arbitration? A. We didn't need it.

Q. Whether you needed it or not, you didn't have any?

A. No.

Q. You didn't have any agreement that there should be no strikes, stoppages, or lockouts, did you? Whether you needed it or not, you didn't have it? A. No.

Q. You didn't have any arrangement binding the company on the subject of vacations, did you, until this contract? Regardless of whether they were giving you pay for vacations, there was no contract that bound them to keep on doing it until they entered into this contract; isn't that true? A. No. We didn't need it.

Q. Whether you needed it or not, you didn't have any binding agreement—

Trial Examiner Batten: She said, "No."

Mr. Hogsett: All right.

Mr. Hogsett: You didn't have any agreement binding the company to pay half the premiums on your insurance—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6516] A. I feel they could have broke it just as easy with that contract—

Mr. Hogsett: It isn't a question of—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Hogsett.

The question is, there wasn't any contract prior to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, was there, requiring it?

[fol. 6517] A. No. We didn't need it.

Mr. Hogsett: Do you feel it necessary to argue this matter?

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Prior to this contract did you have any obligation binding the company to pay workers for Decoration Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day? A. No.

Q. Prior to this contract was there any obligation of the company fixing average minimums on group 1 operators of as much as $25.60 for 40 percent of them, $22.50 for 30 percent of them, and $20.00 per week for the remainder?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. Let me get the import of that question.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6519] The Witness: No.

Mr. Hogsett: I will ask the same question with respect to the guarantees of the group 2 operators, being: $20 a week for 40 percent of them; $18 a week for 30 percent of them; and $16.50 per week for the remainder. You had no obligation—

. . . . . .

[fol. 6520] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, did you have these rates before this contract?

A. I don't remember, before 1937.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6526] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever go around the factory in March, 1937, or April or May, 1937, and ascertain what was being paid to every class of employee and what the rules in the [fol. 6527] factory were as to all matters of employee representation? A. Did I—

Q. Did you ever go around the factory and make that investigation?

A. No. It was none of my business to.

Q. So you couldn't have taken this contract and compared with this contract what conditions and pay in the various departments were before the contract was entered into, could you?

A. No. That was not my business.

Q. And you didn't take the contract and compare it with previous conditions? A. No.

Q. Then, as far as you know, there might be 1, 50, or 100 changes in this contract in what had gone on before, couldn't there, as far as you know, of your own knowledge?

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I assume, Miss Witness, if you didn't know what the conditions were before the contract, as far as you are concerned, all of the items in the contract might be new and improvements; is that right?

The Witness: I can't say what I want to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Why?

Mr. Tyler: Won't you just answer the question?

Mr. Tyler: As far as you know, isn't that possible?

Mr. Langsdale: Is what possible?

[fol. 6528] Mr. Tyler: Not what you wish or what you would like to think, but what you really know.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a minute. In order that the witness understands— I think the question, in substance, is simply this: If you didn't know what any of the conditions were in the shop prior to the contract, as far as you were concerned, all of the provisions in the contract may have been improvements over what had theretofore existed; isn't that right?

A. They may have been, but I don't think they were.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Why don't you think they were?

A. Because I think those things would have come about even in a better way without the union than they did with it.

Q. Did you hear at the time the contract was entered into that many employees were terribly happy because they had gotten large increases and great improvements?

A. I never talked to very many that was pleased with that union.

Trial Examiner Batten: It isn't a question of whether they were pleased with the union. It is a question of whether they were pleased with the contract.

The Witness: No.

[fol. 6534] MARGUERITE KEYES, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

[fol. 6535] Direct Examination

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Marguerite Keyes.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. Are you here under subpoena? A. Yes, I am.

Q. What is your business? A. I am a manufacturer.

Q. Do you have a shop in Kansas City?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is the name of your shop?

A. Marguerite Keyes, Incorporated.

Q. Where is your shop located? A. 905 Broadway.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. In the spring of 1926.

Q. How long did you continue to be employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Until the spring of 1938.

Q. What was your position with the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6536] Company in March of 1937?

A. I was office manager and handled the finances of the company.

Q. I hand you I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10 which appears at pages 5375 and 5961 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to state when you first heard of that petition.

A. In the early spring of 1937.

Q. Where were you when you first heard of it?

A. In Mrs. Reed's home.

Q. What was the conversation that took place on that occasion?

A. Well, I had just come home from New York, and—

Mr. Lane: Just a moment, if Your Honor please. The intervener objects to this and all similar questions. It is not proper rebuttal testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: We join in that objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. I was in Mrs. Reed's home. I had just come from New York. I don't remember whether I had been at the office or not; and when I was there, talking with her, she showed me this petition that had been presented to her by some of her employees, and she was very happy to think that those people had voiced their satisfaction in being associated with her.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did she look it over to see if all the employees were covered by the petition?

[fol. 6537] Mr. Lane: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer, if you know.

A. I recall Mrs. Reed—she said she "would like to have the petition 100%."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who was not on the petition at that time, if you know?

A. Well, I know they didn't have the office and some of the executives of the company. I don't recall just the people that were not on there; however, I do know they did not have the tenth floor.

Q. What did you do after that, in that respect?

A. Mrs. Reed told me she would like to have that petition 100 percent, and whether I went back to the office that day or not, I do not recall; but the next day I did suggest to one of the girls in the office that she take this petition around and have it signed.

Q. Who was that girl? A. Pauline Shartzer.

Q. What was her position at that time?

A. She was a cost accountant and clerk, and worked on the pay roll.

Mr. Tyler: Mrs. Keyes, would you mind turning your chair a little? I have trouble hearing you.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak just a little louder, please?

[fol. 6538] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was she in the department of which you were the head? A. Yes, she was.

Q. Do you know whether Pauline Shartzer did circulate the petition then? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Will you look at the sheets there and tell us which one of those, if any, are in Pauline Shartzer's handwriting?

A. Well, you mean just—what is it?

Q. Which of the headings, if any, of those do you recognize are in Mrs. Shartzer's handwriting?

A. I would say that is Mrs. Shartzer's.

Q. That is page 5385 of the record?

A. That is Mrs. Shartzer's.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak louder, please? What page is that?

Miss Weyand: 5386.

A. This is Mrs. Shartzer's.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. 5387?

A. And this is Mrs. Shartzer's (indicating).

Q. 5388. Now, will you look at the names that appear on those sheets and tell us what their positions are, as far as you know, generally, of the persons whose names appear on those sheets, first having reference to page 5385?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just step aside, please, Miss [fol. 6539] Weyand, so that other people can hear.

A. Well, I can just tell you, to the best of my knowledge,—that has been some time ago. I am not—I haven't had an opportunity to—

Q. Take your time in looking it over.

A. Miss Pauline Hartman was in the accounting department, cost accounting.

Mr. Langsdale: Speak a little louder, please.

A. Pauline Hartman, the first name that appears, was in the accounting department. Also, Opha Babb, Ellen Hughes. I am not familiar with these next two names. Mrs. McCoster was Mr. Keyes' secretary, and Mrs. McClelland—I don't remember her capacity at that time.

Brigetta O'Brian was in charge of the advertising department. Betty Beal was a stenographer in the advertising department. Dorothy Stratton was in the order department; that also applies to Eleanor Ludwig, and John Lane. This next person I am not familiar with. June Smith, biller,—was a biller. I do not know the next person. Hallie Abenchain was a stenographer. Nettie Barnett was a stenographer.

I do not know the next person. Mrs. Borchardt was in the order handling department, but I do not know her capacity. Helen Atkinson, I believe, was in the filing department, but I am not sure.

These other people I am not familiar with. David Green [fol. 6540] was in the filing department. I do not know what Sam Sparks was doing at that time. I believe Martha Stevenson was in the pay roll department.

Ruth Alexander was in the order department, and Mrs. Stewart. Martha Landy was in the merchandise repair department. I do not know Lucy Hall. Mrs. Stephenson was in charge of the credit department. Mrs. Estes was her assistant.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you speak a little louder, please.

A. Rachel Fredmon was in the credit department. Mary Butterfield was in the accounting department. Lucille Briggs was in the pay roll department; that also applies to Mildred Moore, Helen Swope, and Cecile Guerrant. Jane Daugherty, if my memory serves me right, was in the merchandise department. The other names I am not familiar with, at all. I know they were on that floor, but I do not know the department they were in.

Q. Referring to the next page, would you know whether those persons worked with the—who they were, generally? [Page 5386.]

A. Elmer Jensen was in the advertising department. Pauline Shartzer was in the accounting department; Ella Mae Hyde was in the employment department, and Katheleen Denzel; Alice Blodgett was the nurse. I do not remember about Mr. Boozell at that time, but I think he was on the door, on the first floor.

[fol. 6541] Regina Stearman, Ruth Anderson, Rose Murray and Miss Cochran were in the retail store. Arthur Porter had charge of the parking lot. Martha Gray had charge of the retail store. Veda Hoyland, I believe, was in the buying department. Rose O'Leary was, I know. Mr. Weaverly had a desk in the first floor, and was an information clerk.

Marvin Price was in charge of the maintenance department. Anna Price was in charge of the shipping department. Dora Perry was the maid. Eloise Kleeburg was in the accounting department. Nellie Kraft was a designer. Dean Tutt was a porter. Ed Corbin a watchman, and W. E. Baker, I feel reasonably certain that was Bill Baker, a porter. Frances Keith was in the designing department at that time, I believe.

And Gertrude Cain was a designer.

Q. Do you know who the persons are whose names appear on 5387?

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, is it necessary to go through every one of those names?

Miss Weyand: No, I don't think it is. She could generalize on about what floor they were on.

A. I can not read these. They are not very distinct. They are not very legible to me. Phenias Peterson, I believe, was the night watchman.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What was Martha Gray's position with the Don-[fol. 6542] nelly Garment Company, prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Well, I can only tell you while I was there. I left there in the spring of 1938.

Q. I will change the question, as to time, prior to the spring of 1938.

A. She was in charge of the retail store.

Q. What was the extent of her control over the retail store?

A. She was responsible for the personnel and pricing of all materials that were sold in the retail store.

Q. How do you know those were her duties?

A. Well, I always worked with her whenever there was anything I wanted to know. We had a budgetary system, and I would go over the expenditures of the department with her at the end of the month.

Q. Do you know how long she had had that position?

A. I am not sure. I don't recall just when she went into the employment of the Donnelly Garment Company, but I think it was either 1929 or 1930.

Q. Do you remember any discussion of Mrs. Gray's position, in February of 1935?

Mr. Reed: I can't hear the question.

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Yes, Mrs. Reed was in St. Louis at the time, and she [fol. 6543] called me over the phone and asked me to come to St. Louis. She had some things that she wanted to discuss with me; and Mr. Lee Baty and I went down that afternoon. We got in very late that night.

I went over to her hotel the next morning, and she told me that she was contemplating some personnel changes in the organization, and that she had in mind to make Mrs. Gray—place her in charge of the personnel department, that she had a way of getting along well with people.

Q. Do you know why Mrs. Reed was contemplating that change?

A. Yes, she said that there had been some dissatisfaction with the operators, and that they had discussed some of their problems with Mrs. Gray. She thought Mrs. Gray had handled herself very well, and that she would be a good person to work with the operators.

Q. Then did she express any dissatisfaction with the manner in which anyone else had been handling the operators? A. Yes, she did.

Q. What did she say?

A. That Mrs. Reeves had been too active; that some of the girls had wanted to—please don't hold me to strict accountability, but I believe there had been so much talk about organizing her people, and that some of the girls had been coming to Mrs. Reeves' office and discussing with her the girls that they had heard talk throughout the factory [fol. 6544] that they might join a union, and that those girls then would come—Mrs. Reeves would call them up to her office, and there was quite a bit of chaos throughout the organization on that account.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, this is going back into 1935, at the time of the N. R. A. case, isn't it?

Miss Weyand: Yes it is, in connection with the Loyalty League, and the testimony in that respect.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that is, by any yardstick you want to use, or can be considered rebuttal. I think on two or three occasions I have said to Mr. Ingraham that I didn't believe, in this hearing, that we were going back into that old N. R. A. proceeding; in fact, I think I told Mr. Ingraham we were not.

Miss Weyand: Well —

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. That they each had an opportunity to present the parts of the record in the old N. R. A. proceeding, and I didn't propose to reopen it. Now, this is, to me, clearly that very same thing.

Miss Weyand: Well, the company witnesses have testified as to the Loyalty League, and the manner of the formation, and so did Mrs. Reed and about Mrs. Gray. Of course —

Trial Examiner Batten: That is not this matter.

Miss Weyand: Mrs. Gray was the leading person forming the Loyalty League. Mrs. Reed testified in reference [fol. 6545] to her lack of information as to how the Loyalty League was formed. I think that this is proper rebuttal, because it deals with Mrs. Reed's relation with Mrs. Gray, the very month the Loyalty League was formed by Mrs. Gray.

Mr. Hogsett: In line with Your Honor's remarks now, I move to strike from the record all of the testimony of Mrs. Keyes, relating to conversations with Mrs. Reed or others, relating to all subjects back in 1935.

Mr. Tyler: Intervener joins in the same motion, and reiterates its objection that it is not proper rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: Then Mrs. Reed's testimony should be stricken pertaining to what she did in 1935, and what she knew of Mrs. Gray, and what she knew of the Loyalty League. If Mrs. Reed's testimony is going to stand, I submit that this is proper.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't say anything to you about the testimony of this witness with respect to the organization of the Loyalty League.

Miss Weyand: Mrs. Gray was the active party organizing the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: Even assuming she was, I don't see that this particular testimony has anything to do with that. Now, you might say, well, it is a part of it; it is an inseparable part of the whole story. Well —

Miss Weyand: I think it is very proper rebuttal to Mrs. Reed's testimony about the capacity in which she remem- [fol. 6546] bers Mrs. Gray, if you recall. She went on with quite a long story of how Mrs. Gray was just a clerk in the retail store.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you on that.

Miss Weyand: This is proper rebuttal on that.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you this far, on some matters, who are the supervisory employees; but you are now going into the whole attitude of Mrs. Reed with respect to the period of 1935.

Miss Weyand: I will not continue with this line of questioning further. I do submit what is in the record at the present time is proper rebuttal about Mrs. Reed's denial that Martha Gray was anything more than a retail clerk.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't consider it such, with reference to this last question. The only part I consider proper rebuttal and relevant is the part which refers to Mrs. Reed suggesting that Mrs. Gray take this job.

Miss Weyand: I also submit that it is proper rebuttal to Mrs. Reed's statement she did not know of any activity in her plant, questioning any employee about union membership. Mrs. Reed specifically testified to that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's assume that is true, Miss Weyand. You can't deny the fact that I said to Mr. Ingraham, on two or three occasions, that we are not going to open up that N. R. A. matter.

Miss Weyand: I am not opening it up, but Mrs. Reed [fol. 6547] testified to her lack of knowledge of any questioning of girls, and is, herself, a witness who testifies.

Mr. Reed: I can't understand what —

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it should stand; I am going to strike it, except the reference to the discussion between Mrs. Keyes and Mrs. Reed, about Mrs. Gray taking the job as employment manager, or whatever it was.

Miss Weyand: This is all a part of that same discussion.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know it is all part of the same discussion.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener wishes to point out to Your Honor, at the time you made the ruling on Mrs. Reed's testimony Your Honor said, "That may not be proper rebuttal, and I do not mean that from now on the whole case will be gone over, but because the Board has had a full opportunity to present what it says Mrs. Reed said, and because Mrs. Reed couldn't testify before, and is president of the plant, I shall allow this testimony on her part, but that does not mean that every subject that she mentioned is opened up to go over again." The reason behind the exercise of Your Honor's discretion was that this lady had not had an opportunity to testify before, whereas her opponents had had ample opportunity to testify as to what she said.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, Mr. Tyler; I am not making this ruling because of your remarks; I am [fol. 6548] making it because I think it goes back into that N. R. A. proposition, and back into 1935.

Now, we did go back into 1935, as far as the organization of the Loyalty League was concerned, but I don't think that it is proper rebuttal, and for that reason I have stricken it, in accordance with my ruling.

Miss Weyand: If this is going to be stricken, I would like to have such testimony of Mrs. Reed as denies she knew any of her operators were questioned about any union matters by supervisory officials, stricken from the record, too.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is no relation between the two, so I will deny it. In other words, there is no evidence before me to indicate that there is any consistency in the two.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand you didn't strike Mrs. Keyes testimony about her conversation with Mrs. Reed in which Mrs. Reed said she intended to make Mrs. Gray personnel manager.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

Mr. Langsdale: That is still in.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed state whether or not she knew of the girls being questioned about their union membership?

Mr. Reed: Now, that is in 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the same conversation, I presume.

[fol. 6549] Mr. Stottle: We object to that for the same reason.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener joins in the objection.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How long had Marvin Price been in charge of the maintenance department in the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. He was in charge of the department when I came into the organization in 1926, and to the best of my knowledge was still in charge of it when I left.

Q. What do you know personally of his activities?

A. Why, I don't know what you mean.

Q. How do you know he was in charge? What contact did you have with him?

A. Well, he had charge of the maintenance department, and also the buying of supplies; and I wouldn't say every month, but every few months we would go over the expenses of the department and I would discuss them with Mr. Price.

Q. What was the position of Mrs. Florence Strickland at the Donnelly Garment Company, during the time you were employed with the company?

A. I can't tell you the early years, but I would say, in 1929 on through the balance of my time with the company, she was in charge of the pattern department.

Mr. Reed: In charge of what?

The Witness: The pattern department.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know anything about how Rose Todd happened to go to the law firm of Gossett & Tyler, to [fol. 6550] secure a lawyer to represent the Loyalty League?

A. I don't know about Rose Todd, but I do know that Mr. Keyes discussed Mr. Gossett with Mr. Ingraham.

Q. What was that conversation?

A. He talked with him over the phone from our home, and suggested Mr. Al Gossett as a fine person to represent the Loyalty League.

Q. Had the union been in —

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Who was that?

A. Mr. Keyes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Had the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union been formed at that time?

A. Yes — the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Q. Yes.

A. No, the Loyalty League.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Company ever employ Mr. Gossett's law firm to represent the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Well —

Mr. Langsdale: That has been admitted by stipulation, Miss Weyand, has it not?

Miss Weyand: It isn't in the record yet.

[fol. 6551] Trial Examiner Batten: You have a list there, haven't you?

A. Yes, he was retained by the Donnelly Garment Company.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. For how long?

A. Well, I know we paid him a retainer fee from 1926, when I went in there, until the fall of '32.

Q. What was Mr. Keyes' position with the company?

A. He was hired as general manager in charge of sales.

Q. When was he hired?

A. He was hired in the fall of 1932, but he came to the Donnelly Garment Company in January of 1933.

Q. Could Mr. Keyes hire and fire?

A. Well, he hired a great many people.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Keyes, how do you know that Florence Strickland was in charge of the department that you have testified she was in charge of during that period?

A. Because I was in charge of the accounting department and the records, and we had installed a budgetary control back in 1929, and I would discuss expenditures of the department with her.

Q. Did you know Ted Scoles?

[fol. 6552] A. I am sorry —

Q. Ted Scoles, did you know him?

A. Yes.

Q. What was his position with the Donnelly Garment Company in March and April of 1937, if you know?

A. He was in charge of the cutting department.

Q. Why do you say that?

A. Well, I never discussed anything with Mr. Ted Scoles in the production department; anything I wanted to discuss with him, it was either with Mrs. Reeves or Mr. Baty.

Q. You knew him as being in charge of that department?

Mr. Reed: That is — the witness has said she didn't know him in any capacity, and counsel then puts a leading question to the witness. It is assuming that to be true.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think she previously said he was in charge. Now if her statement that he was in charge is not supported by any knowledge which this witness has, of course I see nothing wrong with her statement that he was in charge. She apparently thought he was.

A. According to our record and the pay roll, he was classified as in charge of the department.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When was it that Mr. Keyes had the conversation with Mr. Ingraham about Mr. Gossett, if you remember?

A. In the early spring of 1937.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6553] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Had Mr. Gossett been employed by Rose Todd at that time?

A. I don't know.

Q. As a matter of fact, you don't know when Mr. Gossett or Mr. Tyler was employed. You have no way of knowing?

A. No, Mr. Hogsett, to give you the exact date, I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, you wouldn't know the exact date, nor would you know whether it was before or after this conversation with Mr. Ingraham?

A. I know it was after that, but when —

Q. How do you happen to know that?

A. I don't know just when — I told you, — by day or date when he was hired.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6555] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Well, now, how do you know that it was before this [fol. 6556] conversation that Rose Todd had employed Mr. Gossett?

A. It was right after they had organized the Loyalty League.

Q. Right after they had organized the Loyalty League? Why, they had organized the Loyalty League years before, had they not?

A. Well, there was no activity in the Loyalty League, other than little parties that they have.

Q. Now, let me — pardon me, were you through?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have now said that this conversation that you heard between your husband and Mr. Ingraham, talking on the telephone, occurred right after they formed the Loyalty League. Now, when was it they formed the Loyalty League? Give me the year.

A. Well now, just a minute, Mr. Hogsett. You see, I haven't had the benefit of anyone discussing any of these things with me. I am trying to collect this in my own mind.

The Loyalty League was formed in the spring, I believe, of 1935.

Q. All right.

A. Well —

Mr. Langsdale: Let her answer, please.

A. And the company union was formed in early '37.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, your answer was that the conversation you [fol. 6557] heard occurred right after they formed the Loyalty League.

A. Well —

Q. Are you wrong about that?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Two years wrong?

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you wrong about that?

A. I am wrong about that. I am now trying to collect my thoughts and associate some of these things. This has been a long time, and a great many things have happened to me since. I am trying slowly to answer your question, if you will just be a little patient.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you hear Mr. Ingraham's side of this conversation?

A. I did not.

Q. You have no idea what he — what his purpose was in calling Mr. Keyes, have you?

A. I didn't say he had called Mr. Keyes.

[fol. 6558] Q. Was it the other way around?

A. It could have been. I know Mr. Keyes talked with Mr. Ingraham over the telephone in our apartment. I do not recall if Mr. Keyes called Mr. Ingraham or Mr. Ingraham called Mr. Keyes.

Q. Now, you kept that conversation in mind since 1937; that would be about 5 years, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, I know that.

Q. When did you tell Miss Weyand about it, the Board's attorney?

A. When did I tell Miss Weyand? I only met Miss Weyand the other night.

[fol. 6559] A. I probably told that to Miss Weyand the only time I had a conversation with her. She was in my home.

Q. When?

A. She came out the other night; I believe it was Thursday night. I had never seen Miss Weyand before.

Q. Did you volunteer that conversation? How did Miss Weyand happen to discuss it with you at that time? How could she have known about that conversation that occurred five years ago?

A. I believe she asked me if I knew—

Q. —of what?

A. —of the formation of the union. And I told her I did not know when they formed the union but I did recall this conversation of Mr. Keyes' with Mr. Ingraham.

Q. And the way you stated that to Miss Weyand was that Mr. Keyes suggested Al Gossett as a fine person to represent the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that what you told Miss Weyand?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, this conversation with Mrs. Reed in St. Louis, that occurred in 1935, you have said?

A. Yes.

Q. That's seven years ago?

(No audible answer.)

Q. Now, how—

[fol. 6560] Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Keyes, you will have to speak your answers out. The reporter doesn't get the nod of your head.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, how did Miss Weyand happen to know about that conversation that occurred seven years ago?

A. Miss Weyand came to my home and we had a very nice, wholesome talk, and that was part of our conversation.

Q. But how did you happen to mention this conversation of seven years back; what led up to that?

A. Mr. Hogsett, I'm sorry, I couldn't tell you just how we happened to be discussing that. She didn't come out to see me because she knew me. She came out there because, knowing that I was at the Donnelly Garment Company, she wanted me to give her some information, if I could be helpful, and I told her if I could give her some information—if it was something I knew for a fact, I would be happy to discuss it with her.

Q. Now, if you don't mind, I would like to get an answer to the question. How did the subject matter of this conversation that occurred in St. Louis seven years ago happen to be discussed at all between you and Miss Weyand on this occasion?

A. I think she wanted to discuss Martha Gray with me, and she asked me some questions which I answered.

Q. And in that way you volunteered the incident of the conversation back in 1935 in St. Louis; is that it?

A. Oh, yes. She wouldn't know otherwise.

[fol. 6561] Q. That's the point. You must have volunteered a good deal of information to her.

A. Not a good deal. I don't give a great deal of information.

Q. But you volunteered practically all of the detail information that she has questioned you about, didn't you?

A. And I would say that is all she knows.

Q. Exactly. And you volunteered all of that to her?

A. The little I gave her, yes.

Q. Now, did Mrs. Gray ever become personnel manager?

A. She did not, while I was at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, she never did, did she?

A. No.

Q. Then, this conversation about Mrs. Gray down in St. Louis was, to put it in a slang way, the occasion of walking up the hill and down again— There was nothing—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I will withdraw the form of that question. It is objectionable, perhaps.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. However, it is characterized, it boils down to this, does it not; that the announced intention of Mrs. Reed to give consideration to making Mrs. Gray personnel manager did not result at any time in her becoming personnel manager?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the ques- [fol. 6562] tion as calling for a conclusion of the witness, because the testimony was that that was just at the time when Mrs. Gray formed the Loyalty League. Now, whether that is personnel activity or not is for the Examiner to pass upon.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer, if she knows.

Do you recall the question, Miss Witness?

The Witness: You just asked me why Miss Weyand discussed this with me?

Mr. Hogsett: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want the question read?

Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"However it is characterized, it boils down to this, does it not, that the announced intention of Mrs. Reed to give consideration to making Mrs. Gray personnel manager did not result at any time in her becoming personnel manager?")

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, coming to the first item you covered in your testimony, that is, the document marked International's exhibit 10— Is that right? Is it 10?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. (Continuing) You were at Mrs. Reed's home at the time the employees came out to deliver the first 10 [fol. 6563] or 12 pages of that?

A. Oh, no, I wasn't.

Q. Did you not say you were?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Well, I misunderstood you then. I took it, when you said you first heard of it in Mrs. Reed's home, you were there at the time.

A. I wasn't in her home when the petition was presented to Mrs. Reed.

Q. How soon after it was presented, if you know, were you there?

A. Well, I had been out of town and I don't know the exact date.

Q. In any case, you were there shortly after it was presented, as you understood?

A. I would say a couple of days after.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed's attitude, as you expressed it, was that she was very happy to think that her people felt the way this petition indicated? A. Yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, she cried about it, didn't she?
A. Well, she was rather emotional, I thought.
Q. She was touched?

(No answer.)

Q. You know what I mean. A. Yes, I do know.
[fol. 6564] Q. And this remark, in the emotional state that she was in, was one that you carried on to Pauline Shartzer of your own accord?
A. Mrs. Reed told me she would like to have the petition 100 percent.
Q. And it was a natural thing, wasn't it, that she should?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative and not anything material as to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that a question, Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Hogsett: I will withdraw it and put it in a different form.

Mr. Hogsett: Did you not regard it as a natural thing for Mrs. Reed, in the emotional state that you say she was in, to make that comment? A. I would say—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and incompetent.

By Mr. Hogsett:
Q. In any case, you passed the suggestion on to Pauline Shartzer and she obtained signatures of additional people on that petition that you have identified, and that's all there is to it? A. Yes.
Q. Were you present at the hearing before His Honor, the Examiner, when your late husband, Mr. Keyes, testified?

[fol. 6565] Mr. Hogsett: I beg your pardon. It was a slip. I regard any person acting in a judicial capacity as a court, from force of habit.

A. No, I wasn't.

By Mr. Hogsett:
Q. Did you know of his testimony before the Examiner? Were you familiar with the subject matter of it?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Let me read you this part of Mr. Keyes' testimony in this proceeding relating to a subject concerning which you have testified. I read from page 2037.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Now, Mr. Keyes, is there a Miss Alexander in your department?

"A. Yes.

"Q. What character of work does she perform?

"A. She assists me in the correspondence with the stores on matters having to do with filling of orders.

"Q. Has she any supervisory powers?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Is she in charge of the work that Elsa Graham performed?

"A. No. I was in charge of that work."

Now, to the best of your knowledge, are those answers by Mr. Keyes accurate or inaccurate?

A. When I left the employ of the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6566] Company early in 1938—this was 1939, and I can't tell you anything about the policy of the company or anything that went on at the Donnelly Garment Company—

Q. I just would like to know, Mrs. Keyes, if you can tell me whether these answers Mr. Keyes gave, as you correctly say, in June or July of 1939, were accurate or inaccurate.

Mr. Langsdale: Miss Alexander?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes.

A. I can only say, if Mr. Keyes stated it, it was accurate.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. He would know, would he not?

A. I should say he would. I know nothing about it at that time.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, is this testimony by Mr. Keyes correct? I read from page 2023 of this transcript.

"Q. I would like to ask, Mr. Keyes, if you ever instructed, advised, or suggested in any manner to any employee of the companies', that is, the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, that they join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Have you ever instructed or advised or suggested in any manner, directly or indirectly, to any employee of those mentioned companies that they should not join the International union?

"A. No, sir.

[fol. 6567] "Q. Did you ever hear Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, or any other official or any person with authority to hire, fire, or discipline, advise or suggest to any employee that they should join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Or that they should not join the International union?

"A. No, sir."

To the best of your knowledge, during the time that you were employed at the company were those answers by Mr. Keyes as there given accurate or inaccurate?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6568] A. I can only say I know nothing whatsoever of the union activities in the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Hogsett: That helps toward an answer, but it doesn't quite answer, Mrs. Keyes, what I am asking you.

Now, let me explain what I would like to know.

First, let me ask when you and Mr. Keyes were married.

A. December, 1936.

Q. And you continued in your employ and he continued in the employ of the company from then until 1938, when you left? A. That's right.

Q. Now, during all of the time of your connection with the company, and with particular reference to the time from 1937, in the spring, on until you quit, were the facts as testified to by Mr. Keyes and which I have just read, from page 2023 of his testimony, accurate or inaccurate, to the best of your knowledge?

* * * * * * *

The Witness: Well, Mr. Examiner, I just stated that I knew nothing whatsoever of the union activities in the Donnelly Garment Company, so I don't know, by answering that, that I could say Yes, or No, and when I say something, I want to know?

[fol. 6569] Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, can you say Yes or No on this matter, so far as you know.

A. If Mr. Keyes stated—whatever he stated I would say would be correct.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Keyes, I think you stated that you are at present engaged in business, but I'm not sure.

A. I am, in the manufacturing business.

Q. At the present time? A. Yes.

Q. Did you give the name of it?

A. Marguerite Keyes, Inc.

Q. What does it produce?

A. We manufacture sportswear, and at present we are making a defense garment.

Q. When was that business started, Mrs. Keyes?

A. October, 1940.

Q. When did Mr. Keyes first become connected with the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company? A. January, 1933.

Q. It is correct, is it not, that since 1932 there has been no employment of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich & Tyler, or any-[fol. 6570] body in that firm or connected with it, by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company?

A. By the Donnelly Garment Company, in 1932, to the spring of 1938, no.

[fol. 6571] May Stevens, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. May Stevens.

Q. Where do you reside? A. 2617 Poplar.

Q. When did you begin to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 6572] A. I believe it was in 1932, possibly a little while in 1931, but I know it was 1932.

* * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you working steadily in 1932?

A. No. Just the busy season.

Q. When did you begin to work steadily for the Donnelly Garment Company? A. In February, 1936.

Q. Had you worked seasonally at the Donnelly Garment Company from 1932 to 1936?

A. Yes, every year except 1935. I don't believe I was in the plant in 1935.

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you join? A. In the spring of 1937.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Loyalty League?

Mr. Tyler: Intervener objects, because this is not proper [fol. 6573] rebuttal.

Mr. Hogsett: We join in that objection, asking that counsel be restricted to rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Hogsett: May we have a continuing objection, as in the case of other witnesses?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Tyler: And the intervener also?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

A. Only when these meetings were in connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Did you ever work in Etta Dorsey's section?

A. I did.

Q. When? A. In February of 1937.

Q. Where was that section located at that time?

A. The first week that I worked extra in her section it was on seven. The machines were moved to the eighth floor.

Q. How do you happen to remember that?

A. Because I was clipping shirring and the prices were extra good, and one afternoon clipping from four machines I made $13.50.

Mr. Reed: How is that rebuttal?

Miss Weyand: Miss Reporter, will you mark these check stubs?

[fol. 6574] Trial Examiner Batten: What is it, Senator?

Mr. Reed: I thought you had not ruled. I move to strike the answer. We are going into a matter of prices now, I suppose.

Miss Weyand: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand as the witness' reason for recalling the other evidence, the moving of the sections.

Miss Weyand: Miss Reporter, will you mark these two check stubs as Board's exhibits 40-A and 40-B, respectively?

(Thereupon the check stubs above referred to were marked "Board's Exhibits 40-A and 40-B, Witness Stevens," for identification.)

Miss Weyand: Mrs. Stevens, I hand you Board's exhibit No. 40-B for identification and ask—

Mr. Reed: Exhibit—what?

Miss Weyand: 40-B for identification.

[fol. 6575] By Miss Weyand

Q. (Continuing) —and ask if that check covers the week to which you had reference. A. Yes.

Q. And that week you were working on what floor?

A. Eighth floor.

Q. Who was the instructor of the section?

A. Etta Dorsey.

Q. How do you happen to remember that check stub?

A. Because it was the highest check I ever made at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 40-A for identification and ask you if that was the check stub of the preceding week. A. Yes.

Q. What floor were you working on during that week?

A. Seventh floor.

Q. Who was the instructor of the section on the seventh floor in which you were working? A. Etta Dorsey.

Q. Will you state for me what section number appears on the check stubs?

A. 811, hand sewing department.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear.

Mr. Hogsett: 811, hand sewing section.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What section number were you working in on the seventh floor under Etta Dorsey?

[fol. 6576] A. I don't believe I recall the section numbers.

Q. Do you remember the section number on the eighth floor in which you were working under Etta Dorsey?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know whether it was 811 or some other section number?

A. 811 was my hand sewing section.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, will you speak louder, please, so everyone can hear you?

Miss Weyand: And 811 wasn't the section in which Etta Dorsey was your instructor during these two weeks?

A. No.

Mr. Reed: What two weeks are they? They are referred to, I suppose, on the card, but I haven't the benefit of knowing—

Miss Weyand: I handed them over to the counsel table before, but you may look at them again.

Mr. Reed: You just tell me—

Miss Weyand: They are check stubs for the weeks February 12, 1937, and February 19, 1937, and indicate on their face that they are for wages to and including the dates I have read.

Miss Weyand: I offer these check stubs in evidence.

Mr. Hogsett: No objection.

[fol. 6577] Trial Examiner Batten: No objection? They will be received.

(Thereupon the check stubs above referred to, previously marked for identification "Board's exhibit No. 40-A and 40-B, Witness Stevens," received in evidence.)

Mr. Reed: Now, I would like to see them.

(Thereupon Board's exhibit No. 40-A and 40-B were handed to Mr. Reed.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. In what section were you working in March and April, 1937? A. 811, on the sixth floor.

Q. Who was the instructor of that section?

A. Frances Morrison.

Q. I hand you I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, which appears at pages 5375 and 5961 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you if the next to the last name on the first column on page 5384 is your signature.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Did you read the heading at the top of the sheet before you signed it? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was it true when you signed it?

A. The first part, yes. I was contented, more or less, with my work. But the last part or the second part, never [fol. 6578] at any time was it my views.

Q. And that is which clause or sentence that you were not in agreement with?

A. (Reading) ". . . and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization."

Q. Why did you sign that statement?

A. Because I felt it was my job in doing so.

Mr. Langsdale: What was that answer?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. By that you mean what?

A. That I would be laid off if I didn't sign it.

Q. Did you attend a meeting in March of 1937 at which Mrs. Reed spoke? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Was it during or after working hours?

A. During working hours.

Q. How were you notified of that meeting?

A. By the instructor.

Q. Who was your instructor at that time?

A. Frances Morrison.

Q. Did you wear your uniform to the meeting?

[fol. 6579] A. I did.

Q. Were you paid for the time you spent at that meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what do you remember Mrs. Reed saying at that meeting? A. Well, that—

Mr. Lane: If Your Honor please, I make the same objection with respect to this witness, that this is not proper rebuttal testimony, and I would like a continuing objection to all such questions.

Mr. Hogsett: Same objection by respondent and same request.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What do you remember Mrs. Reed saying at that meeting?

A. That she wouldn't have Dubinsky or any other "sky" running her business, and if the girls would stand by her, she would stand by them, and we would never have to belong to any union or pay dues to any union to work in her shop.

Q. Was there a committee appointed at that meeting to go see a lawyer? A. No.

Q. Did you go back to the sixth floor after the meeting?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6580] Q. Were you working on the same floor with Fern Sigler the last day Fern Sigler worked for the company? A. Yes.

Q. What did you see that morning?

A. A lot of commotion, and heard a lot of booing and singing, and other sections coming down and coming up—coming on the floor.

Q. How long did it go on?

A. Possibly an hour.

Q. Whom did you see from other floors whom you recall by name?

A. Ella Mae Hyde, Mr. Boozell—

Q. What was the next meeting you attended following the meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. The meeting that the union was formed.

Q. Who notified you of that meeting?

A. The instructor.

Q. Now, what time of day—

Mr. Reed: I didn't get it.

The Witness: The instructor.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, will you speak a little louder, please?

The Witness: It seems like I am shouting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, even I have some difficulty in hearing you.

[fol. 6581] By Miss Weyand:

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Was it during or after working hours?

A. During working hours.

Q. Did you wear your uniform to that meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Do you know whether other girls in your section wore their uniforms? A. They did.

Q. What happened at that meeting?

A. Well, they had Mr. Tyler there to speak to us and told us they were going to—had talked about forming a union, and they passed out cards to every girl and seen that every girl had a card, and then waited until later in the meeting to take them up, to see that every card was accounted for.

Q. Did you sign a card? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why?

A. I felt that I had to do it to hold my job.

Q. What made you feel that way?

A. Well, the Fern Sigler incident, just previous to that, and by Mrs. Donnelly saying we would never have to have a union, and I decided that they had changed so sudden that it was surely something for the company and I had [fol. 6582] better join. And when in 1934, when I was in another shop, at Twenty-sixth and Main, I met the Donnelly girls they had sent to that plant that were union girls—

Mr. Reed: Oh, wait a minute, now. That certainly is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, let the witness finish, Senator. If there is something you think should be stricken, all right, but don't interrupt the witness.

Read the answer thus far, please.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Finish your answer.

A. (Continuing)—and talked to them most every day about the conditions and why they were sent down there, and they were told that they were not making their guarantee, and they knew it was because they were union girls and that they would eventually be laid off.

Mr. Reed: I move to strike that as incompetent, immaterial, and as not rebuttal, being mere hearsay, and binding on no one. I think the Examiner excluded us from the right to even ask questions about 1934.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, assuming I did, hasn't this witness a right to say why she felt that way?

Mr. Reed: Certainly not, as evidence against us, that some girl told her—

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't assume that [fol. 6583] it is evidence against you. It is simply this girl's statement of why she did something. Now, during the examination of a good many witnesses, they were free to express their opinions as to why they joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Reed: We were not allowed to go back to 1934.

Trial Examiner Batten: You were allowed to go back if the witness gave that as a reason for doing something.

Mr. Reed: Well, this witness is going farther than that; she is undertaking to tell conversations she had with girls she said once worked for the Donnelly Garment Company and to state their reasons.

Trial Examiner Batten: She is giving it as her reason why she did something.

Mr. Reed: Well, if a person has a reason, it isn't material here what her reason was. If she had a reason, where some officer of the company had told her to do something, that would be one thing, but here she is undertaking to tell that girls at another shop in 1934 told her that they were discriminated against because they belonged to a union. Now, that sort of evidence simply means you open the door to every kind of hearsay evidence in the world.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, it doesn't, Senator. It is her reason. Now, to strike out all of the testimony given by witnesses as the reason why they did certain things, I would say offhand at least a third of the testimony would be stricken, Senator.

[fol. 6584] Mr. Reed: And I think a third of it, and perhaps two-thirds of it, ought to be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course I don't know that I would disagree with you about that at all. But we will proceed. It may stand.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand the Examiner is not letting that statement remain in as proof of what the girls at Twenty-sixth and Grand said at all?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, it doesn't prove what they said, and it doesn't prove the facts. It is simply this witness' reason for why she did something.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend all of the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union which were held in May 1937?

A. I'm most positive I did.

Q. How were you notified of those meetings?

A. By the Instructor.

Q. Were those meetings during working hours or after working hours?

A. During working hours.

Mr. Reed: That is the month of May, is it?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear back here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the last two or three questions and answers, please.

[fol. 6585] (Thereupon the last three questions and answers were read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember attending a meeting at which there were no chairs? A. I do.

Q. How do you remember that?

A. Because it was dreadfully warm— There was one girl fainted, possibly two, and I felt very faint myself, and I leaned against the freight elevator shaft, because it was cool, and remained standing there during the meeting.

Q. Did you return to work after that meeting?

A. Yes. I was the first one on the elevator going up and was in my section the first one, but I didn't go back to work until the other girls were on the floor.

Q. Did your instructor check up on your attendance at the meeting?

A. Yes, two or three days later.

Q. What did she say to you?

A. She came to me and asked me if I attended the meeting, that some of the girls in the section said I was on the floor when they came back and that I hadn't attended the meeting.

Q. Who was the instructor who did that?

A. Frances Morrison.

Q. State what effect, if any, your instructor's inquiry about your attending the meeting had upon you with refer-[fol. 6586] ence to your feeling free to attend or not attend subsequent meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Each time thereafter I went down with my instructor and always sat in the same row of seats that she did.

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 18, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4709 and following, and ask you if those minutes correctly set forth the occurrences at the meeting you have just referred to.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the number of that?

Miss Weyand: Board's exhibit No. 18.

Mr. Langsdale: Is that 18-A to 18-J, inclusive?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want the witness to read the entire—

Miss Weyand: To look at it as much as she needs to to answer my question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you shown this to the witness before, as I suggested to other counsel?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I have.

A. Yes, these are mainly correct.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear the answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you pay the 50 cents that was there voted to donate to Mr. Tyler for his fee?

[fol. 6587] A. Yes, I did.

Q. What month did you pay that 50 cents in?

A. In May.

Q. How do you remember that?

A. Because I have a little book that I kept such things set down in—or some things.

Q. How were later meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union generally called?

A. By an i. d. m. or by the instructors telling us.

Q. When the meeting was called by an i. d. m., who brought the i. d. m. to the section? A. The basket boys.

Q. Who handed it to the girls? A. The instructors.

Q. What is an i. d. m.?

A. Well, it is a slip of paper designating something of importance, a meeting, or something pertaining to work or other—

Q. Are notes passed from one girl to another in a section called i. d. m.'s? A. No.

Q. Can girls get up and go to the phone any time of the day they wish? A. No.

Q. What phones can the girls use?

[fol. 6588] A. Well, there is a main phone on seven and one on the first floor that they can use at noontime or after work.

Q. Can the girls use the department phones? A. No.

Q. Is your answer in reference to the phones a statement of the condition that existed during the whole time you were at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes.

Q. What was Rose Todd's position with the company?

A. I asked several times but was never told what her position was.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say the entire time that she was at the Donnelly Garment Company? Did this witness testify as to when she left there or—

Miss Weyand: I don't believe she did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state when you left the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. The 1st of September, 1941.

Q. And you worked there continuously from 1936 until 1941?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that question is limited to July 15, 1939?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Miss Weyand: Did Rose Todd ever come around to your section inquiring whether you had enough thread, [fol. 6589] trimmings, bindings, notions, or other supplies?

A. No, she did not.

Mr. Reed: Just a moment. What was that question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever see Rose Todd wear a uniform?

A. No.

Q. What was Lena Tyhurst's position in 1936 and 1937?

A. She was over the instructors.

Q. Did you consider that the instructors were supervisory employees? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why did you so consider them?

A. Because they had full charge of giving out the work and who they would give it to, and of laying off the girls or saying who would be called back.

Q. When you were working seasonally at Donnelly's, who told you what days to come to work?

A. The instructors.

Q. Did the instructors send girls home when work was low? A. Yes.

Q. Did your instructor ever keep you working when [fol. 6590] other girls were sent home? A. Yes.

Q. Could you give an instance of that?

A. At one time when I was working at hand sewing under Carrie Abrams, she was sending the girls home as they finished their bundles, so I thought, likewise, when I finished my bundle I would be sent home. So, when I finished mine she said, "You don't want to be sent home, do you?" So, she brought me more work.

Q. Could an instructor get a girl transferred to her section?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of such an instance?

A. Well, the one time—at this one particular time Mrs. Bogart, in dividing, had asked for me and had me sent to her section.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the last two questions—there is no time set on either of those instances.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What year did this incident with Mrs. Bogart occur?

A. In 1937.

Q. In reference to when, with Carrie Abrams?
A. That would be an earlier date than 1937.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Well, when?
A. I'm sorry— That possibly was 1934.
[fol. 6591] Q. 1934?
A. Yes, it must have been.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think that certainly is beyond the time involved. It may be stricken.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. I want to ask: Did that condition with regard to the instructors' duties continue unchanged during the entire time you were working for the Donnelly Garment Company?
A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: The incident in 1934 may be stricken.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. If a girl did not make her guarantee was she notified of that fact?
A. Yes.
Q. Who notified her?
A. The instructor. Sometimes they were called to the office, but most generally the instructor told them.
Q. Where did the instructors eat?
A. Well, after 1937 there was a little room built at the end of the cafeteria and the instructors ate in that little room.
Q. And before 1937 where did they eat?
A. Well, —

Mr. Reed: I think that is going far afield. It is rebuttal of nothing.

[fol. 6592] Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Before that time where did they eat?
A. The cafeteria was on seven, and it was the first few tables that they usually sat at.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who besides the instructors ate in this room established in 1937, thereafter?

A. The thread girls, and sometimes Mr. Baty—

Mr. Reed: I can't hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: The thread girls and sometimes Mr. Baty, did you say?

The Witness: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please keep your voice up?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Where did Mrs. Tyhurst eat?

A. In this room with the instructors.

Q. Did Mr. Boozell ever work in the hand sewing section with you?

A. He did not.

Q. Do you know Mr. Weaverling?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did he ever work in the hand sewing section with you?

A. No.

Q. Did Rose ~~Todd~~ work in the hand sewing section during May 1937?

[fol. 6593] A. She did not.

Q. What was Helen Little's position in 1937 and 1938?

A. She was the instructor over the notions department.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Pursuing that eating arrangement, did you ever see Rose Todd eating lunch?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did she eat?

A. She ate in that little room and at various places up on the floor of the cafeteria.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6594] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, the other day you said you thought you would take 2 days, and in an informal conference before recess Mr. Langsdale spoke about a number of witnesses. Now, what are your plans, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: At the time I made the statement, I had no idea a couple of the witnesses would be cross-examined with the great length and consume the amount of time that was taken. I am very certain it won't take very much longer after this witness is completed. I would not want to make a statement, until she finishes her evidence, as to whether I have two, three or four witnesses, or perhaps no more witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, what did you mean by your statement? You realize, don't you, that you are under the same restrictions as Mr. Tyler. I asked you to cooperate with Board's counsel, and certainly I am not going to permit an unlimited amount of witnesses here.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, the witnesses in this case have so far been all Board's witnesses. I haven't put on any witnesses whatever. Whatever witnesses are put on will be the Board's witnesses. I haven't conferred with Miss Weyand about how many more witnesses she is going to put on. I would say that I don't know how long the cross-examination of this witness will take, but I would say that at 2 o'clock we ought to be able to make an announcement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think that [fol. 6595] you certainly are approaching the point where I am inclined to tell you that I am not going to listen to any more witnesses.

Now, if you want to be prepared, both of you, to advise me at 2 o'clock, I will pass on it at that time.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mrs. Stevens, I want to go to the subject of the reason for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. Did fear have anything to do with that?

A. Not to me, it didn't.

Q. Were you in touch, through the press and otherwise, with the announced plan of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to organize the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, yes.

Q. You remember, do you not, that as of November 9, 1936, the general executive board of the International in Washington,—that is, Mr. Dubinsky, Mr. Antonini, Mr.

Katowsky, Mr. Feinberg, Mr. Levy, Mr. Cohen, and Mr. Perlmutter, and the other high officials of the International, formally announced their intention in the early future to organize every plant in the United States that was unorganized, and that, for the particular purpose of concentrating on the Donnelly Garment Company plant, they were going to open a special office in Kansas City? You remember that in the press, don't you?

[fol. 6596] A. Something to that effect.

Q. Then you recall, as of February 26, 1937, that Mr. Perlstein, who in the press was identified as Southwest Regional Director of the International announced formally the intention of the International to organize the Donnelly employees, and that as soon as they had enough members they would call a strike in the Donnelly plant? Do you remember that?

A. Something to that effect.

Q. Now, that preceded by just 4 days the passing from section to section of the document dated March 2 which you say you signed?

Mr. Langsdale: What preceded?

Mr. Hogsett: The Perlstein announcement.

Mr. Langsdale: The article of March 26 — I mean February 26?

Mr. Hogsett: That is right, February 26.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, what you are asking the witness is if that is correct.

Mr. Hogsett: If she does not recall the passing of this paper from girl to girl through the section followed just 4 days after Mr. Perlstein's announcement of an intention to call a strike as soon as the International would get enough employees.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Don't you remember that?

[fol. 6597] A. I know it was just before this petition was signed.

Q. Now, you recall, do you not, the speech reported in the press as having been made by Mr. Dubinsky in Kansas City on March 6, wherein substantially he said that "In a few days Reed —" meaning Senator Reed — "would receive a polite letter from the International, demanding a conference, and that if he failed to answer this, the International would start its campaign"? Do you remember that?

A. Not definitely.

Q. I am substantially quoting the language to aid you, if it does aid you. Do you remember something to that general effect?

A. Something about it, but not just definite facts. Something to that effect.

Q. I have substantially given it as you remember reading it, is that right?

A. Well, yes.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, were you, at that time, that is to say in February and March of 1937, contented with conditions in the plant?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you want any outside organization calling a strike in that plant then?

[fol. 6598] A. I perhaps hadn't given it a thought.

Q. As you now look at it; if you were contented, as you say you were, was your mental condition such at that time, as you now look back at it, that you wanted Mr. Perlstein or anyone else representing this organization, to call a strike in your plant? Did you want that?

A. A strike would have to have a purpose, and that purpose would make the reason.

Q. Well, I am throwing the thing wide open. Did you want a strike called in that plant for any purpose or any reason on earth? A. Well—

Trial Examiner Batten. At that time?

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. At that time?

A. Well, no, it wasn't necessary at that time.

Q. There wasn't a single grievance that you knew anything about, that any employee had with that company, was there? A. That I couldn't answer.

Q. I am also talking about that time—

Trial Examiner Batten: That you knew of?

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did you know of a single grievance that any one of the employees at that plant had at that time against the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. At what date are you speaking?

Q. I am speaking of the time in February and March of [fol. 6599] 1937 when these two statements were made, one by Mr. Perlstein and the other by Mr. Dubinsky?

A. Well, there was no reason for a strike at that time.

Q. None in the world that you knew anything about, was there?

A. Not that I knew about.

Q. All right. This meeting of March 18—no, strike that, please.

Did you know that in fact the International, through Mr. Perlstein and Mrs. Wave Tobin did, in fact, write a letter, dated March 9, to the Company, demanding a conference for the purpose of a discussion of collective bargaining through the International? You learned of that too, didn't you?

A. Something to that effect.

Q. And that letter you say—I don't know that you said it, I don't believe you did—but that letter was read at the meeting of March 18, was it not, at which Mrs. Reed made a speech? A. I don't remember.

Q. Very good. Now, do you know from the press of the campaigns or drives that the International was making against the Gernes Garment Company, the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, and the Missouri Garment Company, in March and April of 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. The fact was that those strikes, or those drives, I will say, against those three plants were of such a char- [fol. 6600] acter that they became front page news in the Kansas City papers and remained front page news for about a month? Isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. Did you note from those day by day records in the press what was going on down there? A. I did.

Q. Pardon me, I haven't finished. That the International pickets were kicking, and beating, and pulling the hair, and tearing the clothes of employees seeking to enter those plants? You saw that, didn't you?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute there. Read the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean she saw the articles, or saw the hair pulling?

Mr. Hogsett: In the paper, saw the accounts of it in the paper.

A. I did.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did you also see in the paper that 60, approximately 60, of those strikers moved into the entrance, the common entrance, into those three plants, and arranged a sit-down strike and remained there for about 3 days, until, because of sanitary conditions, the Health Department forced them to move? Do you remember reading that?

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Didn't you? All right. Did you not see pictures of the sit-down strikers, with their cots in the entrance of [fol. 6601] those plants? A. I don't remember that.

Q. I beg your pardon? A. I don't remember that.

Q. As a garment worker, you did, however, did you not, read with reasonable care the day by day chronicle of these events as they appeared in the press?

A. Yes, I was concerned, more or less. I had a daughter that was working in the Gernes plant at that time.

Q. Yes, ma'am, in the Gernes plant, you had a daughter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that daughter allowed to work? A. Yes.

Q. Did she run through the picket lines?

A. She came up out in front: Mr. Gernes came out and got them and took them in. She went through it without a scratch.

Q. She got through without a scratch?

A. The whole time.

Q. Now, you say the whole time. As a matter of fact, finally they had to quit work, didn't they, at those plants?

A. Well, while Mr. Gernes was negotiating, they didn't work.

Q. Oh well, yes, and for some time before he started negotiating, they were put in such a state that they couldn't work, isn't that a fact?

A. No, I don't remember that, exactly.

[fol. 6602] Q. Did your daughter report to you that she had to pass through lines of pickets with police following and by force holding these pickets away from the employees? Your daughter, your own daughter told you that, didn't she?

A. She was not so very concerned. She seemed to take it as a laughing matter.

Q. It was a joke with her?

A. She would look out the windows and look down. She wasn't so worried.

Q. She wasn't? Well, did she tell you of the fact that she had to go through lines of pickets, that were being restrained by police?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. I object to that as an assumption—assuming in his question that that is a fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question to the witness is, did she tell you that?

Mr. Langsdale: He said, did she tell her the fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness is, did your daughter tell you that?

A. That they went through these pickets or whatever they were?

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. And that the police were there, restraining the pickets or attempting to restrain the pickets? She told you that? A. I don't remember.

[fol. 6603] Q. For how many days or weeks, as the case may be, did your daughter report that she was going to work in that plant under those conditions?

A. I couldn't say how many days.

Q. I don't ask for an exact statement, but an approximate statement. Wasn't it nearly a month?

A. It could be.

Trial Examiner Batten: Under what conditions?

Mr. Hogsett: Under the conditions that the daughter described, where she would go through pickets being held back by police.

Mr. Langsdale: You are assuming the daughter described that. She said she didn't remember any such description from her daughter at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record will indicate what the witness testified to, and Mr. Hogsett said "under the conditions described by the witness". So let's proceed.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, did you also read in the press an announcement over the name of Mr. Perlstein in relation to the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants, that these manufacturers either will sign a union contract or they will never again manufacture dresses? Did you read that?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You don't recall that? You know, did you not, that the announced plan of Mrs. Wave Tobin and other Interna- [fol. 6604] tional representatives was that the Donnelly plant was next on the list, and that when they got down to the Donnelly plant, the methods used there would be the same as those used at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri drives? You heard that, didn't you?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as assuming that Wave Tobin or anyone else ever said such a thing at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the question to the witness is whether she knew that or not.

A. I don't remember that.

Mr. Hogsett: You don't remember that. In any event, the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union occurred on April 25—

Trial Examiner Batten: 27th.

Mr. Hogsett: 27, 1937, at the time—at a time when this violence had been going on at the three other plants for weeks, and it was still continuing.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. I object to that. There is no such evidence. That isn't a fact.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Langsdale, will you kindly not suggest to the witness anything, please. If you have an objection,—

Mr. Langsdale: I am objecting to his assuming that there was any newspaper article or anything else, or any word of mouth or any other sort of information that these strikes were going on as late as the 27th day of April.

[fol. 6605] Mr. Hogsett: What is the fact? I don't care whether it was a few days before or what.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question to the witness, please, Mr. Reporter?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. In any event, the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union occurred on April 27, 1937, at a time when this violence had been going on at the three other plants for weeks, and it was still continuing.")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, it was just after—

Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer?

A. It was just after the trouble at the Gernes and Gordon plants.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. All right. How soon after?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Shortly after, within a few days afterwards, three or four or five or six days?

A. Maybe a week or two.

Q. A week or so, or two? A. A week or two.

Q. You say, do you, that fear, personal fear of personal violence to you, played no part at all in your choice to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and help organize it?

[fol. 6606] A. Absolutely not.

Q. You were entirely fearless, were you, about the matter? A. I had no fear of it.

Q. By the way, what was your husband then, an organizer for the union?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Hogsett. I am not going to permit the witness to answer that question. I think Mr. Langsdale wanted to examine one or two of the respondent's witnesses along that line. I think Mr. Tyler or Mr. Lane, the other day, wanted to proceed on this. I don't believe I am going to permit an examination of these married women as to their husbands or their businesses. I think I stated in the first instance that in this day and age I think a woman has a certain degree of independence, and her husband's views can't necessarily be attributed to her.

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, I would agree with that, but I think that there is here a distinction; that is to say, that this is cross-examination and that without suggesting to the witness the exact reason why I think this is pertinent, I think that Your Honor will see on reflection that these answers that she has given make this particular question a pertinent one here, even though you may have excluded it elsewhere.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I am not going to relax on [fol. 6607] it, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, we feel that while your position is correct as to the ordinary case, where the husband's position would be one which is wholly occupied with the promoting of a certain view, that might affect the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so. If I did, I would be in a position where I would have to say, then, that Senator Reed's views would necessarily have an effect upon Mrs. Reed, and I think I have taken the position in this hearing, right from the beginning even in July and June of 1939, when Mrs. Reed hadn't testified and Senator Reed wasn't even here, I took the position then that I didn't think that what Senator Reed said or did necessarily would reflect Mrs. Reed's views in the management of her business, and I still contend that my position then and my position now, with respect to the husbands of these people, is correct.

Mr. Hogsett: May we have leave of Your Honor to make a written offer of proof on this subject?

[fol. 6608] Trial Examiner Batten: Let's have the offer of proof here.

Mr. Hogsett: We offer to prove that the witness on the stand that at the time concerning which she has been testifying, namely, in February, March, and April, 1937, and continuously up to the present time, her husband then was and at all such times has been and is now an organizer for a labor union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll reject the offer on the basis of what I have just said.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. Mr. Ingraham says that we desire now to make a similar offer of proof in relation to Geneva Copenhaver.

[fol. 6614] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You were shown some minutes of the meeting of March 18—

Mr. Langsdale: Not March 18.

Mr. Tyler: May 25.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. (Continuing) —of May 25, I think, by Miss Weyand, and you read them and said, if I remember correctly, that they were substantially correct. Is that correct; was that your answer—or substantially correct? A. Yes.

Q. When did you first see those minutes?

A. Possibly a couple of weeks ago.

Q. And that was the first time in your life you had ever seen those minutes? A. Yes.

Q. The minutes of the meeting described as about 5 years ago? A. Yes.

[fol. 6617] Q. Do you know who wrote those minutes that you identified or that you were shown? A. I do not.

Q. Were you ever told that Elsa Graham Greenhaw wrote those minutes?

A. I believe I've heard her name mentioned.

Q. And you have been told that she wrote those minutes, haven't you?

[fol. 6618] A. Perhaps so.

[fol. 6619] Mr. Tyler: Did you know before that there were two sets of minutes for that meeting?

A. I was told that there was.

Mr. Reed: Who told you?

Mr. Tyler: You say you were told—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Senator, let's have one at a time.

Mr. Reed: I was trying to talk to Mr. Tyler.

Trial Examiner Batten: But I could hear you plainly, Senator.

All right, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: I think the witness said when she was told, but I'm not sure.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you tell us when you were first told that there were two sets of minutes?

[fol. 6620] A. Last week sometime, I believe.

Q. And by whom?

A. Well, Miss Weyand and— I believe she was the only one who mentioned it to me.

Q. Were you shown this set of minutes at that time, that you now have in your hand? A. Yes.

Q. And you read both sets of minutes at that time, did you? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who Marjorie Green was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Didn't you know that she customarily kept minutes for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did know the faces of them then, but I don't remember the names.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you state what your present occupation is, Mrs. Stevens, in the record? A. No, I didn't.

Q. What is it?

A. Well, I am an employee of the Marguerite Kerr dress shop.

Q. How long have you worked there?

A. Since November of 1941.

[fol. 6621] Q. You are a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes.

Q. Do they have a closed shop at that plant?

A. Yes, they do.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6623] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, can you tell me any more about your plans, you or Mr. Langsdale?

Miss Weyand: Well, I can't say until we finish with this witness, whether I will have another witness or not. Possibly I will not. I don't know.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6625] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Stevens, it is not my purpose to argue with you about what a closed shop is, but I want to be clear about what you feel that it is. Is it your understanding that in a closed shop, regular employees have to belong to the union in order to hold a job in that shop?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you start working at Mrs. Keyes' plant?

A. In November of 1941.

Q. What is the name of that plant?

A. Marguerite Keyes.

Q. Incorporated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Marguerite Keyes, Incorporated?

A. Yes.

Q. In November of 1941?

A. November 1941.

Q. And what position have you held since you have worked there?

A. Well, I don't— I work there as an operator steady; [fol. 6626] and I have inspected, and at present I help out over the machines and over the materials and in the cutting department and just any place where I am needed.

Q. You have been an inspector there, have you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From what date to what date, about?

A. Well, say, from the first of January until possibly the last of March.

Q. 1942?
A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:
Q. Have you had any other job with Marguerite Keyes?
A. No.
Q. You have been an instructor?
A. Not in that capacity, of instructor.
Q. Have you done the work of an instructor?
A. Maybe, various times.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6627] By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Miss Witness, you said, "maybe." What did you mean when you said, "maybe"?
A. I don't remember where I used that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Reporter, will you read back to the question, "Have you done the work of an instructor?" I think the witness said, "maybe."

(Thereupon the question requested and answer thereto were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Have you done the work of an instructor?
"A. Maybe, various times.")

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. What did you mean, maybe?
A. The work I did maybe would have been classed as inspector work or instructor's work.
Q. What work do you mean?
A. Well, that would be maybe showing a girl about a certain class of work or something. I believe that would be an instructor's duty. I have done that at times.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6628] Q. Do they have a head cutter in that factory?
A. Yes, they do.
Q. They have what they call a head designer?
A. Well no, not at the present time.
Q. When did you join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Mrs. Stephens?
A. In August, 1941.
Q. Have you been a member of it ever since?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Continuously?
A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 6629] By Mr. Tyler:
Q. Have you been the chairwoman of the local International organization in that plant?
A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin to be chairwoman there?
A. Well, shortly after entering the shop, possibly a month later.
Q. About the end of 1941?
A. I believe so.
Q. And you were chairwoman until what date?
A. I believe it was in March.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. 1942? A. In '42.

[fol. 6630] Q. Mrs. Stephens, I show you Board's Exhibit 1-RRRR, which is an offer of proof by the intervener, and on the first page of signatures, in the first column, I show you what appears to be your name. Is it the fourth name from the bottom, is that your signature?
A. It is.
Q. Now, I am going to read you — you may read it if you desire, and I would like to have you read the whole thing. But before you do, I am going to call your attention to one or two sentences, beginning on the second page:

"That the undersigned had all seen or heard of articles in the newspapers concerning the strikes at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri; that as a result of this information the attitude of mind of the undersigned parties and of the employees of the company in general was one of apprehension and uneasiness and fear, that the employees of the Donnelly Companies would be shortly subjected to similar violence and intimidation, to that which they understood, and believed was being carried on in connection with the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri strikes; that such state of mind and apprehension was one of the causes of the action of employees in ratifying and in approving the action of [fol. 6631] certain employees in employing legal counsel in connection with investigation as to whether an injunction could be secured, giving the Donnelly companies legal protection against such anticipated violence."

Was that statement as to yourself true or false when you made it?

A. If I made it, — well, that isn't my belief, so it would be false.

Q. Was it false at the time you made it?

A. I don't know that I made it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean at the time she signed it, is that what —

A. At the time that was signed.

Mr. Tyler: I think that is the time she made the statement.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I will ask you to note the last paragraph, which says:

"The undersigned state that they are members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and joined said union and have at all times since remained members thereof solely of their own free will, choice and preference, and that they have not been influenced by any threats, coercion or pressure of their employer or any representative of said employer, and that they have no knowledge of any incidents in which the employer or any representative of the employer has exerted pressure, intimidation, coercion or [fol. 6632] any other influence upon the undersigned or any other employees to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or to stay out of any other labor union."

Was that true or false at the time you made it?

A. It was false.

Q. At the time you made it it was false, is that your answer?

A. As to my state of mind about it.

Q. In spite of your testimony on direct and cross, you now say that you had no feeling of fear or apprehension in respect to violence whatever?

Mr. Langsdale: What do you mean, "In spite of testimony on direct and cross"? She said she had no fear.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness now is whether or not she had any fear or apprehension at that time.

Mr. Tyler: At the time she made it.

Trial Examiner Batten: At the time you signed this document.

A. Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What is your answer?

A. I did not.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. When you stated this morning that you went along with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at the beginning because you thought it would mean your job, did you mean that you believed that at that time you would be discharged if you had not joined?

[fol. 6633] A. Yes, that is what I believed.

Q. What did you base that belief on?

A. The Fern Sigler incident.

Q. Did you believe that the overwhelming majority of the employees wanted this union and would get a closed shop contract, and for that reason you would have to join or lose your job?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. Will you read that question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question as being double-barreled, whether she believed that the overwhelming majority wanted a union, and the other is that they would get a closed shop. Her answer might be to one or the other.

Mr. Tyler. I think they both have to go together if they make a reason for feeling that she might lose her job.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you understand the question?

A. I believe I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer it.

A. No, not in that sense of the word, about the overwhelming majority. It was because that we went in that meeting unprepared, and they just as much as forced us to join it.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What do you mean by "just as much as forced you to join it"?

A. We were handed cards and they told them to count [fol. 6634] them and see that every card was accounted for and handed back.

Q. And the fact that the cards were accounted for, in your mind, means that you were forced to join?

A. Yes.

Q. Weren't you told in that meeting that you were to do as you pleased; and nobody was to sign a card that didn't want to, or if anybody wanted to think is over, he was to keep it?

A. Perhaps so, but we knew differently.

Q. I show you intervener's exhibit 20-A to KK on page 6090 of the record, and show you what purports to be your signature, as being the sixth from the bottom in the left-hand column, and ask you if that is your signature.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is intervener's 20, rejected?

Mr. Tyler: No. 20, rejected; the page in the record is 6090.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you read the statement above the signature?

A. Well, even this first and second part was not my wish.

Q. You have said you signed it?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that statement true or false when you signed it?

A. It was false, because it wasn't my free wish to join it, or what I chose to do of my free will.

Q. You understood that you swore to it at that time?

A. Yes, but it wasn't my wish, because I called the [fol. 6635] Ladies' Garment Workers that night and had them come out and signed the other card, the one that was of my own free choice.

Q. When did you again talk with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. That night.

Q. You had never been in touch with them before?

A. No, I called them immediately upon going home.

Mr. Hogsett: What date is that?

A. I believe I didn't make myself clear. The night the company union was formed, that was not my free wish, joining the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, because upon going home that night, April 27, I called the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and signed a card that night.

Mr. Tyler: And that was the night of the signature that you appended to this instrument?

Mr. Langsdale: No, you don't get it.

Trial Examiner Batten: She said the April 27—April 27, she called up the union.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. On April 27 you called the union, that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And obtained a card from them and signed it?

A. Yes.

Q. And on July 14, 1941, is that is the correct date of this instrument, you swore to a contrary set of facts, did [fol. 6636] you not? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer?

A. I said—

Miss Weyand: I believe you read the date of the notary's commission expiring instead of the date on which this was signed.

Mr. Hogsett: I have a little too much advice here.

Mr. Langsdale: Not enough.

Mr. Tyler: The 2nd of June, 1930.

Miss Woyand: 1939.

Mr. Tyler: Did you talk with your husband before you called the International representative on the night of the organization meeting?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't prove—tend to prove or disprove any issue in the case.

Trial Examiner Batten. Sustained.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You stated you couldn't find out what Rose Todd did. Whom did you ask in your endeavor to find out what Rose Todd did?

A. Oh, girls in my section and various ones that I came in contact with.

Q. What ones? A. Well—

Trial Examiner Batten: Can you give us the names of any people?

[fol. 6637] A. I don't believe I can give any definite names now, as I asked several at that time.

Mr. Tyler: None of them knew she was a thread girl?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as assuming she ever was a thread girl.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand. The answer was no.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You stated you paid 50¢ towards attorney's fees sometime in May, I believe? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom did you pay that?

A. To the representative in my section.

Q. What was her name, do you remember?

A. Neva Reason.

Q. And you remember the place you paid it to her, the place you were? A. In the section.

Q. Did you attend a meeting toward the end of March in which a large number of employees contributed 50¢ toward the attorney's fees? A. I did not.

Q. You knew a substantial number of employees had contributed sometime before you did, didn't you? A. No.

[fol. 6638] Q. You had never been told that? A. No.

Q. Does the chief cutter belong to the union, at the Marguerite Keyes, Incorporated, plant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the correct name "head cutter" or "chief cutter"? A. We only have one.

Q. Which do you call him, "head" or "chief"?

A. Just a cutter.

Mr. Langsdale: What was the answer?

A. Just a cutter.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I wanted to offer this in evidence: the membership card. I would like to have it marked as Board's exhibit No. 40, for identification.

Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 41, you mean.

(Thereupon the membership card above referred to was marked as "Board's exhibit No. 1, Witness Stevens," for identification.)

Redirect Examination

Miss Weyand: Mrs. Stevens, I hand you Board's exhibit 41, for identification, and ask you to say when you received that card. A. April 28, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: April 28, 1937?

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear her.

Miss Weyand: How did you happen to receive that card?

[fol. 6639] A. By signing an application card the evening before.

Q. Did you pay any amount when you signed the application card the evening before? A. Yes, I did.

Miss Weyand: I offer this in evidence as Board's exhibit 41.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received.

(The membership card heretofore marked "Board's Exhibit No. 41, Witness Stevens," for identification, was received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

Recross Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Stevens, you stated that when you got away from the Donnelly Garment Company on the evening of [fol. 6640] the 27th of April, 1937, after you had signed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union card, you called the International Ladies' Garment Workers' office?

A. As soon as I got home, I called.

Q. And did you get someone on the telephone then?

A. Yes, I did, someone in the office.

Q. And do you know who it was?

A. No, I couldn't say now who it was.

Q. Did you meet a Miss Jane Palmer?

A. She is the one that came to my house that night.

Q. And did you tell her that you had just signed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union card?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you wanted to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Yes.

Q. You got this card the next day? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I believe you state that at the Keyes shop they have just one cutter?

A. I didn't understand that.

Q. Just one cutter at the Keyes shop?

A. Yes, sir, just one.

Q. He has no one working under him?

A. He has a spreader.

Q. A spreader?

[fol. 6641] A. Yes, sir.

Q. But no other cutter? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean by a spreader? One who spreads out the goods on the table?

A. The material on the table.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6642] Q. Who stamped this card for you, if you know?

A. It was delivered to me by Miss Palmer. I don't know.

Q. Where was it delivered to you, if you remember?
A. At my home.
Q. And what time of day? A. In the evening.
Q. After you had gotten home from Donnelly's?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, you stated that you paid the 50¢ in May, 1937, to the representative in your section whom you named. What did you mean, "the representative"?
A. The Loyalty League representative, I believe.
Q. You stated that you were—you were asked a question, and stated that you didn't know Mrs. Greenhaw had refused to sign the March 2 document, and that she was not discharged. Did you know that Sylvia Hull refused to sign it, and she was subjected to the demonstration of April 23? A. Yes, sir.
Q. There was some question asked you about busses being furnished by the Donnelly Garment Company in March or maybe part of April, 1937. Had there been any demonstration by the I. L. G. W. U., of any kind or character, around the Donnelly plant at the time these busses were used?
A. No, there hadn't been.
Q. These strikes that were going on were at 26th and [fol. 6643] Walnut, and 26th and Grand?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that true? A. Yes.
Q. And the Donnelly plant was where?
A. At 19th and Walnut.
Q. 19th and Walnut. So it was eight blocks from the Donnelly plant where the strikes were going on?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that a built-up part of the city? A. Rather, yes.
Q. And congested? A. Very much.
Q. There was 8 blocks that separated the plants. Now, did you see any reason for having busses picking up the Donnelly workers and bringing them to the plant, and taking them home, at the time that was done?
A. I did not.
Q. There was no I. L. G. W. U. pickets around the Donnelly plant? A. No.
Q. None ever had come there, had they, to your knowledge? A. No.

Q. Did you know why the Donnelly Company was hauling their employees back and forth in busses at a time [fol. 6644] when there was no demonstration, no violence of any kind or character?

A. To create a fear, I suppose.

Mr. Tyler: I move that be stricken out as a conclusion. She says "she supposes". That means she doesn't know.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is clearly a supposition, but it may stand.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did you mean by that, Mrs. Stevens?

A. Well, to keep an agitation among the girls.

Q. That is, you thought the Donnelly Company was doing it for that purpose? A. I do.

Mr. Tyler: We object to this whole line of questioning. It is obviously based on a supposition of this witness. She said she didn't know but that she supposed. It is improper for her conclusion to be admitted in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, was that your feeling about the busses, Mrs. Stevens? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you feel any fear or necessity to ride in busses?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you feel, in the spring of 1937, that you had a right to belong to any labor union that you might choose? A. Yes, I did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6646] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You joined the I. L. G. W. U. on April, and signed an application April 27, 1937? A. I did.

Q. Did you let anyone connected with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Donnelly Company know that you had joined?

* * * * * * *

A. No, I sealed it and placed it in the safety box.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6647] Recross Examination (Resumed)

Mr. Hogsett: Mrs. Stevens, as I have caught your testimony, it appears that for about 4½ years, that is from April, 1937, until sometime in the summer or fall of 1941, I think November, you were off and on member of two unions, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Have I caught that straight? That is right, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6648] Q. May I have that card again, please? You say that this exhibit, Board's exhibit 41, is the card you took out on the International on April 28, 1937? You just paid the dues for one time, and then sealed it up and put it in a safety deposit box, and paid no more dues on that card? Have I caught that part of your testimony correctly?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did you mean a safety deposit box?

A. No, just a steel box.

Q. What was your point or reason in taking out this card in April of 1937, and paying dues just once, and then sealing up the card? Were you making some kind of evidence, or were you really joining the union with the view of being a member? Which was it?

A. Joining a union and being a member, but you don't [fol. 6649] pay dues to two unions, and the Ladies' International Garment Workers' Union—

* * * * * *

[fol. 6650] Q. Well now, let's see. You did join the union again? Or maybe I haven't that correctly—what did Mr. Langsdale ask you about August, 1941? Didn't you say you joined again then? A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you take out another card at that time?

[fol. 6651] A. Yes.

Q. Where is that?

A. I don't have it. The chairlady has it.
Q. You don't have it, the chairlady has it?

Trial Examiner Batten: The shop chairlady has it, I believe she said.

A. She does have it.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. When you took out that second card in August, 1941, did you seal that up and put it away? A. No, I did not.

Q. It was only this first card of April '37 that you sealed up after paying dues once, and put away in a box?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I notice on this card, Board's exhibit 41, there is something here about steel workers' drive assessment, and a blank to show how much it would be. Now, how much was it?

A. I had nothing to do with that.

Q. Did you pay that assessment to help the steel workers?

A. I did not. That didn't concern us.

Q. Another blank is "Anti-Nazi Fund" and a blank for so much money. Did you pay that? A. I did not.

Q. And another one is "Joint Board Assessment" and a blank for so much money. Did you pay that assessment?

A. I did not.

[fol. 6652] Q. And still another one is "1932 convention assessment". That would be 5 years before you entered. Did you pay anything on that assessment?

A. I did not.

Q. And still another one is "1934 convention assessment" and a blank indicating dollars opposite that. Did you pay any part of that assessment? A. I did not.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. You paid one week's dues and no other dues, and no assessments at all, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. How much were the dues that you paid that week?

A. 35¢.

Q. And how much were these assessments that you did not pay? A. I don't know.

Q. You know what the total dues and assessments in the International were for that year, 1937?

A. No, I don't.

Q. As I recall from former evidence, it would have [fol. 6653] been something like $18.50. With that statement made by me to you, does that refresh your memory as to what it would be? A. I don't know.

Q. All right. Now, you say you began going to meetings of the International when you joined the second time. Was that what you said? A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6654] Q. Now, from the time you first took this card, in April 1937, in the International, were you from time to time passing to them information about conditions at the Donnelly Garment Plant for their use in litigation that began in July 1937?

A. I talked to them at various times.

Q. Yes. Now, approximately, for your information, that litigation began in the Federal Court here on the 5th of July, 1937.

Mr. Langsdale: You are talking about the injunction?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. From that time on how frequently would you be talking to International representatives, as you say you did? A. There was no occasion to see them.

Q. Well, but you did say you did see them.

A. Only just very seldom, only once or twice a year.

Q. Who would you see once or twice a year during that time after the litigation started?

[fol. 6655] A. I might add, in the first year—I don't know when the preceding year—whether I saw any of them.

Q. Well, you understand, I am only concerned with the time that litigation began, that is to say, when these two parties became adversaries in Court, and I am telling you when that was, July 5, 1937. Now, from that time on, how often would you see representatives of the International regarding conditions at the Donnelly plant?

A. I didn't see them at all regarding conditions.

Q. Well, regarding anything.

Mr. Langsdale: Here, wait a minute. Let her finish her answer.

Mr. Hogsett: I think I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you finish your answer?

The Witness: Yes, I did.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Concerning what did you see them, from time to time, as you say you did?

A. I might just estimate that I saw them three or four times in the balance of the year, or something like that. It wasn't very often.

Q. That is three or four times in the balance of—

A. 1937.

Q. '37. Well, now, let's see. What was happening then in 1937? There was a hearing in July, before Judge Otis on the question of law, and no evidence was offered there. [fol. 6656] There was a hearing on the motion to quash service, and a good deal of evidence was heard November 1 to 8 or thereabouts, and there was a hearing before a three-judge court; with those instances in your mind, can you tell me what you were seeing them about three or four times in the latter half of 1937?

A. Nothing that concerned any of those things.

Q. I see. Well, whom did you see, Mrs. Stevens?

A. Only the organizer.

Q. Who was that? A. Jane Palmer.

Q. Where would you see Miss Palmer?

A. At my home.

Q. She would come to your home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you send for her on those occasions?

A. No, she would drop by.

Q. What would she talk about with you on those occasions?

A. The drive—the union drive, and the girls in the shop.

Q. I am sorry I cut you off there; tell me again what Jane Palmer would talk to you about.

A. About the union drive, and about the girls in the shop, in the Donnelly shop.

Q. She did that about three or four times in the last half of 1937?

A. I would estimate three or four times.

[fol. 6657] Q. You would tell her what she wanted to know, would you? A. Yes.

Q. You knew you were talking to your employer's adversary at that time, did you?

A. I don't quite understand the question.

Q. I mean this: you knew the company and the International were opponents in a lawsuit?

Trial Examiner Batten: You have one question pending.

Mr. Hogsett: I wanted to restate it.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did you know at the time you were talking to Miss Palmer that your employer and her union, the people she represented, were opponents in Court? A. I did.

Q. You thought that was all right? A. Yes.

[fol. 6662] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. I think I understood your answer to Mr. Tyler, but I want to be very sure about it. Did you tell him that when you signed this affidavit on the 2nd of June 1939, which he showed you and which appears on page 6690 of the record, that you knew that you were swearing to a false affidavit?

A. I did.

[fol. 6666] Q. In respect to the March 2 paper you signed—, Do you know what I mean by that; the one that was passed through the section that has been referred to here as the March 2 paper?

[fol. 6667] A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Langsdale asked you, apparently in an effort to show that you felt you had to sign that,—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the argument as improper.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection as far as the "effort" is concerned.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Well, at least in that connection, he asked you whether or not you didn't know that another girl who had failed to sign that or refused to sign that paper was Sylvia Hull and, "Look what happened to her." Do you remember that question he asked you? A. Yes.

Q. The fact is, the Sylvia Hull incident occurred some seven weeks after the March 2 paper was signed by the employees, didn't it?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6668] A. The incident he referred to was at a later date than the signing of that, yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Exactly. And the Sylvia Hull incident and the Fern Sigler incident each occurred on or about April 23, 1937; isn't that right? A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6669] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale,—The question is, whether or not either of these incidents, the Sylvia Hull or Fern Sigler incident, had anything to do with her signing this petition of March 2. A. No.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6671] How much violence did you think there should be before it would be in order, according to your judgment, for the company to hire busses?

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to as argumentative. The witness has stated there wasn't any at the time these busses were used.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: It is asking for a speculative answer on the part of this witness.

A. That makes it hard for me to answer, my feeling about all of this, the outside union, and all about going through a picket line. Of course, I wouldn't be concerned about going through a picket line.

Mr. Hogsett: You never would go through a picket line; that is what you mean? A. I expect I wouldn't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6672] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. According to your opinion, would busses have been needed at all, in the absence of actual violence at the doors?

A. No.

Q. Now, you did tell me on cross-examination that you had heard of the threats by International representatives that the Donnelly plant was next on the list and that the methods used there would be the same as those at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants? You told me that, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. But according to your judgment, it wasn't necessary [fol. 6673] to get busses there until that threatened violence actually began?

A. There would be no difference in getting off a streetcar and going through it or getting off a bus and going through it.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. There would be this difference, wouldn't there, that the busses not only brought you to the corner, but they actually brought the employees into the Donnelly property, inside the property lines, and unloaded at the loading dock; isn't that right? A. It's still the same thing.

Q. Is what I have said correct? The Donnelly busses wheeled into—Trial Examiner Batten: Wait a minute. Let her answer.

A. But they still had to get off the busses and go through some sort of procedure to get into the building.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Let me ask you if the fact is that the Donnelly property lines included the space where the busses loaded and unloaded? Did they?

A. I am still to say whether they were needed or not?

Q. Oh, no, Madam. I am asking—

[fol. 6674] Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, where the busses were unloaded, was it on the Donnelly property? A. Yes, I believe it was.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. And of course the streetcars would be unloaded, normally, out on the street; isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. From the time you joined the International the second time, which I think was August, 1941, you have paid dues to that organization regularly since then?

A. Yes.

Q. What do those dues run?

A. At that time they were 35 cents a week.

Q. How much in assessments do you pay?

Mr. Langsdale: I submit that this is not material to any of the issues in this case, and certainly it is not proper recross-examination. Nothing of that kind was gone into in this woman's testimony on direct.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Langsdale was the gentleman who suggested it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Ho? is it relevant, what her dues were?

Mr. Hogsett: I think there is this relevancy: If they are $18.20 a year, the dues, and in addition to that they pay assessments, that would mean that an employee might be influenced to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' [fol. 6675] Union, whose dues were, I think, $2.00 a year—in other words, that would be a factor that is pertinent in—

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it would be necessary to try out all of the issues of what they get for their money.

Mr. Hogsett: Sure. That's fair enough.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am not going to try out that issue, Mr. Hogsett.

* * * * * * * *

[fol. 6676] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Stevens, after April 27, 1937, were you endeavoring to gather evidence which might be used against the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Miss Palmer or for an International representative?

A. No, that wasn't my purpose.

Q. You never made any effort to note any facts they might need and turn the facts over to them? A. No.

Q. Did you make efforts to get members for the International at the Donnelly plant after April 27?

A. I might have.

Q. Will you say whether you did or didn't?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Tyler: Did you get any?

Mr. Langsdale: I thought we would come to that—and what their names were and what their telephone numbers were.

I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in the case and not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is relevant to [fol. 6677] any issue here. However, I will permit her to answer that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you get any?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6678] Mr. Tyler: Did the company or any representative of the company ever ask you if you were a member of the I. L. G. W. U.? A. No.

[fol. 6679] Q. Do you know of any people down there who were asked whether they were members of the International? A. I don't remember definitely.

Q. As I recall your answer to a question of Mr. Hogsett's, you said that in your opinion they would'nt need busses even if there was violence down at the Donnelly plant. Did you say that? A. Yes.

Q. Is it your position that the International was entitled to use violence in order to organize the plant?

A. No.

Q. What did you mean, then, that they didn't need busses if there was violence?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us why.

A. I think I stated awhile ago, I see no difference in getting off of a bus or getting off of a streetcar.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You mean, then, the violence would be the same in either case? A. Yes.

[fol. 6680] Q. In that case, if busses had been used, the violence would have gone on to the Donnelly property and right up to the loading dock, wouldn't it?

* * * * * * *

A. If there were violence, yes.

Mr. Tyler: Did you feel that violence wasn't important, because you, as a member of the International, wouldn't suffer by it and, therefore, it didn't make any difference to you about violence?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6681] A. If there were violence, of course it made a difference to me where it occurred.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Then, it would make a difference to you if there was violence in the Donnelly plant; is that correct?

A. Well, yes.

Q. To whom did you report names of members of the I. L. G. W. U. that you got or thought you could get in the plant?

A. Only the one person, Jane Palmer.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6684] Trial Examiner Batten: The record will show that Board's exhibit No. 1-YYYYY is received, being a stipulation as to further testimony of Mrs. Reed.

(Thereupon the stipulation above referred to was marked "Board's Exhibit No. 1-YYYYY," for identification and received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 6690] Opal Chaney, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

[fol. 6699] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question, Miss Witness, is this: Mrs. Dorsey testified that the power was turned off for the purpose of the girls attending the meeting of March 18, being the meeting at which Mrs. Reed talked. Now, is that correct, or is it not correct?

A. She did not turn the power off during working hours.

[fol. 6700] Q. Mrs. Dorsey testified, Mrs. Chaney, that she told the operators that they would be paid for the time spent at this meeting of March 18. What are the facts about that?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal. They all testified that the meeting was held after working hours; therefore, there would be no such statement made. And also testified they were not paid for attendance at that meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am inclined to agree with Mr. Langsdale, Mr. Ingraham, for this reason: If the basis upon which you are proceeding is that the meeting was held after, then the issue to be determined is whether or not the meeting was held during working hours or after working hours.

Mr. Langsdale: It was never contended that any employee was paid for a meeting that started after working hours.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, we are rebutting the testimony of Etta Dorsey that she advised these employees that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting. Of course we did not answer that in our previous testimony, because we didn't know of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that is true, but your contention was that the meeting was after working hours.

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: And the principal issue to be determined, Mr. Ingraham, is whether the meeting was [fol. 6701] held during working hours or after working hours.

Mr. Ingraham: Our contention is that all of these meetings were held after working hours.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: But when the Board puts on a witness that testifies to the effect that she had instructions to tell the employees or the operators in her section that they would be paid for time spent at meetings, I think we clearly have a right to rebut that.

Mr. Reed: Let me make this suggestion: The other side did not rest content with saying this meeting was held during working hours. They proceed to buttress that and give the reasons for their answer by saying, "Not only was it not held after working hours, but this occurred: I turned off the power myself—I did it."

And then they go a step farther and say, "I told the girls they would be paid."

Now, it is perfectly plain that that evidence which they gave there, not only as to the time of the meetings, but these circumstances which they add, is new evidence, and a refusal of it would be grievous error.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, whether or not it is grievous error is an entirely different thing. I am inclined to agree with you, Senator, on the matter of whether she told the girls they would be paid. Now, of course, that [fol. 6702] brings up the whole question of, where are we at with respect to this hearing?

Now, you may answer this if you want to, Mr. Ingraham, and if you don't want to you don't need to: Am I to assume you are going to have all of the girls in section 518 here and testify about these specific matters?

Mr. Ingraham: I believe we are going to have a large number of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to tell you now that you are not, so don't plan on it. I would say, not to exceed three witnesses on those matters, out of that section.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, let me suggest to the Examiner that if the trier of the fact, either the Examiner or the Board, finds that this meeting was held out of working hours, then ipso facto, you will find that Etta Dorsey's testimony that she turned off the power and told the girls they would be paid for the meeting goes out the window. Certainly, if the meeting was held after working hours, then Etta Dorsey was wrong when she said they would be paid.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed on the basis I have indicated.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read the question, please?

[fol. 6703] (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Mrs. Dorsey testified, Mrs. Chaney, that she told the operators that they would be paid for the time spent at this meeting of March 18. What are the facts about that?")

A. She did not tell us we would be paid, and we were not paid.

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Chaney, there has been testimony here that Etta Dorsey told the girls that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed. What are the facts about that?

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to for all of the reasons stated by the other objection—not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. She did not tell us we would be paid, and we were not paid for that meeting.

Mr. Ingraham: There has been testimony given by Etta Dorsey that she told the girls they would be paid for four or five other meetings that were held—meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. What were the facts about that?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6704] A. We were not paid at any time for any of our union meetings and she did not tell us we would be paid.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. There has been testimony given that the girls returned to work in that section after attending meetings. What are the facts about that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Ingraham, I do not believe that is proper surrebuttal, because there was testimony by some witnesses concerning that and the Board put on some concerning it. Now, I don't believe that is proper questioning at this stage of the proceedings.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. There has been testimony given that if an operator did not intend to come to work she would notify her instructor. What are the facts about that?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. There has been testimony given that after Mr. Baty took charge of the factory in 1935, and up until July 15, 1939, instructors had the authority to transfer girls from one section to another. What is the fact about that?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal. Mr. Baty, in 1939, ran the whole gamut with reference to [fol. 6705] that particular issue.

Trial Examiner Batten. Objection sustained.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 38 and ask you if you have seen the supplemental pay and transfer books. Have you ever seen any of those?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, at the bottom, "Approved by," what would the instructor approve as to that slip?

Mr. Langsdale: How is that proper surrebuttal?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. That is merely to state that you were in the section that day.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. To verify the time from, to some other time?

A. The time you worked in that section, yes.

Q. When an operator was to be transferred to another section, who did it?

* * * * * *

A. Ella Mae Hyde.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question to the effect that, Did girls return to work after attending any of the meetings referred to? she would answer in the negative.

[fol. 6706] Respondent further offers to prove by this witness—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I want to make an objection to that offer, for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

Respondent further offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question as to whom the girls would notify if they were not coming to work, she would answer, "The employment office," and not "the instructor."

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to in the offer for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any others?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offers are rejected.

* * * * * *

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Chaney, did you ever know of any instructor directing the girls in her section to go with her, the instructor, to any union meeting?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you hear Etta Dorsey give any instructions or [fol. 6707] information about the holding of union meetings to the girls in her section?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal, and repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever see any group of girls being herded together to a meeting of the union by any instructor?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal. Respondent has so characterized it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Who turned off the power at the end of the day, regardless of whether the day was a short one or a long one, in the section?

* * * * * *

A. The instructors.

[fol. 6708] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Were you ever a member of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mrs. Chaney?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any member of the union for work which that member did for the union?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know whether the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company obtained any improved conditions by the contract which the union made with the company in May 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebutta'

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove that this witness, if allowed to answer the question as to whether she ever saw any group of girls taken to union meetings by the instructor, would answer that she did not.

Mr. Langsdale: That offer is objected to for the reasons [fol. 6709] offered against the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will it be agreeable to you, Mr. Tyler, to consider that the offer is one offer as to all of these questions, so that Mr. Langsdale doesn't have to interrupt, and I don't have to rule on each one separately?

Mr. Tyler: That is agreeable.

And I offer to prove that this witness, if asked the question whether there was any evidence of employees being herded to the union meetings, would answer No.

I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to testify as to whether she knew of benefits received by the employees as a result of the contract of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the company of May 27, 1937, would state that she did know of definite benefits received by reason of that contract.

Mr. Langsdale: The offers are objected to for the reasons given against the questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6716] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever work, on a transfer slip, in a section other than your regular section—the transfer slip I have reference to—

Mr. Hogsett (Interrupting): Objected to on the same ground, as not proper cross-examination in surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 6717] A. Yes, I have.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What section number would appear on your check stubs on those occasions?

A. The section I really belonged in.

Q. And not the section you worked in?

A. Not the one I worked in extra, no.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6718] By Miss Weyand:

Q. How do you happen to remember you were working in section 518 at the time of the meeting of March 18, at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. Well, we were working in that section when the company began giving us our old age benefit stubs.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6719] (Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember when the company began giving you your old age stubs?

A. Sometime along the first of the year, I believe.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6731] Mr. Hogsett: On page 6675 of the record yesterday, while Mrs. Stevens was on the stand, I made a verbal offer of proof in respect to the amount of dues [fol. 6732] of the International —

* * * * * *

I offer to prove by the witness May Stevens that the amount of regular dues of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the time of her membership was 35¢ a week, which, for 52 weeks a year would be $18.20 a year, and that in addition to that there were two regular assessments, one of $1 per year as a death benefit assess- [fol. 6733] ment, and the second an assessment of $1 a year as a fund in the Work Labor Movement as a whole. That is all.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer, because my recollection is that I rejected your tentative offer.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6734] ANNA REECE, called as a witness by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6737] A. We were not paid for any meetings that we—

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: The question was, Did Mrs. Dorsey tell—

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, yes. Did Mrs. Dorsey tell you you would be paid?

A. She did not.

* * * * * *

[fol 6738] By Mr. Ingraham:

* * * * * *

[fol. 6739] Mr. Ingraham: There has been testimony given that Edith Dean, Oina Lee Cooper, and Ethel Riegel worked in section 518 during the months of March and April 1937. Do you recall whether or not they worked in that section at that time?

A. They did not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I want to refer back to your pay checks, respond-
[fol. 6740] ent's exhibits Nos. 52-A to 52-G, inclusive. Do you recall ever receiving a pay check with a section number on it which was not the actual section in which you were working at the time?

[fol. 6741] Mr. Ingraham: Who does transfer girls from one section to another?

A. When we get a transfer we go to the employment office, to Mrs. Hyde.

* * * * * * *

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Reece, did you ever hear any instructor direct the girls or the workers in her section to attend union meetings in a group? A. No, I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that question with the prior witness. I do not consider it proper.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly plant gather the girls in her section together and take them to any union meeting? A. No.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I make the same ruling with respect to that question, Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6743] Mr. Tyler: What was the custom in the Donnelly factory as to whether the employees went to union meetings with anybody they pleased or not?

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling I made to the other two questions, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: Did you ever hear of any employee at the Donnelly Company being paid by the company for any work that employee did for the union or any time that employee spent for the union? A. No, they were not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6744] Mr. Tyler: Have you ever been on the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mrs. Reece?

A. No.

Mr. Tyler: That is all.

I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to answer the questions which the Examiner has sustained objections to, she would testify that she never heard any instructor direct the girls in her section to attend any union meeting in a group; that she never saw any instructor gather the girls together and take them to a union meeting; and that the custom at the Donnelly plant was that employees would attend union meetings with whomever they pleased, without obstruction or pressure or limitation.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected.

. . . . . .

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you start to work at the Donnelly Gar-
[fol. 6745] ment Company? A. 1928.

Q. What kind of work were you doing in March and April of 1937? A. Shirring.

Q. All of the way through? A. Yes.

Q. No other instructor? A. No.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6746] AGNES HUTCHINSON, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State your name, please.

A. Agnes Hutchinson.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Hutchinson?

A. 3321 Wyandotte.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Have you worked there a number of years?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March and April 1937?

A. Yes, I was.

[fol. 6747] Q. Do you recall what section you were working in at that time?

A. Section 518.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits Nos. 53-A through 53-G, inclusive, and ask you if those are pay checks that you received during the months of March and April while working at the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes, they were.

* * * * * *

Q. Now, I call your attention to the number in front of your name, 518, and ask you what that number signifies.

A. That states the section that I was in.

Q. Did you ever receive, to your knowledge, a pay check that had a section number on it which wasn't the section which you were actually working in at the time?

A. No.

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibits Nos. 53-A through 53-G, inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: No objection? They will be received.

(Thereupon the checks above referred to, previously marked "Respondent's Exhibits Nos. 53-A to 53-G, inclusive, Witness Hutchinson," for identification, were received in evidence.)

[fol. 6748] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. During the months of March, April, and May, do you recall who your instructor was in that section—1937, I am referring to?

A. Etta Dorsey.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you had any other instructors during that time besides Etta Dorsey?

A. We did not.

Q. Etta Dorsey has testified that on March 18 she informed the girls in her section that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting held later in the day. Do you recall Etta Dorsey's making such a statement as that?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall a meeting on March 18 at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. Yes, I remember it.

Q. Were you paid for the time spent at that meeting?

A. I was not.

Q. Did you attend the meeting?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you recall a meeting of employees held on April 27, 1937, at which time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. Yes, I did.

[fol. 6749] Q. Do you recall Etta Dorsey's making a statement to the operators in her section that they would be paid for the time spent at that meeting?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were you paid for the time spent at that meeting?

A. We were not.

Q. Did you hear of any employees being paid for the time spent at either of those two meetings I have just referred to?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever hear Etta Dorsey say that employees would be paid for the time spent at union meetings?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear of employees being paid for the time spent at the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. No.

Q. Were you ever paid for any time spent at the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. No, sir.

Q. If you did not intend to come to work, would you notify your instructor?

A. No, sir.

Q. Whom would you notify?

A. The employment department.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of March 18 that I referred to and then return to work?

[fol. 6750] A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of April 27 and then return to work?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend any union meeting and return to work?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend union meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 6751] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Etta Dorsey testified that operators had told her that they were not free to express themselves at meetings with instructors present. Did you ever hear any operator make any such statement as that?

* * * * * *

A. No, I did not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall whether Edith Dean, during March, April, or May, worked in section 518?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did Oma Lee Cooper, during that time, work in section 518?

. . . . . .

A. No, she did not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Ethel Riegel work in 518 during that time?

. . . . . .

A. She did not.

. . . . . .

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Hutchinson, did you ever hear your instructor [fol. 6752] or any other instructor in the plant direct the girls in her section to go to union meetings?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear your instructor or any instructor in the plant tell the girls in the section that they should attend a union meeting together as a group?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I assume, Mr. Tyler, you are going to ask those three questions?

Mr. Tyler: That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought I would wait until you had asked your three questions, so as not to encumber the record.

You may proceed.

Miss Weyand: And let her answer those questions?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever see any instructor in the plant gather the girls in her section together and take them to any union meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. What was the custom in the Donnelly plant during the spring of 1937 and from the time the union was formed on, as to whether employees went to union meetings with anyone they wanted to without any interference or repression or direction from anyone at all?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6753] A. We would go with whoever we wished to, or by ourselves.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I assume that those are the three questions?

Mr. Tyler: That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That you have asked the other two witnesses. And I permitted the witnesses to answer to avoid the necessity of you making an offer of proof; and on the basis of my ruling on the prior two witnesses, I'll now strike the testimony of these three questions.

Mr. Tyler: I think it will be proper for me to make an offer of proof as to this witness, then.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that necessary? That is the reason I had the witness answer, so you could avoid making an offer. In other words, you have asked the questions, the witness has answered them, and I have stricken her answers.

. . . . . .

Mr. Tyler: Very well. I'll except to the Examiner's ruling. I think that will preserve the record.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6754] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever hear of the company paying any employee of the Donnelly Company for any work—for any time that the employees spent in the union affairs, or on union meetings, or union work?

A. No, I did not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6759] Mr. Ingraham: Well, I offer respondent's exhibits 52-A through G inclusive in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if there is no objection, they will be received.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6761] IRIS LITTEN, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Iris Litten.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 71 South 19th, Kansas City, Kansas.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. At present at Lake City Ordnance Plant.

Q. Were you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company in 1937?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. When did you leave the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. This last April, I believe the 10th, 1942.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6762] Mr. Ingraham: In the months of March, April and May, 1937, do you recall what section you worked in at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes; I was in section 413.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I intended to state before I put this witness on the stand that I understood you to say that you limited respondent to three witnesses in connection with the matters that Etta Dorsey testified about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that the way you understand it?

Mr. Ingraham: I understood you to say that very positively.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think you are correct.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I understood the limitation would be with reference to all matters inquired about this morning in connection with Etta Dorsey's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: My understanding of what I intended to do was limit you to three witnesses from that section with respect to the matters that you asked the witnesses about. Now, is there any difference between that and your understanding?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that is what I understood you to say. Of course, we will prepare an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you have an offer, you make it right now, Mr. Ingraham.

[fol. 6763] Mr. Ingraham: Well, I haven't the—I have other witnesses here in connection with matters that relate to section 518.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want an offer of proof; I don't want to wait for it until the witnesses are gone and the hearing is over. I want to say now any offers of proof must be here before the hearing closes. I am not going to accept any offers of proof when this hearing closes, on any matter, so if you have an offer, now, with respect to the people in that section, section 518, I want you to make it now.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by Ruth Strandt, Ida Barton, Leone Sams, Beatrice Face, Goldie Sprague, Nina Gifardi, Grace Pardun, Anne Belan, Lulu Gordon, Ruth Chaney Miller, Ida Mauk, Estel Rothgeb, Ora Dull, Lela Stevens, Hazel Higgins, Violet Hawkins, Anne Elizabeth Stone, and each of them, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were employed during the months of March, April, and May, 1937, by the Donnelly Garment Company, and during said time worked in section 518; that during all of said time, Etta Dorsey was their instructor and they had no other instructor during said time except Etta Dorsey; that Etta Dorsey [fol. 6764] did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid by the Donnelly Garment Company for the time spent at the meeting of March 18, 1937, where Mrs. Reed spoke; and they were not, in fact, paid for the time spent at said meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting of April 27, 1937, and they, in fact, were not paid for the time spent at that meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not state to them that they would be paid for time spent at union meetings and they, in fact were not paid for time spent at any union meetings; that they did not know of any employee being paid for time spent at any said union meetings, or the meeting of March 18, April 27, or any other meeting; that they did not attend any meetings during said time and return to work.

Mr. Langsdale: Union meetings, you mean?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, any of the aforesaid meetings, and return to work; that in the event they did not intend to come to work, they would notify the employment office, and would not notify their instructor; that the employment office would transfer operators in their section and it was not done by the instructor.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, to clear up that matter that Mr. Langsdale spoke to you about, union meetings, don't you think it would be well to indicate you are referring to the March 18, April 27 meetings, and all union meetings?

. . . . . .

[fol. 6765] Mr. Ingraham: Let me put it this way: that meetings referred to were any meetings of the employees, except fashion shows.

Mr. Langsdale: And not excepting Loyalty League meetings?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, there is a dispute about that—no, not excepting.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6766] Mr. Ingraham: I am through;—well, wait just a second. I want to add to the offer of proof that each of said stated persons will further testify that they [fol. 6767] never received a pay check with the section number on it that was not the correct section number in which said person worked, and that each of said persons' pay checks had on it section number 518 during the months of March, April, and May of 1937.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, my understanding is that the offer of proof is in line with the testimony of the three witnesses, and taking into consideration the objections offered by the various attorneys representing the parties, and upon that basis I reject the offer.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6773] ANNA REECE, a witness recalled by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, having been previously duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows:

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you, Mrs. Reece, respondent's exhibit No. 52-H and ask you if that was a pay check that you received from the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 52-H.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6774] Recross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6777] Q. It is your belief, then, that the section number is put on the check, even though the section be temporary; is that correct?

A. No, I didn't say that. I said the section number is on your paycheck if you have worked in that section and drawn your pay out of that section, but I said I didn't think I had ever been in a section for a pay period other than my own section.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6778] Redirect Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reece, I believe you stated this morning in answer to a question by Miss Weyand that you had worked in Etta Dorsey's section during the years 1936, 1937, and 1938. Now, during that time did you work on the seventh floor?

A. A part of that time, yes, we worked on the seventh floor, but not all of that time.

Q. Do you recall whether or not during all of that time you were working in section 518?

A. Not on the seventh floor all of that time. I was in 518.

Q. What other floors did you work on that you recall?

A. We were moved from the ninth floor to the seventh floor, where I went to work for Mrs. Dorsey, and then we went from the seventh floor to the sixth floor, where Mrs. Dorsey was still instructor—however, it was a different section, 524. Then later, perhaps a year,—I don't remember the date—we went back on the eighth floor, into section 515-A.

Q. Now, during the months of March and April, 1937, [fol. 6779] what floor were you working on?

A. We were on seventh.

Q. And what was the section? A. 518.

Q. Who was your instructor? A. Mrs. Dorsey.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6780] Trial Examiner Batten: Respondent's exhibit No. 52-H will be received.

* * * * * * *

Iris Litten, the witness previously on the stand, resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Litten, during the months of March, April, [fol. 6781] and May, 1937, what section were you working in? A. I was in 413.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 54-A to 54-I, inclusive, and ask you if you received these pay checks from the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When were you paid, if you recall, Mrs. Litten?
A. On Thursday of each week.
Q. And what was that pay for?
A. For the week preceding.
Q. Now, I notice in front of your name there is the number 413. What does that indicate?
A. That is the section that I worked in.
Q. Were you in that section during the periods that you received these pay checks? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know who your instructor was in that section? A. At what time?
Q. At that time, or at the time of March, April, and May, 1937? A. Yes. Lola Skeens.
Q. Do you recall a meeting of employees on March 18 at which Mrs. Reed spoke?
A. Yes.
Q. There has been testimony that the instructor or [fol. 6782] someone advised the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting. Did you receive any such information from Lola Skeens or anyone else?
A. No one told me.
Q. Were you paid for the time spent at the meeting of March 18? A. No, I wasn't.
Q. Did you attend a meeting on April 27, 1937, at which time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized? A. Yes.
Q. Did you understand from Lola Skeens or anyone else that you were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting? A. No.
Q. Did you ever hear anyone say that employees were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting?

* * * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: I will restrict it to Lola Skeens.

* * * * * * * *

[fol. 6783] Trial Examiner Batten: Did she ever say anything to you? A. She never said a word to me.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, in view of Mr. Langsdale's objection, the way he worded it, I want to ask the question that I just asked without placing any limitation on it.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Did you ever hear any one say that the employees were to be paid for the time spent at the meeting of March 18 or the meeting of April 27?

[fol. 6784] A. No.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Lola Skeens tell the employees in your section that employees were to be paid for the time spent at union meetings? A. No.

Q. Were you paid for the time spent at the March 18 meeting, the April 27 meeting, or any union meeting?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Do you recall ever being paid for any time you spent at any Loyalty League meetings? A. No.

Q. Did you ever—

[fol. 6785] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is no testimony here by any instructor that Lola Skeens—is there—that they were paid for attendance at Loyalty League meetings?

Mr. Hogsett: I think some of them went pretty far. They had the company just paying for everything.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, the Board contends that the meeting of April 27 was called a Loyalty League meeting and that the meeting of May 25 was a joint Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting and a Loyalty League meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I am not concerned about your contentions.

[fol. 6786] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it was my idea this morning that the witness could testify about specific testimony of specific witnesses, and that was my intent this morning in limiting it. I didn't intend to go into the cover-all questions, because I think we have had enough of those in the last hearing and I think we have had enough of them in this hearing.

Now, if there is any specific testimony about Loyalty League meetings, all right. If there isn't, then it is my intention that we are not going to go into it.

Now, whether that covers Mr. Ingraham's situation, I don't know.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, just for the purpose of the record,—There was specific testimony from May Stevens that the minutes, the Elsa Greenhaw minutes, of May 25 were correct, which means that that was a Loyalty League meeting, and the testimony was that the employees were paid for attending that meeting. So that does make the tes- [fol. 6787] timony specific that employees were paid for attending a Loyalty League meeting on the 25th of May, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Did you ever attend a Loyalty League meeting that immediately followed a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6788] A. I never did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you ever paid for attending a Loyalty League [fol. 6789] meeting? A. No.

Q. Did Lola Skeens ever shut off the power for the purpose of your attending a meeting during working hours? A. No.

* * * * * *

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever hear any instructor direct the girls in her section to attend a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see any instructor gather the girls together in her section and take them down to a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

A. We never did go in a group.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What was the custom from the beginning of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union's existence down to July 15, 1939, as to whether the employees attended meetings with anybody they wanted to, entirely free from any interference or dominance about whom they went with?

[fol. 6790] A. The custom was, we would dress if we wanted to, or we wouldn't, and we went when we wanted to, or with whom we wanted to.

Q. Sometimes you would go after work, wearing your aprons?

A. I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. The last question— The three preceding questions are similar to those you have asked the preceding witnesses and I do not consider them proper, so I will strike the answers and it may stand as an offer of proof; that is, your three questions prior to the last question.

Mr. Tyler: What is your ruling as to the last one?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is in the same category. I didn't include it in my original statement because it is a new question which you have not asked the prior witnesses, but it may be stricken and considered as an offer of proof.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever hear of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any employee for time the employee spent on meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or work for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 6791] A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Your last question may be considered in the same status. I will strike the answer and it may be considered as an offer of proof. In other words, it now stands in the record as an offer of proof.

* * * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. How long have you been working out at Lake City?

A. Since April 13, I believe—on Monday after I quit Donnelly's.

Q. Did you quit Donnelly's or take a leave of absence?

A. I quit.

Q. Do you still belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6795] Q. Now, I think you stated that Lola Skeens did not tell you there was to be a meeting on March 18. That is the meeting at which Mrs. Reed made a speech. Is that true?

A. Yes. She didn't tell me. I didn't hear her tell anyone.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6807] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, do you have any further questions?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that's all.

I offer in evidence respondent's exhibits 54-A to —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) To I.

Mr. Ingraham: (Continuing) — to I inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: If no objections, they will be received.

* * * * * * *

A. Lora Fries.

Q. Where do you live, Miss Fries?

Q. Are you employed?

A. No.

Q. Were you employed in 1937 by the Donnelly Garment Company?

Q. When did you leave the employment of the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. In September of 1937.

Q. Were you steadily employed during the months of March, April, and May, 1937, by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I was.

Q. Do you recall what section you worked in?

A. 413.

Q. Do you recall who your instructor was?

A. Lola Skeens.

[fol. 6809] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 55-A to H inclusive, and ask you if those six checks — or eight checks rather were received by you while working at the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes, I received those checks.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the number, 413, in front of your name. What does that represent?

A. The section I was working in.

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence Respondent's exhibits 55-A to H inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: If no objections, they will be received.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State whether or not Lola Skeens ever told you or any other operators in your presence, that you would be paid for attending a meeting that was held on March 18, 1937, at which Mrs. Reed spoke.

A. She didn't tell me.

Q. Did you hear her tell anybody else?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall a meeting of employees on April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6810] Q. State whether or not Lola Skeens told you or any other employee in your presence that you were to be paid for the time spent attending that meeting.

A. No.

Q. State whether or not Lola Skeens ever told you that you were to be paid for the time spent at union meetings.

A. No.

Q. State whether or not Lola Skeens ever told you that you were to be paid for the time spent at Loyalty League meetings.

A. No.

Q. Lola Skeens testified that she told the girls in her section of union meetings by going down one side of the section and telling six girls at a time of the meetings. State whether or not she ever told you that a meeting was to be held at all.

A. No, Lola never told me that a meeting was to be held.

Q. Did Lola tell you that the meeting of March 18 was to be held?

A. She did not.

Q. Did she tell you that the meeting of April 27 was to be held?

A. No.

Q. Did she tell you that any union meeting was to be held?

A. No, not that I remember.

[fol. 6811] Q. Were you ever paid for the time spent at any of the meetings I have referred to?

A. No, I was not paid.

Q. Did Lola Skeens ever shut off the power for the purpose of sending you to any meeting?

A. No.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever have any instructor in the Donnelly plant direct girls in her section to attend any Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly plant gather the girls in her section together in a group and take them to a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

A. No.

Q. What was the custom of the Donnelly plant, beginning with the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in April, 1937, down as long as you worked there, as to whether the employees went to those meetings, [fol. 6812] with whom they chose, or whether they wanted to or not, without any direction, orders, or compulsion from anybody representing the company?

A. We went with whomever we pleased.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Donnelly Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for any time they spent at the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings, or any work they did for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, those first three questions come within my previous ruling. I don't think they are proper, and I'll strike them, and they may stand as an offer of proof; that is, the three questions preceding the one you just asked and the witness just answered.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever go to a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting wearing your apron, before you changed into your street clothes?

A. As I remember it, I always was dressed to leave the plant.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, this question, too, Mr. Tyler, is in the same classification with the first three [fol. 6813] questions you asked the witness, and that is the reason I didn't interrupt you. Now, you inject one question in between the two, and I'll strike this answer, and it may stand as an offer of proof.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you see other girls who went to Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings after working hours, still wearing their aprons?

A. I did.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is. It may be stricken and may stand as an offer of proof.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6814] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You have stated that you knew of girls going to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings, after working hours, just wearing their aprons. I want to know if you saw that frequently, and with a substantial number of girls.

A. Well, there would be a few that wore their aprons because they weren't in any hurry to go home.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, that question, of course, following the other one, I consider it improper and will strike the answer, and it may stand as an offer of proof, for the various reasons given with respect to the other questions.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6819] Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were those two meetings after working hours?

A. They were after working hours.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6820] Recross Examination.

Mr. Tyler: Didn't Lola Skeens shut the power off at the end of the working day right along every day

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

LILLIE REYNOLDS, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

A. Lillie Reynolds.

Q. Where do you work, Miss Reynolds?

Q. I will ask you what the number in front of your name indicates?

A. The 413 is the section.

Q. Did you see Lola Skeens go up the north side of the section telling the girls to go to the meeting?

[fol. 6824] Mr. Ingraham: Were you in fact paid for the time spent at any of the meetings I have referred to?

A. No.

* * * * * * *

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Reynolds, did you ever hear any instructor at the Donnelly plant direct the girls in her section to attend any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly plant gather the girls together and take them in a group to a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the custom from April 1937 up until July 15, 1939, as to whether the employees went to these meetings with anyone they chose to, or went or stayed away as they chose to?

A. Well, we went when we wanted to, and we went with whom we wanted to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6825] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever hear of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for time that member spent at meetings of the union, or doing work for the union? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever wear your apron to a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held after working hours? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. Because I wore my apron home several times; most of the time I went in a car and I was in a hurry to get home, and I just left it on.

Q. Was that a common occurrence among the girls or not?

A. Yes, I think quite a few of them went home that way with them on.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6826] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, all those questions except the one, were you ever paid for attending any union meetings? I think come within my prior rulings.

Mr. Tyler: That is, they are stricken, but may stand as an offer of proof?

Trial Examiner Batten: They may stand as an offer of proof, that's right.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6827] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You stated that Lola Skeens didn't tell you of the meeting of March 18. How did you learn of that meeting?

A. Just through the employees, the girls.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6830] Q. Now, let's go to the meeting of the 27th of April. You said Lola Skeens didn't tell you of that meeting. Who did tell you of it?

A. The same way, the employees.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6833] Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence Respondent's exhibits 56-A to I inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, they will be received.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6834] Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, does the same ruling apply to section 413 as to section 518?

Trial Examiner Batten: Exactly.

Mr. Ingraham: Then respondent makes an offer of proof that if Marie Richardson, Hazel Hardman, Emilea Raines, Grace Short Kunther, Eva Liberman, Edna Tattershall, Lois Kesinger, Millie Ihle, Katherine Sutulovick, Ruth Putnam, Emma Hansen, Edith Alexander, Lillie Reynolds, Bertha Taylor, Lucille Wilkey, Anna Spahr, Pearl Hall, Nellie Stites, Ruth McBride, Lorene Johnson, Beulah Perkins, Mildred Brooks Ballard, Opal Richardson, Dorothy Dietz Sharp, Gladys Rudd, were permitted to testify, they would testify as follows:

That they were employed at the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March, April, and May, 1937; that their instructor was Lola Skeens during said period; that each attended the meeting of March 18, 1937; that Lola Skeens did not notify them or any of them that said meeting was to be held; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section notifying the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens did not inform the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting; that they were not paid for the time spent at that meeting; that each [fol. 6835] of said persons attended the meeting of April 27, at which time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed; that Lola Skeens did not notify any of them of said meeting; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting, and that the thread girl did not go up the south side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens did not tell the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at said meeting; and that none of the persons named received any pay for the time spent at said meeting; that they attended union meetings, and were never notified by Lola Skeens that said meetings were to be held, and were not informed by Lola Skeens that they would be paid for the time spent at said meetings, or any of them; and they were not, in fact, paid for any time spent at any union meeting; that Lola Skeens did not notify them of any Loyalty League meetings, and they were never paid for any time spent at any Loyalty League meetings; that all the meetings above referred to were held after working hours.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6837] Trial Examiner Batten: I am perfectly willing the offer of proof be just as all-inclusive as the last three witnesses.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham. That Lola Skeens did not turn the power off for the purpose of sending the employees in section 413 [fol. 6838] to any of the meetings referred to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, are you finished?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the offer of proof will be rejected on the same grounds as previously stated, for the same reasons, and I will allow the same objections, if there were any.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6839] GEORGE J. McCARTHY, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Please state your name?

A. George J. McCarthy.

Q. And your occupation, Mr. McCarthy?

A. I am an employee of the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

Q. How long so employed?

A. Since July 15, 1941.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As an assistant to the comptroller.

Q. What business does the comptroller have there, what scope?

A. As a general rule, his scope is comparable to that of any comptroller. It would take quite a long while to detail all of his duties.

Q. In a general way, he handles the figures and records for the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you an accountant by profession?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you had training in that field?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6840] Q. What training have you had?

A. I was engaged for quite a number of years with a public accounting firm in Kansas City as senior accountant and tax consultant.

Q. With what firm?

A. Edward J. Dillon & Company.

Q. That is a nationally known firm, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. McCarthy, have you at our request made a comparative statement of the earnings per hour for piecework operators for the first six months of 1937 as compared with the same months in 1938? Just answer Yes or No. Have you done that?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you at our request made that study and analysis as to each and every section in the plant for those months?

A. We have.

Q. Have you at our suggestion taken in each instance the first five names on your records for a given section where those same names also appeared in the record for that section for the following year, so that you would have a comparative statement in each section of the first five names of persons who work in both sections?

A. We did.

Q. Now, in your opinion as an expert accountant, is that [fol. 6841] a perfectly fair method of sampling the results in all the sections for both of those periods?

A. Yes, I would say it would be.

Q. I hand you sheets which have been identified by the reporter as respondent's exhibits Nos. 57-A to 57-D, inclusive, and ask if that is the statement which you have prepared, at our request, upon the basis detailed?

A. Yes, it is.

(Thereupon the sheets above referred to were marked "Respondent's Exhibits Nos. 57-A to 57-D, inclusive, Witness McCarthy," for identification.)

Q. Are the facts and figures recorded in these sheets true and correct?

A. They are.

Q. Based upon records kept in the usual and due course of business?

A. That is right.

Mr. Hogsett: I offer respondent's exhibits 57-A to 57-D, inclusive.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6847] (Thereupon the sheets above referred to, previously marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 57-A to 57-D, inclusive, Witness McCarthy," for identification, were received in evidence.)

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mr. Langsdale's objection—which, of course, isn't evidence, but I want to deal with it briefly—is that you should have taken in this study the time immediately be-[fol. 6848] fore and the time immediately after this contract, which became effective, I think, July 1, 1937. Now, bearing on that, is the business of the Donnelly Garment Company a seasonal business, with a peak period at one time and a low period at another?

A. Yes, I think very definitely it is.

Q. Very definitely it is, because it is dealing in the field of women's styles and those are seasonal things, aren't they?

A. They are.

Q. In your opinion, as an expert, is it not only proper but eminently fair—or, I will say, entirely fair, to take the same season in each year, if you are going to make a comparative analysis?

A. That is the only way a just comparison could be made.

Q. Your low period is in the summer, isn't it, July, August, and September—or June and July?

A. That is right.

Q. And comparing the same period, the six months immediately before the contract became effective with the same period of months in the following year, in your opinion is that proper and fair?

A. That is.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6853] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. You recall, Mr. McCarthy, last evening, that you identified and there was received in evidence exhibits 57-A to D inclusive?

A. That's right.

Q. I want to briefly cover with you what this exhibit shows. Taking the first section, shown in the first column appears the section number, the word "operators, and then five names; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Then opposite those names respectively appears a subheading covering information for the period January through June 1937: is that right?

A. That is also right.

Q. That in turn is broken down into a column showing the hours they worked in that period?

A. That's right.

Q. The amount they received in that period?
[fol. 6854] A. That's correct.

Q. And the compilation of the average per-hour which they respectively received during that period, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Then comes another column headed "January through June 1938," is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Which in turn is broken down into the column showing the hours which they respectively worked in that period, the amount of money which they respectively received in that period, and the calculation of the average per hour which they respectively received during that period?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, the rest of these sections are set up in the same manner, are they not?

A. They are all similar.

Q. And you have covered in this exhibit all the sections in the plant?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, let's see how those —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Mr. Hogsett, you say all the sections; you mean not only sewing sections, but all sections, is that what you mean?

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I mean everything they designated as a section in which piece work operators work. I use the [fol. 6855] word in the same sense, and I believe the witness does, in which we have so frequently used it in this hearing, as a division in which piece work operators work.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Let's see how these average earnings per hour compare for this first group that we have been looking at. I will read, skipping the names, and omitting the fractions of a cent, the amounts for the period January through June. You may check whether I read it accurately.

The first person received 46¢ plus.

A. That's right.

Q. In the period from January through June, 1938, is that right?

A. No, that is January through June, 1937.

Q. 1937; it is my slip. That same person received 55¢ plus average per hour in the corresponding period of 1938, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. Now, in like manner I'll just read the 1937 figures, and the 1938 figures, and you check whether I am reading it right.

The next person, 60¢ plus and 66¢ plus.

The next person, 50¢ plus and 63¢ plus.

The next person, 45¢ plus and 56¢ plus.

The next person 47¢ plus and 59¢ plus; is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, that is the way this whole thing is set up, isn't [fol. 6856] it, in that same manner?

A. That is correct.

Q. I'll not go through the details, I'll just let the exhibit speak for itself. A. That's right.

[fol. 6858] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

[fol. 6861] Q. What is your position with the Donnelly Company? A. Assistant Comptroller.

Q. And who is the comptroller?

A. Who is the comptroller?

Q. Yes. A. Mr. John B. Bachofer.

Q. And you are one of his assistants?

A. I am his only assistant.

Q. I see. You have picked five girls from each section?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you pick the five or did someone pick them for you?

A. If I prefer to state an answer, I picked them myself.

Q. Well, do you know? I am asking you.

A. I think it is already in the record as to the manner in which the five girls were picked.

Q. I am asking you whether you did or not.

Mr. Hogsett: Tell him again how they were chosen.

[fol. 6862] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, how did you happen to pick Ludie James, for instance?

A. Well, the first five girls in every section were chosen as a representative of the employees.

Q. Well, you chose the first five in each section, did you?

A. The first five.

Q. Now, who told you to do that?

A. I don't know that I had any instructions. In my own best judgment, those girls would provide, probably, a comparable basis.

Q. Well, do you know—did Mr. Baty tell you to pick the first five girls in each section?

A. Mr. Baty didn't have anything to do with it.

Q. Did anyone tell you to take the first five girls in each section? A. No.

Q. Do you know how you happened to do that?

A. It was my own best judgment, if we were going to provide—or rather compile a comparable statement, showing comparable figures for two different periods, we had to form some basis of judgment—or rather some standard of comparative people, and in my own best judgment we thought the first five in each section, a comparison of their salaries, would be a comparable statement.

Q. Well, now, did you do that on your own judgment, or [fol. 6863] was it suggested to you by anybody, that you take the first five?

A. No, I did it on my own judgment.

* * * * * *

Q. Why did you take January through June, 1938? Who told you to do that?

A. No one told me to do it. January through June, 1938, of course, we compared—it is already in the record that the Donnelly Garment Company business is a seasonal business, and for the first six months of 1937 an attempt was made to find an equal number of months during a comparable period so far as the activities of the Donnelly Garment Company were concerned in a period of work; and the next immediate period following were the first six months in 1938.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6865] Redirect Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Is it a fact that Mr. Bachofer is ill, laid up?

A. That's right.

Q. He has had an operation within the last month, has he not? A. Yes.

Q. Is he on duty or has he been since that time?

A. No.

Q. This statement simply represents your judgment of a fair sampling of the actual earnings of the operators for the two comparable periods? A. That's right.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6866] Opal Chaney, a witness heretofore called by and on behalf of the respondent, having been previously sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Chaney, I hand you respondent's exhibit 51-G; which is a check dated May 6, 1937, and ask you if you received that check from the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit 51-G.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6869] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Chaney, were March and April and May busy months at the factory, when there was a great deal of production? A. April and May is always busy.

* * * * * * *

Agnes Hutchinson, a witness heretofore called by and on behalf of the respondent, having been previously sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 53-H, which is a pay check of the Donnelly Garment Company and ask [fol. 6879] you if you received that pay check.

A. Yes, that is my signature.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence respondent's exhibit 53-H.

Trial Examiner Batten: If no objection, it will be received.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6871] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were January, February, March, April, May, and June busy seasons at the Donnelly plant?

A. They usually are, then they have their spring lines.

Q. And that is the height of the production season for the plant? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

(Witness excused.)

MARY COPOWYCZ, a witness called by and on behalf of the respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Please state your name. A. Mary Copowycz.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Copowycz?

A. 2719 Gillham Road.

Q. Are you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company? A. I am.

Q. What is your position?

[fol. 6872] A. I am an instructor.

Q. Were you an instructor during the years 1937, 1938, and 1939? A. I was.

Q. Mrs. Copowycz, did you know a girl named Bessie Weilert? A. I did.

Q. During the year 1939, did she work in the same section you did? A. She did.

Q. Bessie Weilert has testified, Mrs. Copowycz, that you and Rose Todd framed her. State whether or not that is a fact.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought I struck that testimony out.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6873] Mr. Langsdale: I thought he struck it. That is my recollection. I thought he should and I think he did.

* * * * * * *

Miss Weyand. Yes, I am certain you struck that whole incident, because I had it on direct.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Well, may the record show, if you didn't [fol. 6874] strike it, you will strike it now? I want the record clear. I thought you did, and my recollection at the time was that I personally thought it should be stricken, and I thought you did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if it hasn't been it may be, but there isn't any question about it.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Copowycz, did Mr. Baty, Mrs. Wherry, or anyone else ever tell you that the girls that worked in the section in which you worked would be paid for attending the meeting of March 18, at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6875] A. No, they did not.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Mr. Baty or Mrs. Wherry or anyone else advise you the operators were to be paid for the meeting of April 27? A. No.

[fol. 6876] Q. Did Mr. Baty or Mrs. Wherry advise you that the operators were to be paid for any union meeting?

A. Well, no, because they were always after working hours.

Q. Did Mr. Baty or Mrs. Wherry ever advise you that the employees were to be paid for time spent at Loyalty League meetings? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any allowance on any cards showing that employees were paid for time spent at the meetings I have mentioned, or any of them? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever turn the power off in your section for the purpose of sending girls to any meetings?

A. No, I didn't.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, was that any meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: Or any meetings I have mentioned.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I don't know what your plans are, but I thought I indicated pretty clearly yesterday that if any of those instructors, as a result of testimony, were involved on those matters, they might testify as to them. Now, you are asking this witness a general question: the generalities of the situation we have long since passed. Now, I don't know what your plans are, but do your plan to call all the instructors?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I planned to call a number of them.

[fol. 6877] Trial Examiner Batten: How many?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, in view of what you said about other witnesses, I was going to call at least three.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Ingraham, if you planned to call them all, you call them, every one of them, if that is your plan.

So, we will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, do you feel that that isn't rebuttal?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I clearly don't think it is, Mr. Ingraham.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6879] Cross-Examination

Mr. Tyler: Mrs. Copowycz, did you ever direct the girls in your section to attend any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in a group?

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as not proper surrebuttal.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I would suggest then you ask the questions as you did of the other witnesses, and if I decide that it is not proper, it may stand as an offer of proof, rather than going through it, and then making an offer of proof.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6880] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever know of any other instructor in the plant directing the girls in her section to go to a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting as a group?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. What was the custom in the Donnelly plant, from the date that the union was formed, down to July 15, 1939, as to whether the employees went to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings with anyone they pleased, and whether they wanted to or not, without any pressure or direction on them, or whether they were directed or forced to go in a certain group?

* * * * * *

A. They could do just as they pleased.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever hear of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for any time that that employee spent attending union meetings, [fol. 6881] or doing union work? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever know of Bessie Weilert being paid for any time spent attending meetings of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did she ever make any such a report to you?

A. No, I don't think she did.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Well, do you have any memory of her making any such report as that to you? A. No, I don't.

Q. Did she ever hand you any written request or mem- [fol. 6882] orandum asking that she be allowed payment for tending to any union business? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did you ever wear your apron to a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, when the meeting was held after working hours?

A. I don't remember, but I could have.

Q. Do you know whether that was commonly done or not in the plant? A. It has been done.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Did the employees get any additional rights through that contract, do you know?

A. Why, I think they did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6883] Cross-Examination

By Miss Weyand:

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6884] Q. Do you remember any meetings of the employees of any kind, from 1932 on, which were held during working hours?

Mr. Stottle: That is objected to as going back to the period Your Honor has ruled on.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is it, Mr. Stottle?

Mr. Stottle: That goes back to the period you ruled on, [fol. 6885] 1932.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener objects; that is not proper cross-examination on surrebuttal, going back to 1932.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

A. Well, I know that we have went to a style show, and that was during working hours.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know what arrangement was made to pay the girls for the time they spent at the style show?

A. I wouldn't know.

* * * * * * *

Q. Do you know in what years you had style shows that the girls attended during working hours?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember how often it occurred?

A. Not very often, no, but I don't remember how often.

Q. Do you remember any occasions on which Mrs. Reed spoke to the girls during working hours? A. No, I don't.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did she speak to groups of them during working hours?

A. No, I don't remember of it. I don't think so.

[fol. 6886] Q. What was that?

A. I don't think she ever spoke during working hours.

Q. Did she make speeches at the style shows?

A. Yes, she has.

Q. That was during working hours, wasn't it?

A. Yes, it was, although sometimes we have had style shows after working hours.

Q. Did Senator Reed ever make a speech down at the plant at a style show or other meetings?

A. I never saw Senator Reed in the Donnelly Garment Company.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6891] By Miss Weyand:

Q. What section were you the instructor of, from April, 1937, to July 15, 1939?

A. In 1937, the first half of the year, I think I was in 522; the last half I was in 517; then I was transferred the last part of 1938 to 414, in which I have been ever since.

Q. And were employees in your section notified of meet-

[fol. 6892] ings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during that period?

A. Well, they have bulletins in the elevators and in the lobby of the building.

Q. Were i. d. m.'s ever brought to your section, notifying employees in your section of a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. If they were I didn't know anything about it.

Q. How are i. d. m.'s brought to your section?

A. Well, that is such a common occurrence; they have i. d. m.'s for anything, if they have a birthday party, if they want to sell a house, or anything like that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6893] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who brought the i. d. m.'s to your section regularly?

A. You mean pertaining to anything, or what exactly?

Q. Let's take first an i. d. m. which comes down from the office, notifying the girls of the vacation they would have, July 4 off; how would that i. d. m. come to your section?

A. Through a pick-up girl.

Q. What would happen when that i. d. m. arrived at your section? Who would she deliver it to, or where would the pick-up girl put it?

A. We have a basket up there for the girls to put the i. d. m.'s in.

Q. When an i. d. m. is put in the basket, which comes to your section by a pick-up girl, what happens to it next?

A. Well, either the thread girl or myself would take care of it.

Q. How would you take care of it?

A. Well, they are usually to us, and not to the section, and if they are pertaining to the section, why, we pass them through the section.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6895] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. The style shows that you have testified about were style shows given by the Donnelly Garment Company, were they not?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And during working hours?

A. No, not always.

Q. Well, some of them?

A. Yes. I can recollect one or two.

Q. Given during working hours?

A. That's right.

Q. I believe you testified you didn't know whether the girls were paid or not for those times they lost from their work?

A. The office took care of that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6896] Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, in the cross-examination of Board's witness May Stevens the intervener examined her with reference to intervener's rejected exhibit No. 20, and especially with respect to page 6090 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record. I now have photostatic copies of that page of the record, which I offer in evidence.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received on the same basis as the other pages which were received that were offered by the respondent in Intervener's exhibit No. 20. Now, you understand what I mean by that, Mr. Lane?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6897] LEE BATY, a witness recalled by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, having been previously duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows:

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you advise Lola Skeens or Etta Dorsey that employees were to be paid for attending union meetings?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you advise Mrs. Wherry or anyone else that employees were to be paid for attending union meetings?

A. No.

Q. If orders were given to pay for the time spent by employees at the meetings I have referred to, who would give those orders.

A. I would give the orders, if it pertained to the production department.

A. They were.

Q. Did you ever give any orders that employees were to be paid for time spent at Loyalty League meetings?

A. I did not.

A. I went over them occasionally.

A. There were no allowances made for anything of that kind.

A. I did occasionally.

Q. Were there any allowances on those cards showing that employees in Lola Skeens' section were given allowances for time spent at any of the meetings I have referred to?

A. There was not.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Baty, did you ever direct instructors to take the [fol. 6901] girls in their sections to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in a body?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know of that being done as a custom in the plant?

A. I never heard of any such thing.

Q. Do you know what the custom was in the Donnelly plant from the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union down to July 15, 1939, as to whether employees did as they pleased about whom they went to union meetings with, or whether they went at all or not, or whether there was some restraint or control over them in that matter?

A. I have no information about it. I don't know how they went. I knew they had meetings, and that's about all.

Q. Did you ever give instructions that any employee was to be paid for attending meetings of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I never gave any instructions that they would be paid by the company.

Q. Do you know of their being paid by the company?

A. They were not, to my knowledge.

[fol. 6904] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you ever know of any allowances on any of the cards you examined in Etta Dorsey's section for time lost at fashion shows?

A. I did.

Q. Or Loyalty League meetings?

A. No.

Q. How was that designated, the loss for fashion shows?

A. If there was time lost on account of the fashion show, or for any other reason, I put it on the card.

[fol. 6905] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Baty, are style shows a part of the education of the employees of the company?

* * * * * * *

A. They are.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't presume the company is being charged with paying them for the time they spent attending a style show; at least, I hope not.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6907] Fred V. Brown, a witness called by and on behalf of intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you testify in the other hearing, Mr. Brown?

The Witness: No, sir.

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name?

A. Fred V. Brown.

A. I am supervisor over the cutting department.

Q. How long have you been supervisor of the cutting department?

A. A year.

Q. Are you now a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long ago did you cease being a member of it?

[fol. 6908] Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal. There is no issue in this case as to when he ceased, unless it was during the period covered by this examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, having limited the hearing to July 15, 1939, how could it be material, assuming my ruling is correct, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Assuming your ruling is correct, that everything that has happened since July 15, 1939, is inadmissible, then of course this is inadmissible.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I shall so rule, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: An automatic exception is allowed, of course?

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Brown, you were one of the original members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during the time you were a member of that union were you ever paid for attending meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I was not.

Q. During the year 1937 were you a member of the executive committee of that union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever paid by the company for attending any meetings of the executive committee?

[fol. 6909] A. I was not.

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held during working hours?

Q. Did you ever have any knowledge of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company paying any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or into its treasury any sums for payment of employees for doing any work for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or attending any of its meetings?

A. I have no recollection of it.

A. Oh, yes, they came to the meetings, some of them, with their aprons on.

Q. Did you ever know of any instance where an instructor gathered the employees together in her section and took them to a Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting as a group? A. No, I do not.

Q. What was the custom as to whether employees from [fol. 6910] April 27, 1937, until July 15, 1939, were free to attend Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings with anyone they chose or whether there was some pressure or control put on them as to whom they would go with or how they would go?

A. Well, they were free to go as they wanted to. There was no pressure, that I know of, put on anyone.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, those last three questions—if you have finished with that series— Have you?

Mr. Tyler: I think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Those last three questions I think were improper. They were not proper rebuttal.

I shall strike the answers and it may stand as an offer of proof.

Mr. Tyler: Very well.

Mr. Tyler: Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union pay any of its members who did work for that union?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6911] A. Yes.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What ones?

A. Well, we paid taxi fares that some of them had paid out—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. I am not going into all of these accounts, Mr. Tyler. I think it was covered in the last hearing; if it wasn't, it should have been, so I am not going into all of these accounts.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6913] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Brown, will you answer the question as to what [fol. 6914] particular members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, if any, were paid for work they did for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I paid Hobart Atherton—I bought his gas bills—I bought a gas ticket for the running around that he did for the union. And I paid Raymond Smith for coming down from St. Joseph—driving down from St. Joseph.

Q. Were there any salaries paid?

A. Yes. I paid Rose Todd's salary, and I, myself, drew a salary.

Q. At that time were any other members of the executive committee paid anything for their services?

A. They were not.

Q. Do you know whether they have been since that time?

A. I understand they have.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, since July, 1939, or up to July, 1939?

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I will say, after April 27, 1937, and up to July 15, 1939, do you know whether any other members of the executive committee were paid for their services by the union?

A. Well, no, I don't know for sure whether they have been or not.

Q. Do you recall a contract made by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with their employer in the spring [fol. 6915] of 1937, in a general way? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether the employees obtained any benefits—additional rights under that contract that they didn't have before? A. Yes, they did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6918] JACK MCCONAUGHEY, a witness recalled by and on behalf of intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union having been previously duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Jack McConaughey.

Q. You are the same Jack McConaughey who testified in the hearing in 1939 in this matter, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a charter member—meaning by that, one of the original members—of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you still belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6919] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union customarily, did you, from 1937, in the spring, until July 15, 1939, or thereabouts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever paid by the company for attending any of those meetings? A. I was not.

Q. You were a member of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at one time before 1939, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever paid by the company for attending any of those meetings? A. No, sir.

A. Which—

Q. The executive committee meetings.

A. They were held at the noon hour or in the evenings, [fol. 6920] or sometimes after 5.

Q. If the meetings were of substantial length, when would those meetings customarily be held?

A. Usually at one of the committee member's house.

Q. Any other place except the committee members' houses? A. At the office of Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

[fol. 6921] Q. During that time did you ever receive for the union any sums of money from the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company to be paid to the union or to any members of the union from the company or the Sales Company?. A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6922] Cross-Examination

By Miss Weyand:

* * * * * *

[fol. 6923] Q. How long did you have off for lunch?

A. My job is of such a nature that I had to arrange my lunch hour—at that time I don't remember exactly how long I took.

Q. Do you know how long other time workers had off for lunch?

A. Well, in the normal periods, in the production department, 45 minutes; and in the office, an hour.

Q. Are you speaking of time workers or pieceworkers?

A. Time workers.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6925] Q. Did you ever have any deductions from your pay check for time you spent attending to matters of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I didn't spend time with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during working hours.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6930] Mabel Riggs, a witness called by and on behalf of the Intervener, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name—is it Mrs. Riggs?

A. Mrs. Mabel Riggs.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Riggs?

A. I live at 3021 Campbell.

Q. Were you one of the original members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Why, I am a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, did you join it at the time it was organized?

A. Yes, I joined it at the time it was organized.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. And you have been a member ever since?

A. I have.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly plant? A. A little more than 13 years.

Q. And that employment, has it been comparatively continuous? A. It has been continuous.

Q. And are you reasonably well acquainted with the customs of work that go on down there?

A. Well, I would say reasonably, yes.

[fol. 6931] Q. What kind of work have you done there?

A. My work has been in the designing room. I work with patterns.

Q. And have you done any other kind of work down there?

A. Well, our patterns involve a good many different kinds of work, and most of it has been with the patterns.

Q. Have you ever been an operator? A. I have not.

Q. Did you customarily attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I did.

Q. Did you attend any held during working hours?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear any instructor in the plant direct the group over which she was instructor to attend any union meeting in a group? A. No, I have not.

Q. What was the custom in the Donnelly Garment Company as to whether employees attended Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings with whom they pleased and as they pleased, or whether there was any pressure or compulsion from the company to require them to go in a group, or in any other manner.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6932] A. Well, I can speak for just our own floor, and if we were enthusiastic and we wanted to go to the meetings, no one had to tell us or take us.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment: if you are going to that question, the two prior questions, I think, come within my prior ruling, and I will strike them and they may stand as an offer of proof.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Sales Company, for attending any Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings?

A. I attended those meetings on my own time, and didn't expect pay.

Q. Well, were you ever paid? A. No.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6933] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You have been a member of the executive committee?

A. I was a member the second year.

Q. That would be 1938? A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Company or the Donnelly Sales Company for attending any meetings of the executive committee? A. No.

Q. When were those meetings generally held?

A. They were held during the noon hour, or immediately after our work, after 5 in the evening, and on occasions in the evening.

Q. Did you have any knowledge of the contract executed between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Company on May 27, 1937, and amended or added to by a wage agreement on June 22, 1937?

A. I had no hand in forming that. Of course, I have read it and I have benefitted by it.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Do you know of any benefits received by yourself or other employees from the execution of this contract?

[fol. 6934] Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think, Mr. Tyler, that comes within the same category, does it not, as the other questions?

Mr. Tyler: I wish to make the same offer of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: The same objection.

Mr. Tyler: As to that made to the answers of those other questions, and as was made in answer in the testimony of the witness Fred Brown.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the same offer and the same objections; I will make the same ruling.

Mr. Tyler: I don't believe I asked this question: Do you know whether women employees of the Donnelly Garment Company attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held immediately after hours, still wearing their work aprons or not?

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, they ride to and from in their white aprons.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6936] Mr. Tyler: Mrs. Riggs, is there any further explanation you want to make about that? If there is, go ahead and explain.

* * * * * *

A. This is the explanation. I mean they would naturally go to work in their white aprons. I know some of the girls said, "I don't want to wear my dress, I want to wear my white apron, so why put them on?"

Mr. Tyler: Was the wearing of aprons to those meetings, held immediately after working hours, fairly common? A. I would say it was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6937] Cross-Examination
By Miss Weyand:

* * * * * *

Q. How long did you have off for lunch?
A. We had one hour.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6939] ALVIN REIFEL, a witness called by and on behalf of the intervener, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Alvin Reifel.

A. 9 years.

Q. What work do you do there, now?

Q. Were you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union when it was first formed?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Have you remained a member ever since?

Q. During the time you were on the committee.

A. Do you mean the place or the time?

Q. The time.

A. During noon hours or after working hours.

Q. If the meeting was substantial in length, what was the custom as to whether it was held at noon or after working hours?

A. I didn't get the question.

Q. If the meeting was going to be long, what was the custom as to whether it was held at noon or after working hours? A. After working hours.

[fol. 6941] Q. Did you ever see, during the time of your employment at the plant, any instructor or any other person, gather together a group of persons and take them as a group to a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Tyler: What was the custom, since April 27, 1937, and down to the middle of July, 1939, as to whether employees in the Donnelly Garment plant attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, with whomever they please, and as they pleased, or whether they were under pressure or direction from anyone as to how they should attend those meetings?

A. As they pleased, no pressure.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, those last two questions, Mr. Tyler, I think come under the ruling that I have made, and I strike the answers, and they may stand as an offer of proof, the same as with the other witnesses.

[fol. 6943] Cross Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. As I understood your testimony—I want to be certain about it—you did not attend any such meetings, either Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or meetings of your committee, representing that union, during working hours; that's right, is it?

A. That's right.

Q. So, of course, there would be no deductions?

A. That's right.

[fol. 6946] ELIZABETH BARRETT, a witness called by and on behalf of intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Elizabeth Barrett.

[fol. 6947] Q. Is it Mrs. Barrett? A. Yes.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 819 West Seventy-seventh Street.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you worked there?

A. Since 1930.

Q. Substantially continuously? A. Always.

Q. Have you been a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union since it was formed? A. I have.

Q. And have you been a member of the executive committee at some time prior to July 15, 1939?

A. 1938. I was in 1939, too.

Q. You were on the committee in 1938? A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for any time spent at a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting? A. I was not.

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for any time spent at a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union executive committee meeting?

[fol. 6948] A. No, I wasn't.

Q. What work do you do at the Donnelly plant?

A. I am a pieceworker. I work in the belt section.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Has that been true since the spring of 1937?

A. I have always worked in the belt section.

Q. Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly Company gather the girls together in her section and take them in a group to any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I have not.

Q. What has been the custom at the plant as to whether the employees went to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with whom they pleased, and in such manner as they pleased, or whether there have been some instructions, orders, or pressure for them to go in certain groups?

A. We went as we pleased.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you ever wear your work apron to a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held after [fol. 6949] working hours? A. I have.

Q. Do you know whether that has or has not been a common custom at the Donnelly plant?

A. It is common.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the last three questions, Mr. Tyler, of course, are within the ruling which I have made, so that I will strike the answers and the answers may stand as an offer of proof.

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, that suggests to my mind this: Your Honor has from time to time rejected or refused to receive or stricken out certain evidence offered by the intervener, either through cross-examination of respondent's witnesses or through its own witnesses. The respondent, deeming each of those rulings adverse to its position, respectfully asks that respondent be allowed an exception to each such ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't need to allow you one. You are permitted one, an automatic exception.

[fol. 6950] Trial Examiner Batten: I will say, I grant you such ruling. Now, of course, I assume if any question comes up concerning any specific ruling, as to whether or not it is adverse, someone would have to settle it—I mean, if a difference of opinion arises.

[fol. 6951] Mr. Hogsett: I can't see that there would be any reasonable difference of opinion about this, for instance, as illustrative: Where you strike out, as you have evidence offered in response to three such questions as Mr. Tyler has asked each of his witnesses and asked each of our witnesses, that certainly is adverse.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think there is any question but what that is adverse, because I have, I would say, on a half a dozen occasions, asked the respondent and the intervener to cooperate to expedite the hearing. Therefore I could hardly say that it wasn't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6960] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, might I ask: How many more witnesses do you intend to interrogate along the same line as these others?

Mr. Tyler: I expect to continue until I feel I have offered a fair cross-section of the witnesses to refute the testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I should tell you now that, as far as these questions and this line of testimony is concerned, I don't think— You have some others here?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I have other witnesses here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Were you contemplating more than you have here?

* * * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: I intend to continue until I feel that a fair cross-section of the evidence available to meet new matter has been presented.

[fol. 6961] Trial Examiner Batten: You proceed.

* * * * * *

MARJORIE GREEN, a witness recalled by and on behalf of intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, having been previously duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Marjorie Green.

Q. You are the same Marjorie Green who testified in the previous part of this hearing held in 1939, are you not?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been there?

A. About nine years.

Q. Practically continuously? A. Continuously.

Q. Now, Miss Green, did you ever see any instructor at the Donnelly plant gather or call the girls in her section together and take them in a group to a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6962] A. No, I didn't.

Mr. Tyler: What was the custom at the Donnelly plant as to whether employees attended meetings of the [fol. 6963] Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with whomever they pleased and in such manner as they pleased, or whether there was any pressure or orders put upon them to attend in certain groups or in a certain manner?

* * * * * *

A. They attended as they pleased.

Mr. Tyler: You were a member of the executive committee in some year, were you not, Miss Green?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, those questions thus far, I think, come within my ruling and I will strike the answers, and the answers may stand as an offer of proof.

Mr. Hogsett: Respondent respectfully excepts to that ruling.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, Miss Green, you were a member of the executive committee in some year?

A. Yes, I was.

[fol. 6964] Q. What year was it?

A. 1937, 1938, and part of 1939, I believe.

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for attending any meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, I was not.

Q. Were you ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for attending any meetings of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Did you ever see women employees at the Donnelly plant wear their work aprons to the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that occurred after working hours? A. Quite often, yes.

Q. Was that a common occurrence or not?

A. Yes, it was.

Mr. Tyler: That's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the last two questions, I think, also come within my prior ruling.

Mr. Tyler: They are stricken, but the answers may stand as an offer of proof?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. If you will permit me, I will say the answers are stricken and they will stand as an offer of proof.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6965] Mr. Hogsett: Respondent respectfully excepts to the ruling.

* * * * * *

Cross-Examination

By Miss Weyand:

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Were any deductions ever made from your check for any time you took off to do Donnelly Garment Workers' Union matters?

* * * * * *

[fol. 6966] A. I took no time off from the company to attend Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings.

Miss Weyand: How long a lunch period did you have?

A. An hour.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6967] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I am still more convinced that any more witnesses along this line—it isn't only cumulative but it is repetitious, especially if they testified in the prior hearing, as was indicated this morning. If you have witnesses you want to present who will testify to specific matters or other matters, you may produce them.

Mr. Tyler: I have one witness who will testify to an entirely separate state of facts. But I except to Your Honor's ruling, and I would like to make an offer of proof.

[fol. 6968] Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by the following witnesses: Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton—

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler. (Continuing) —Hobart Atherton, Walter Higgins, Mary McClellan, and Freeland Rife, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union between April 27, 1937, and July 15, 1939; and that at some part of that time they were members of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that at no time and on no occasion during that period were they ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for attending Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or meetings of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that they had no knowledge of and never saw any instructor gather the employees in her section together and take them as a group to any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that the employees were free to attend such meetings with whom and in such manner as they chose, without any interference, dictation or pressure from the employer; and that the women employees in the Donnelly plant frequently attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union [fol. 6969] held after working hours while still wearing their work aprons; and that they were never paid for the time spent at any meetings of either the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer for the reasons I have previously stated.

Mr. Hogsett: Respondent joins in the offer and re- [fol. 6970] spectfully excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, understand, my rejection of the offer, under those circumstances, would be also applicable to you.

Mr. Hogsett: I so regard it, and it is perhaps unnecessary for me to repeat these exceptions, but I think it can't do any harm. I am doing it respectfully, in order to preserve the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Ingraham, will you take the stand please?

R. J. Ingraham, a witness called by and on behalf of intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Ingraham, you have been in attendance at the hearing of this case for the past several days, have you not? A. Yes, I have.

Q. Did you hear the testimony of Marguerite Keyes, who was on the stand, I believe, Monday?

A. I heard her testimony when she testified.

Q. Her testimony referred to an alleged telephone conversation sometime in the spring of 1937 between Mr.

Keyes and yourself. Did you hear that testimony?
[fol. 6971] A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what the facts are about that matter?

A. Well, I never had any such telephone conversation with Mr. Keyes or anyone else. I never discussed with anyone the employment of an attorney for the Loyalty League. I never represented the Loyalty League and I never was consulted by the Loyalty League.

In the second place, it is, of course, rather absurd that I would call Mr. Keyes, who was a layman, and ask him what he thought of a lawyer, Gossett, or anyone else. I have practiced law for 20 years or more in Kansas City and I don't think I needed any advice from Mr. Keyes as to whether Mr. Gossett or anybody else was a good lawyer, and I know I never had any such conversation.

Q. Do you know when Mr. Keyes first came to Kansas City?

A. Oh, I don't recall exactly. It was possibly in 1933 or 1934.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Rose Todd suggesting any lawyer for the Loyalty League or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

A. No, I never did.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6972] Mr. Tyler: Under the rulings of the Examiner, the intervener rests.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, just a moment. I want to know what rulings you are referring to before I accept your rest.

Mr. Tyler: Your rulings that further testimony would be cumulative and allowing me to make an offer of proof.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there anything further in the line of testimony?

(No response.)

If not, is there anything further along any line?

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, I'm not certain what the status of the record is with respect to certain written offers of proof.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6978] Trial Examiner Batten: I think first we will check on the exhibits. Board's Exhibit No. 1 I will come to in a few minutes.

Board's Exhibit No. 32, which is a wage and hour statement, of course, was covered by my striking of certain testimony of Mrs. Reed subsequent to July 15, 1939.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6979] Respondent's exhibit No. 43, which is the Judge Miller findings, and so forth, I reserved decision on. I will receive that. I checked on the record and I find that it is in there once before in an offer of proof. I will receive it, although if I write a report I will have to pass upon the question of what it is material to; I am not passing upon that point now. I meant by that, because I am receiving it, it doesn't necessarily mean that it has a direct connection with any testimony, but I will pass upon that later.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6980] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, my notes indicate that there is some question about the status of Board's exhibit No. 1-SSSSS. However, I checked the record and I find that it has been received. That was the "Offer of [fol. 6981] Proof and Protest Against Ruling of Examiner Made August 19, 1942." That offer was denied.

* * * * * *

On September 4, Mr. Ingraham made a motion to withdraw the name of Ella Mae Hyde from an offer of proof, as I recall it. That motion will be allowed.

On September 8—I believe that was the date—respondent reoffered certain offers of proof and reoffered respondent's exhibit No. 2 and intervener's exhibit No. 20 (rejected). I reserved decision on those. Those offers are now denied.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, no,— Mr. Ingraham reoffered certain of the offers of proof that were given in the prior hearing, and reoffered respondent's exhibit No. [fol. 6982] 2 of the prior hearing, and intervener's rejected exhibit No. 20 of the prior hearing.

Mr. Tyler: That immediately followed the reoffer of—Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. I will get to that. I have it here, Mr. Tyler. However, before getting to your matter, Mr. Tyler, I have another matter here.

There are pending in the record Board's exhibits Nos. 1-TTTTT, 1-UUUUU, 1-VVVVV, 1-WWWWW, and 1-XXXXX; which are offers of proof by the respondent. I reserved decision on those. Those offers of proof are rejected. That was on— I don't have the date on that, but—

Mr. Lane: 1-XXXXX is the intervener's offer.

Trial Examiner Batten: 1-XXXXX? Yes, you are correct. 1-TTTTT, 1-UUUUU, 1-VVVVV, and 1-WWWWW are respondent's offers, and they are rejected. 1-XXXXX is the intervener's offer, and that is rejected.

Now, on the other matter, Mr. Tyler, your reoffer of intervener's exhibit No. 20 (rejected),— You reoffered that?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That reoffer is rejected.

On September 11, Miss Weyand made an offer of proof with respect to Board's exhibit No. 39-A, 39-B, 39-C, 39-D, and 39-E (rejected), and that offer of proof is rejected. I had reserved decision on that.

Now, in order that the record be clear, yesterday—no, [fol. 6983] on the 15th— Was the 15th yesterday?

Miss Weyand: No. The day before.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, the day before. —respondent made an offer of proof regarding the testimony of three witnesses employed in section 518 and an offer of proof with respect to three witnesses employed in section 413. Now, I think those offers of proof were rejected, although I am not clear about it. If the record is not clear, those two offers of proof are rejected.

Now, as far as my notes are concerned, that covers all matters which I have that are pending.

Mr. Hogsett, do your records indicate anything further?

Mr. Hogsett: Mine do not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Nothing except what Mr. Lane will now offer.

Mr. Lane: When we reconvened after the recess during which the matter of designation of a new Trial Examiner was under consideration, Your Honor suggested that the intervener file a written pleading joining in the respondent's motion for the designation of a different Trial Examiner and affidavit of prejudice, and, also, application for continuance. We have joined in both of those matters and I have now prepared a written pleading, if Your Honor cares to have it for the file.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. That will be Board's ex- [fol. 6984] hibit No. 1-ZZZZZ. Do you have a duplicate of that, Mr. Lane?

* * * * * * *

It will be received.

* * * * * * *

Yesterday there was a witness, Mary Copowycz, on the stand, and during the cross-examination of Mr. Tyler, which begins at page 6879, the question at line 2, the question at line 6, and the answers thereto, the question at line [fol. 6985] 4, page 6882, and the answer, and the question at line 8, and the answer—those questions and answers are stricken, in accordance with my prior ruling on those other witnesses. Those are the questions which I find are the same as the others, Mr. Tyler. The answers may stand as an offer of proof.

Mr. Hogsett: Respondent adds here its exception to that order.

Exceptions By Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, To Order Denying Designation Of Another Trial Examiner And Order Denying A Continuance.

United States Of America

Before The National Labor Relations Board.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. C-1382.

The intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, excepts to the order made by National Labor Relations Board on July 28, 1942 (Board's Exhibit 1 GGGGG) denying the application made by respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, and joined in by this intervener, for the designation of another trial examiner and application for continuance, and excepts to the rulings and actions of the trial examiner pursuant to such order for the following reasons:

1. Because upon the facts said order, rulings and action are contrary to law.

2. By said order intervener is denied due process of law contrary to the provisions of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States in that intervener is denied a full and fair hearing before a fair and impartial tribunal because the trial examiner, James C. Batten, has formed a fixed conclusion in his mind that the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals ordered received in this case has no probative value and should be given no weight or consideration.

[fol. 62] 3. Because the Board bases its order upon the erroneous assumption that the Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that trial examiner Batten was not shown to be biased or prejudiced whereas the Circuit Court of Appeals did not have presented to it and did not consider or rule upon the question of whether in receiving this evidence and making his findings and conclusions thereon and in making an intermediate report thereon said James C. Batten could act fairly and impartially and without a fixed opinion that such evidence was entitled to little or no weight or value.

4. Because said order in denying the continuance was, under the circumstances shown, an abuse of discretion upon the part of the Board.

Date 8/19/42 — Witness .....

(Offer of Proof by Respondent Donnelly Garment Company, against Ruling of Examiner made August 19, 1942.)

United States Of America
Before The National Labor Relations Board
Seventeenth Region.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company, Respondent
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract,
Intervener.

The respondent Donnelly Garment Company protests against the ruling this day made by the Examiner to the effect

(1) that the respondent shall not be allowed to place its witnesses on the stand in the order it desires.

(2) Against the ruling that the respondent shall not be allowed to continue and complete the examination of Wave Tobin before proceeding to the introduction of the evidence of other witnesses.

Respondent shows that Wave Tobin was sworn as a witness on the 12th day of August, 1942, and that her examination was not concluded but was interfered with at about 3:00 o'clock P. M. by the Examiner, engaging in a colloquy with counsel which consumed all of the time until the adjournment at 3:40 P. M. August 12, 1942.

Upon the resumption of the hearing on this day, the respondent sought to continue the examination of said witness Tobin.

[fol. 64] The respondent offers to prove by the said Tobin that under the customs existing in labor unions and especially in the I.L.G.W.U. in the year 1937 and immediately thereafter, instructors or those employed in similar occupations, whether known as instructors or by other names, and head cutters and head pattern makers, whether known as head cutters or head pattern makers or by some other designation, were generally and usually regarded as competent and proper members of a union and were received into such unions while engaged at the work of instructors, head cutters or head pattern makers.

Respondent further expects to prove by Wave Tobin that the I.L.G.W.U. organized strikes in the plants of the Gerner, Gordon and Missouri Garment companies in Kansas City in March, 1937. That said Tobin, acting as agent and representative of the I.L.G.W.U., was in charge of said strikes and aided, abetted, encouraged and directed said strikes, and the violence there perpetrated; and to show by said witness the nature of said violence and activities, and that it was intended that these same methods should be employed against the respondent and its employees.

Respondent alleges on information and belief and offers to prove by said Wave Tobin that said Wave Tobin is acquainted with the kind and character of contracts made by the I.L.G.W.U. with garment manufacturers in Kansas City and elsewhere; that Wave Tobin is acquainted with the methods of manufacture and the division of work in garment plants; and that employees in garment plants doing directory work are eligible for membership in the I.L.G.W.U.; and respondent states that it intends to show and can show by said Wave Tobin that the wages provided for in said contracts and paid under said contracts between the I.L.G.W.U. and garment manufacturers in 1937 [fol. 65] and at the present time are far less than the wages paid by respondent, and to show other provisions of said contract, all to the end of showing how and why the employees formed the plant union, and that it was organized for the purpose of preserving and improving the advantages they had in wages and conditions of labor and to protect themselves against the strikes, wrongs and outrages threatened to be visited upon them.

Respondent expects to develop from the testimony of the said Tobin, if she is permitted to testify, many other facts and circumstances bearing upon the issues of this case, and states that it is advised and believes that the facts to be developed will be of material assistance to respondent in the preparation and presentation of its case.

Respondent therefore renews its request that it be permitted to continue the examination of Wave Tobin at this time and to present its other witnesses in the order which respondent may see fit.

(Supplemental Offer of Proof by Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, against Ruling of Examiner Made August 19, 1942, in respect of Testimony of Wave Tobin.)

Now comes respondent Donnelly Garment Company, and supplementing its offer of proof made August 19, 1942, in respect of testimony of Wave Tobin, further offers to prove by said witness Wave Tobin the following facts:

That as manager of the Kansas City Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union she has custody of and access to records of said Kansas City Joint Board; that such records if produced would be identified by said witness as authentic and accurate; and that such records would show that in garment plants in Kansas City, Missouri, having contractual relations with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors (whether known as head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors or by some other designations) are treated as eligible for membership, and are accepted as; and in fact are, active members in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; that this is true at the present time and has been true at all times during the years of 1937, 1938, 1939 and subsequent years, [fol. 68] while said plants have had such contractual relations; that the eligibility and acceptance of such head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors (whether known as head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors or by some other designations) as members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is in no wise exceptional or unique, but is conventional in the ladies' garment industry and in the operation of unions in that industry, and is in accordance with the well recognized usages and customs which prevail now, and which in the years 1937, 1938, 1939 and subsequent years have at all times prevailed, in the ladies' garment manufacturing industry and in the operation and administration of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, not only in Kansas City, Missouri and its trade territory but nationally.

Date 9/8/42 .. Witness .....

(Offer of Proof by Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, relating to Witness Erwin Feldman.)

Now comes respondent Donnelly Garment Company and offers to prove by witness Erwin Feldman the following facts:

That he is now and for many years past has been engaged in the active practice of the law with his office at 1350 Broadway in New York, N. Y.; that he is now and has been during most of said time engaged in legal representation of ladies' garment manufacturing companies, many of which have been and are now in contractual relations with International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; that he as counsel for manufacturers has frequently negotiated contracts with such union; that in addition to the foregoing he is now and for some years past has been the managing director of an association composed of ladies' garment manufacturers engaged in the same character of manufacture as respondent; that as a result of all the foregoing he is intimately familiar with the usages, customs and practices, with respect to the eligibility or ineligibility of employees of such manufacturers for membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which prevail now and which have prevailed in the years 1937, 1938, 1939 and subsequent years.

[fol. 71] That in plants of ladies' garment manufacturers generally throughout the nation, having contractual relations with the International Ladies' Garment Workers'

Union, head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors (whether known as head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors or by some other designations) are commonly and conventionally treated as eligible for membership, and are accepted as and in fact are active members, in such union; that this is true at the present time and has been true at all times during the years above referred to in plants having contractual relations with such union; that this usage, custom and practice is in no wise exceptional or unique or limited to any particular trade territory, but is usual, general and conventional. That this is true now and has been true at all times in the years above referred to.

In view of the Trial Examiner's ruling in the former hearing admitting (over Respondent's objections) extensive testimony from the old NRA hearing (upon which testimony the Trial Examiner and Board based many of its findings) and in view of the Trial Examiner's ruling in the present hearing (Record pp. 4314-4316) refusing to permit employees to testify concerning matters which occurred in connection with said old NRA hearing, the Respondent offers to prove by each of the employees called in this hearing and by each of the employees of the Respondent enumerated in Intervener's Exhibit No. 20 (rejected), which exhibit appears in the record herein at pages 6058-6094, that they respectively heard of the charges of the ILGWU in connection with the old NRA hearing, to the effect that the Donnelly plant was a "sweatshop", and that working conditions therein were bad and that Donnelly employees who joined the ILGWU were discriminated against; that none of those charges were true; that the Donnelly plant was in [fol. 74] no sense a "sweatshop"; that on the contrary, working conditions therein were healthful and pleasant for the employees; that they respectively never heard of any discrimination or threatened discrimination by the Donnelly Garment Company, or any of its supervisory employees, or by any instructors or thread girls, against any employee of the Donnelly Garment Company because of affiliation with the ILGWU; that the attitude of Respondent's executives and supervisory employees at all times within their knowledge has been that the employees were free to belong or not to belong to any union as they might desire, and that their employment status would not be affected thereby; that said employees were not coerced, intimidated or influenced in any way by any of the acts or statements of Respondent's executives, supervisory employees, or by the instructors or thread girls, as charged by the ILGWU in the old NRA hearing.

Agreement

AT a conference of representatives of the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers, hereinafter referred to as the "Association," representatives of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, and representatives of the Chicago Joint Board of Locals 5, 18, 59, 81 and 100, I. L. G. W. U., hereinafter referred to as the "Union," the following agreement has been made:

1. Parties. The Association, for itself and on behalf of its members, agrees to perform all the provisions of this agreement, and the Union agrees for itself and on behalf of its members, now employed and that may hereafter be employed by the members of the Association, to perform all of the provisions hereof on its and their part to be performed, and for and on behalf of its members agrees that they will perform their work conscientiously and faithfully.

2. Union Shops. The Association obligates itself, for itself and its members, that its members will maintain Union shops for the following class of employes represented by said Union, in which the standards hereinafter provided for will be maintained, and that they will employ none but members in good standing of the operative employes as herein enumerated: Cutters, operators, pinkers, basters, pressers, drapers, finishers, examiners, cleaners, special machine operators and sample makers.

3. Head Cutters. Head cutters who are members of the Union may nevertheless exercise the duties in their directory capacities over other cutters without becoming subject to censure or discipline by the Union, providing such head cutters do not violate the provisions of this contract. Head cutters who are not members of the Union shall not be allowed to cut, except original samples only.

4. Calls for New Workers. The Association agrees that their members will call the Union when in need of new workers. The Union agrees to furnish the employer with such workers, who are to the best of their knowledge competent to do the work required from amongst the number of unemployed workers.

5. New Help to Join Union. It is further agreed when there are no unemployed Union workers, the employer may engage workers who are not members of the Union, providing however, that such workers will become members of said Union at the end of the probation period if retained by the employer.

6. Trial Period — (New Employees). The employer shall have the right to discharge any employe at any time within a period of one week from the date of the beginning of employment. By mutual consent of the Association and the Union, the trial period may be extended for one additional week. This right of the employer shall be absolute and not subject to review. After such trial period the employer may discharge his employes for causes such as: incompetency, misconduct, insubordination in the performance of work, breach of reasonable rules jointly established and soldiering on the job.

7. Distribution of Work. Whenever there is insufficient work for all of the employes in the specific crafts, the available work shall be divided amongst them as equally as possible. It is also agreed that during the dull period of employment, the employer will not, as a matter of general practice, call in any employes to work unless the work to be performed shall yield at least a half day's pay to the employes so called in.

8. Shop Chairmen Funtions. In each shop there shall be a shop chairman or chairlady elected by workers of said shop, whose funtions shall be to help maintain harmony amongt employes, and to endeavor to adjust with the employer the complaints of the employes.

9. No Meetings During Working Hours. No shop meetings and no cessation of work shall take place during regular working hours, and all shop chairmen and chairladies shall perform all of the regular duties of their particular crafts the same as any other employe.

10. Visitation. Representatives of the Union shall have access to the employer at any time during working hours to adjust complaints between employer and employes. Access to the workrooms shall not be oftener than once monthly and then only if accompanied by the employer or his representative.

11. Working Time. A standard working week shall consist of thirty-five (35) hours to be performed in five (5) days of seven (7) hours per day, beginning on Monday and ending on Friday, to be worked between the hours of 8:30 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. with one hour interval for lunch.

12. Time and Pay Records. It is further agreed that each employer shall have a time clock and keep accurate time put in by the workers in the performance of work. However, it is agreed that no worker shall be required to be in the shop unless there is work for him to do. It is further agreed that the employer will send in monthly a correct duplicate of payroll records of the Union employes to the Impartial Tribunal which shall be accessible to the duly designated representative of the Union and to the designated representative of the Association.

13. Overtime. Since the parties were unable to reach an agreement as to the question of overtime, and since both parties desire to maintain harmony in the market and to avoid unnecessary disturbance in the production that would be of no benefit to either of the parties, it is, therefore, agreed between them that the matter of overtime shall be submitted immediately upon the execution hereof to an arbitrator selected by both parties and who shall render his decision within four weeks. The decision of the arbitrator when rendered shall be binding upon the parties and become a part of this contract for the life therof. Pending such decision, the Union agrees to permit the workers to work one hour a day overtime in case of necessity.

14. Piece Work Employes. Piece work employes shall be compensated on a piece work basis. The fixing of the price per garment on which work is to be performed shall be determined at the rate to yield to the worker the earning of the following minimums:

Pressers	$ .95	per hour
Operators	.76	" "
1st and 2nd Finishers	.55¼	" "

15. Finishing — Piece or Week Work. A change in the system of work in the finishing crafts from week work to piece work or from piece work to week work shall only be made at the beginning of a season.

16. Twenty-five Per Cent Additional for Duplicate. All piece workers shall receive not less than twenty-five per cent (25%) above settled stock prices for duplicates, providing, special workers are selected or special attention is required to do the work.

17. Thirty-five Per Cent (35%) Additional for Samples. All pressers working piece work pressing samples shall receive not less than thirty-five per cent (35%) above the settled stock price; however, it is understood that the employer may select pressers to do the work from amongst those employed by him.

COMPENSATION AND WAGES FOR WEEK WORKERS

18. Sample Makers. Sample Makers shall be paid on the week work basis and shall receive a wage of not less than Twenty-five Dollars and Fifty Cents ($25.50) for full time per week.

19. Drapers. Drapers shall be paid on a week work basis and shall receive a wage of not less than Twenty-three Dollars ($23.00) for full time per week; excepting in such shops where piece work system is practiced at the time of the signing of this agreement such piece work system may continue, providing however, that such workers earn not less than the minimum wage scale.

20. Examiners. Examiners shall be paid on the week work basis and shall receive a wage of not less than Eighteen Dollars ($18.00) for full time per week.

21. Special Machine Operators. Special Machine operators shall work by the week and receive a minimum of Eighteen Dollars $18.00) for full time per week.

22. Basters. Basters shall be paid on the week work basis and shall receive a wage of not less than Fifteen Dollars ($15.00) for full time per week. Basters are only those employed exclusively in the work of performing the basting operation, meaning that the needle work done is of a temporary character; the baster is not to do finishing work.

23. Cleaners and Pinkers. Cleaners and pinkers shall be paid on the week work basis and shall receive a wage of not less than Fourteen Dollars and Fifty Cents ($14.50) for full time per week.

24. Sorters. Sorters who are members of the Union shall be entitled to the benefits of this agreement and shall be paid not less than Fourteen Dollars ($14.00) minimum.

25. Cutters. It is further agreed that all cutters now employed shall receive an increase of Two Dollars ($2.00) per week, provided the pay of such cutters was not increased in the past sixty days. It is further agreed that the minimum scale of cutters shall be Forty Dollars ($40.00) for a full week's time and the minimum scale of cutters who also do grading shall be Forty-one Dollars ($41.00) for a full week's time. In the event cutters complain that the powder used in the process of performing their work is injurious to their health, and upon test of a chemist, such powder should be found injurious to the health of the workers, that the powder will be eliminated.

26. Employment of Cutters. With the genuine desire on the part of the Association and the Union to employ non-employed cutters, it is agreed that upon the execution of this agreement a joint committee shall investigate the shops with the view in mind to place, if possible, additional cutters to work.

27. Minimum Number of Cutters. A shop operating with more than six machines shall employ at least one cutter. A shop operating with more than eighteen (18) machine operators shall employ not less than two (2) cutters.

28. Apprentice Cutters. It is further agreed that no new apprentices shall be taken on as long as full fledged cutters are out of employment.

Union that piece workers in any shop are not earning the minimum scales as provided herein. The Impartial Tribunal may consider and determine the complaint of the Association that, either the piece rates in any non-member shop are too low, or that the minimums in this contract provided for are not earned by workers in such non-member shop. No reorganization shall take place unless fifteen day's notice of the intention to reorganize shall be given to the Union by the Association. Should such reorganization necessitate the discharge of any workers, the workers who are to lose their position by reason thereof shall be selected, either by lot or any other method agreed upon by the Association and the Union; however, should the Union and the Association disagree on the good faith of the reorganization or on the method of selecting the workers, the matter should be referred to the Impartial Tribunal without limitation as to the method of selection.

[fol. 79] Exhibit B.

Memorandum Contract entered into between the Associated Garment Industries and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union covering the Dress Industry in the Saint Louis Market.

Preamble

The Union and the Association have heretofore maintained contractual relations over a period of years. In that time nothing of consequence has occurred to mar the relationship. During the term of contract which has just expired it has not been necessary to refer a single dispute to arbitration. Thus have industrial peace been brought about and the tools of primative adjustment been laid aside.

The Union and the Association, while proud of this progress, do not regard it as the ultimate objective of their relationship. The partnership relation between industry and the worker is not altogether a fiction. Through the introduction of efficiency and the elimination of ancient methods and wasteful processes it is quite possible to increase the income of the worker and expand the influence of the industry and the market simultaneously.

Under this document, then, our objective shall be the production of the finest products in the most efficient manner with the highest possible reward to the worker. To this end, by our signature hereto, we mutually pledge our co-operation and hereby covenant and agree this the eighth day of December, 1941, as follows:

I.

Definitions

(A) Association—shall mean the Associated Garment Industries of St. Louis, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri.

(B) Union—shall mean the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated voluntary association of workers with headquarters in New York City and shall embrace the St. Louis Joint Board thereof, the affiliated Locals in the St. Louis area, the several officers and members thereof individually and as a group.

(C) Workers — shall mean those members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union in good standing, engaged in productive work in the several shops who are members of the Association.

[fol. 80] (D) Coverage—The contract shall cover every shop of every member in good standing with the Association eligible to manufacture the merchandise herein covered which shall be ladies and misses dresses.

(E) "Low End"—shall mean dresses sold at wholesale for less than $5.75 each. Special arrangements shall be maintained for the production of summer wear and sportswear as heretofore and as modified shall continue as an exception to the term hereof.

(F) Top Skilled Cutters—shall mean those cutters who shall have been certified by a special board of three (3) members of the Union and three (3) members of the Association as such. Said Board shall be a permanent Board and shall prescribe a series of tests which shall demonstrate the skill of the applicant for classification. Only such cutters as shall have been examined and certified by such board shall be eligible for this classification. All cutters who are at the execution hereof employed in the capacity of top skilled cutters and receive the wage scale therefore, are hereby classified and certified as such without test. A majority of the board shall be sufficient and necessary to classify, a copy of their certification shall be filed with the cutter, and Union and the Association.

(G) Inside Shop—shall mean the member of the Association who shall contract work out to a contractor on a cut make and trim basis.

(H) Outside Shop—shall mean a contractor who shall receive work and contract as provided in (G).

II.

Distribution of Work

There shall be an equitable distribution of work among all the workers of each department of a particular shop.

Work shall be apportioned and distributed in the most economical and efficient manner. Preparatory operations may also be employed but when so employed shall be equalized so far as possible with the regular workers in the department.

Both parties realize the necessity of improving production methods and machinery to the end of increasing production in the plant and resulting in reduction of overhead expenses and increased earnings to the workers. To establish a procedure resulting in such accomplishments, both parties agree as follows:

The Association agrees that its members will institute a [fol. 81] system whereby certain complicated parts of a garment may be produced separately. The dress and the separate parts of the dress will be produced by the operators employed by the company.

Workers will not be called in for less than one half days' work and if so called shall be compensated therefor at the regular minimum rate for their craft as herein prescribed. Workers on piece work shall also be paid at the regular minimum rate herein prescribed for their crafts for all time in excess of twenty minutes at any one time per day spent in the factory waiting for work.

Such time shall be certified to by a suitable person designated by the management at the time of such waiting period and shall be filed with the person in charge of time or payroll at the end of the day in which the waiting period occurred.

III.

Pay Day

Each employer shall establish a regular weekly payday and wages shall be paid by check or other agreeable medium on that day.

IV.

Price Committee

(A) There shall be a committee of the workers in each shop selected by the workers in the shop to negotiate and make prices on new garments and to act as the representative of the workers for collective bargaining. In case of a disagreement on the prices the matter shall be taken up between the Union and the Association and a settlement reached, if possible, within twenty-four (24) hours after submission. The price set shall be fair and equitable and shall be based on the productive ability of the average worker.

(B) A system of timing garments instead of bargaining prices may be established in the shop. The timers are to be selected jointly by the price committee of the shop and the management.

(C) The first three (3) garments of a style should be timed.

(D) Each employer is to designate a specific day of the week to settle prices. No such settlement shall be prolonged more than one (1) week unless the time is extended by mutual consent. No settling of prices shall be done during [fol. 82] the regular hours of business.

(E) In the event an agreement cannot be reached between the Shop Committee and the management, a representative of the Union and the Association shall be called in to assist in the adjustment.

(F) In the event these parties cannot agree, the matter shall be referred to a committee of four (4) to meet and decide within three (3) days, two (2) to represent the Union and two (2) the Association. Meantime, the mangement shall pay the workers on a substantial rate and the prices finally agreed upon shall be retroactive.

(G) Prices agreed upon in any of the above instances shall be reduced to writing and signed by the parties making the agreement or adjustment.

V.

The Union, the Association, and the Joint Labor Board

The Association agrees that all workers employed in the shop of its members must be members of the Union in good standing, and must continue their good standing membership in the Union during the life of the contract. New workers and apprentices engaged by a member of the Association shall, after a trial period of four (4) weeks become members of the Union. During the probationary period such workers shall secure a working permit from the Union, which permit the Union agrees to issue.

Since the continued growth of the St. Louis area as a garment market presents problems which are the parties mutual responsibility and which support the underlying wages and hour structure of this contract, the Union agrees that none of its members shall directly or indirectly work for any firm member not in good standing with the Association. Any firm who shall hereafter become a member of the Association shall remain a member of the Association in good standing for the life of this contract.

The Union and the Association shall designate and maintain a Joint Labor Board to be composed of three (3) members of the Union and three (3) members of the Association who shall in turn select a chairman and a secretary. The function of the board shall be to supervise the enforcement of this contract, to mediate disputes arising hereunder as elsewhere provided and to perform such other duties as are herein imposed upon it. It shall meet at such time and place as it shall decide unless otherwise required by the provisions hereof.

[fol. 83] The Association agrees not to discriminate against any worker for his or her legitimate activity on behalf of the Union. No such activity shall be carried on during the hours of business.

VII.

Discharge

No worker shall be discriminated against or discharged unjustly. It is not the meaning of this section to limit the management's right to discharge for just cause.

VIII.

(B) The present arrangements for subnormal producers as established shall continue.

(C) The pay for duplicates shall be based upon the average hourly earnings for the individual worker making the duplicates. The minimum wages for sample makers shall be $23.50 per week.

(D) Being unable to agree on wage increases requested by the Union, the parties hereby mutually agree that immediately upon the execution hereof they will submit that matter to the Board of Arbitration, composed of Tyrrell Williams, George A. Rozier, and ..... and agree that the increases, if any, shall be determined by the Board of Arbitration not later than the 15th day of December, 1941 and shall be effective retroactive to December 8, 1941.

[fol. 84]

IX.

Scale Revision

It is the intention of the parties hereto to maintain the above wage scale. At the end of each year, however, the right is reserved to either party to submit to the Board of Arbitration evidence that there has been some material and substantial change in the economic conditions of the market as to warrant an adjustment. The Board of Arbitration in determining the issue shall be guided by the general economic conditions of this market, the economic conditions of the industry and the wage scales in the other markets, the prevailing cost of living, the average skill of the workers with reference to the standard skill of the industry and competitive conditions.

X.

Shop Committee

The workers in each shop of the Association shall be represented by a shop committee consisting of not less than three (3) nor more than five (5). The chairman of this committee shall be the shop chairman.

All such negotiations between the employer and the shop committee shall be after working hours.

Either of the parties, the Union or the Association shall have a right to refer any unsettled dispute to the Board of Arbitration designated in this agreement.

XI.

Help.

(A) The Union shall maintain a labor bureau containing the names and addresses and skill and craft of each unemployed worker. When a manufacturer shall be in need of additional help, he shall notify said bureau so that it may direct these people to be opening. The power to select employees shall remain with the management. The manufacturer shall judge all applicants on their ability and if help is needed at once, in the order of their appearance. Preference shall be given to applicants with Union cards.

[fol. 85] (B) The Union agrees that it and its individual members shall cooperate to the fullest extent with the management in the training of new and unskilled workers. Conduct tending to discourage the engagement or training of such new or unskilled workers when such workers are necessary is prohibited.

(C) No shop is to employ semi-skilled cutters unless a full fledged cutter is first employed and every shop where no cutter is employed and there is reasonable ground for belief that one should be employed, the matter shall be taken up between the Union and the Association, and if no agreement is reached, the matter shall be referred to arbitration for final disposition, nor shall any employer or designer displace any cutter.

(D) No work shall be given out to workers to be made in the home.

XII.

Hours

(A) The hours of work under this contract shall be limited to thirty-five (35) hours per week, divided into five (5) working days. No work shall be done on Saturday or Sunday. No one shall be required to work on legal holidays.

(B) The members of the Association shall be given the privilege to make up the loss of time for legal holidays either on Saturday or during week days by making arrangements with a joint committee of the Association and the Union preceding the holidays. Such time shall be considered regular time.

(C) Overtime: There shall be a joint committee on overtime composed of two (2) representatives of each, the Union and the Association. When a member of the Association shall be in need of overtime, he shall apply to the Association, which shall refer the matter to the said joint committee. Upon approval by the said joint committee, the Association may grant the overtime requested.

XIII.

Industrial Peace

(A) This agreement provides for an orderly adjustment of differences and it is specifically stipulated by the parties hereto that there shall not be recognized any provocation for direct action. Strikes, stoppages and lock-[fol. 86] outs are therefore prohibited. The Union undertakes the responsibility to see that this section is not violated and shall a stoppage occur, the Union will immediately order the workers to return to work.

(B) Since this agreement provides for an orderly adjustment and lockouts are prohibited, the Association undertakes the responsibility to see that this section is not violated and should a lockout occur, the Association will immediately order its members to return the workers to work.

(C) Persons violating this section shall be barred from the right of appealing to the protection of the balance of the contract, in the discretion of the Board of Arbitration. The Board of Arbitration is hereby authorized to, where in its judgment the matter warrants, inflict penalties on any who violate the two preceding sections in accordance with the gravity of the case. In cases of violation of said sections, the Board shall exercise injunctive relief upon application and prior to hearing on the merits of the dispute.

XIV.

Board of Arbitration

By unanimous agreement of parties to this agreement aforementioned, three (3) disinterested public-spirited citizens of known integrity and ability, shall upon their selection (within two (2) weeks after the signing of this agreement), and subscribing their hands hereto, become the Board of Arbitration under this contract.

(A) Theirs shall be the responsibility to:—

(1) Interpret the provisions of this contract.

(2) Enforce the provisions of this contract where amicable settlement as herein provided has failed.

(3) Enjoin the violation where such violation is about to be entered into, or where it has begun.

(4) Provide for common well being, promote harmony and insure industrial peace.

(5) Impose damages and penalties where damages are shown to actually exist or where the aggravation of the offense makes such award advisable.

(6) Revise scales as provided in Article IX.

(B) In the event of the death, resignation, refusal to serve or other incapacity of any member of this board, his position may be or may not be filled as the parties hereto see fit. If it is filled, it shall be done by the procedure prescribed for selection in the first instance.

[fol. 87] (C) Their tenure of office shall be for the life of this agreement.

(D) The Board may function through the office of one member above, but either the complainant or respondent shall have the right to be heard by the full board if he shall request it prior to the hearing of the first witness in the matter.

(E) The jurisdiction of the Board shall cover all the subject matter of this contract, but the attempts at adjustment between the Association and the Union, and its failure, and the filing of a written complaint shall be conditions precedent to the invoking of the jurisdiction of the Board and compliance with these conditions must be affirmatively pleaded in the complaint; except where strikes, stoppages or lockouts are involved when this Board's jurisdiction shall be complete at once. The Board shall also have jurisdiction in the first instance in adjusting wage scales as provided in Article VIII, Section D.

(F) Replies to complaints need not be in writing or may be a simple general denial. But, if any defense, justification, or new matter is to be presented at the hearing, the nature of the defense, justification, or new matter must be reduced to writing and submitted to the complainant sufficiently in advance of the hearing so as to avoid surprise and enable them to prepare themselves.

(G) Where the complaints appear vague or trifling, the Board may upon request, or of its own motion, direct that it be made more specific before proceeding.

(H) All evidence submitted at the hearing must be kept within the definite points raised by the written complaint and reply. No outside matter may be pleaded unless agreed to by all parties including the Board.

(I) Costs to be borne equally by the parties.

(J) Only the parties to this agreement or their representatives shall be recognized by the Board of Arbitration for the purposes of submitting disputes or making complaints hereunder. In the event of disagreement between the Union and the Association over any of the terms of this contract and after compliance with the conditions precedent heretofore, either the Union or the Association shall have the right to submit the matter to the Board of Arbitration for adjudication.

[fol. 88]

XV.

Contractors

(A) No work shall be given to a contractor who is not bound by the terms of or is not observing the conditions of this contract.

(B) During the life of this contract no firm which is a member of the Association shall move or produce garments beyond the ten cent car fare zone of the City of St. Louis, Missouri.

(C) Each member of the Association shall register with the Joint Labor Board each contractor to whom he contemplates giving work. Such registration shall take place at the beginning of each season. No work shall be given by such member to any other contractor than those so registered unless and until both the employees of the member factory and those of the registered contractors are fully employed and application for such additional registration shall have been made to and approved by the said Joint Labor Board, by the member.

(D) In order to eliminate competition in setting piece rates in contracting shops, the Joint Labor Board is hereby empowered to set up an arrangement mutually satisfactory to the workers and management of the inside and contracting shop.

XVI.

Illegal Overtime

To enforce the provision hereof with particular reference to hours, the Labor Board composed of representatives of both the Union and the Association shall when necessary designate a committee of two (2) representing each party hereto, who shall inspect conditions of illegal overtime in the factories and report their findings from time to time, and as directed by and to the said Labor Board.

XVII.

Security for Compliance

The Union agrees to make no individual contract with any firm eligible to be covered by the terms of this contract i.e., manufacturers of silk and wool dresses, in the St. Louis trade territory, without first requiring and having a cash indemnity bond or security first of $500.00 posted in escrow to insure observance of the terms of this agreement to the end of eliminating a disadvantage to the firms who subscribe hereto, and agrees further to make no individual contract more favorable in any particular or generally than the terms hereof.

[fol. 89]

XVIII.

Finishers

An incentive system may be established in the finishing department of each shop whereby all workers in the finishing department may be given the opportunity to earn a wage based on their productive ability, but no skilled finisher of normal speed and ability shall be paid less than the minimum wage scale set forth for finishers.

XIX.

This Contract shall be in force from the date of the execution thereof, and shall remain operative and binding upon the parties thereto until November 30, 1945. This contract may be amended from time to time by additions agreed on by all parties concerned which shall be in the best interest of the St. Louis industry. This contract shall be considered ratified and continued in full force and effect for an additional year after the expiration date unless either party to it, being dissatisfied with it, shall so notify the other parties in writing thirty (30) days prior to its expiration date.

In Witness Whereof, the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their respective representatives and their seals to be affixed this 8th day of December, 1941.

Because of the rulings of the trial examiner refusing to permit witnesses to testify and excluding all evidence with reference to matters occurring subsequent to July 15, 1939, and striking from the record testimony and evidence with respect to matters occurring after that date, the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, offers to produce and examine under oath as witnesses herein the following named persons, viz.:

Mina Smith	Dale Berryhill
Walter Higgins	Johana Hunter
Mary McClelland	Mary Sneden
Freeland Rife	Earl Willoughby
Edith Williams	Fred Ellis
Jack McConaughey	Paul Oliver
Marjorie Green	Avis Mowry
Rose Todd	Gertrude Gassert
Bertha Estes	Leslie Ward
Nona Lowder	Al Staab
Lorraine Smith	Della Harrison
Edith Koll	Lillian Lubben
Rada Walker	Mildred Smar

and offers to prove that if such witnesses were sworn and examined they would testify in substance as follows:

That continuously from its organization on April 27, 1937, to July 15, 1939, and from July 15, 1939, down to the present date, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, inter-[fol. 4] vener herein, has been continuously maintained and administered by its members and the officers thereof duly elected by its members as a bona fide labor union and as the bargaining agent of all of the employees of Donnelly Garment Company and Donnelly Garment Sales Company eligible to membership in said union; that during said period all of the eligible employees of Donnelly Garment Company have continuously belonged to said union and that their membership therein has been voluntary and that it represents their free-will choice of a bargaining agent; that Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has held regular and frequent meetings, that attendance at such meetings was voluntary and without penalty for non-attendance, and that attendance has been uniformly large, and that participation in the affairs of the union conducted at such meetings has been freely engaged in by all of its members.

Intervener offers to prove that at stated periods in accordance with the duly adopted by-laws of said intervener union a board of committee chairmen or executive committee of said union has been elected from the membership by vote of the entire membership and that such committees have been as follows:

1939

Rose Todd
Mina Smith

Jack McConaughey
Walter Higgins

Intervener offers to prove that in addition to the general union meetings the board of committee chairmen has held regular and frequent meetings for the purpose of conducting the business affairs of the union and that throughout the entire period the respective committees have continuously dealt with Donnelly Garment Company in bona fide negotiations and at arm's length with respect to wages, hours and working conditions and have genuinely represented the interests of the employees of Donnelly Garment Company as members of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in their dealings with Donnelly Garment Company; that each of said committees during its period of incumbency has handled and presented to the company grievances and complaints of individual members of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with respect to rates of pay, hours and working conditions and on behalf of such employees has secured adjustments of such disputes and grievances.

Intervener offers to prove that during such period it has negotiated for the renewal, extension, modification and continuation of its working agreement and bargaining contract with Donnelly Garment Company and has successfully [fol. 93] kept such contracts in full force and effect; that in the latter part of 1941 or early part of 1942 the duly elected committee of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union negotiated with the company with respect to a general increase of wages of the employees and after genuine bona fide negotiations secured for all of its members, except a few who had shortly theretofore received substantial increases, increases in pay of not less than seven and one-half per cent; that in May, 1942, the company by its interpretation of the wage contract between it and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union took the position that since May 30th and July 4th fell on Saturday that the company was not obliged to give such holidays to the employees with full pay and that the interpretation of such contract by Donnelly Garment Workers' Union required that the employees be given holidays on such dates and that full pay be given therefor even though such dates came on Saturday; that after genuine negotiations over such dispute the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union prevailed with the result that several thousands of dollars were paid to the employees by the company despite the contrary view of the company.

Intervener offers to prove that during said period Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has been completely self-supporting, and has collected from its members such dues as were required for its union purposes and that the check-off method of collecting dues had the support and authorization of every member of said union and that the union has fully accounted for all of such sums collected and that it has received no financial or other support from the respondent.

Intervener offers to prove that during all of said period the membership of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has consisted only of employees below the rank of those having authority to hire, fire or discipline or to represent the management in any supervisory or confidential capacity; that in late 1941 when changes in company policies of management made it questionable whether certain spe-[fol. 94] cific employees and classes of employees because of increased responsibilities given to such employees could thereafter properly belong to Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, all such employees were requested by Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to resign therefrom and that such employees did resign and have had no further connection with Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Intervener offers to prove that during the period from July 15, 1939 to date, all members of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have maintained and administered their union in good faith and of their own free will and as their representative and bargaining agent, and that during such period they have not been dominated, coerced or intimidated by respondent or anyone authorized to represent or representing respondent into belonging to or maintaining Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or into staying out of any other labor organization, and that they know of no instances of coercion, domination or intimidation on the part of the respondent or anyone acting or speaking for the respondent, and that in addition to those persons specifically named above by which said matters are offered to be proved the intervener offers to call all of its members as witnesses and to prove by them the matters set out in this paragraph.

Whereas, Mrs. James A. Reed (Nell Quinlan Reed) was called to Michigan on September 3, 1942, on account of the serious illness of David Quinlan Reed, her son, and for that reason is unable to return to Kansas City at this time:

It is hereby stipulated that she would, if she were available, testify on redirect examination as follows, and that same may be received and considered as her testimony, to-wit:

That in her answers made in response to Mr. Langsdale's cross-examination with reference to Board's Exhibit 31-A, beginning near the bottom of page 3860 and on pages 3861 to 3865 inclusive of the transcript, she was referring to and had in mind the date June 1, 1935, instead of June 1, 1937, and was under the impression that said exhibit bore the date of June 1, 1935, as will appear from her answers to questions appearing on pages 3886 and 3887 of the transcript.

That she would further testify that after June, 1935, when Mr. Baty was given charge of the factory, and up to July 15, 1939, that Lena Tyhurst was not assistant factory [fol. 96] manager, that Marvin Price was not the head mechanic, that Ortense Root was not the sample department head, that Anna Price was not the shipping clerk head, and that none of said persons had any supervisory authority during said period; that neither she nor the Company ever authorized or gave them those titles and that they did not hold such positions on June 1, 1937, or between June, 1935 and July 15, 1939.

Statement of the Case.

Upon an amended charge duly filed by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, herein called the I. L. G. W. U., the National Labor Relations Board, herein called the Board, by its Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region (Kansas City, Missouri), issued its complaint dated April 27, 1939, against Donnelly Garment Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, herein called the respondent, alleging that the respondent had engaged in and was engaging in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the National Labor Relations Act, 49 Stat. 449, herein called the Act. A copy of the complaint and amended charge, accompanied by notice of hearing, were duly served upon the respondent, the I. L. G. W. U. and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, herein called the D. G. W. U., party to the contract.

[fol. 156] On May 2, 1939, the D. G. W. U. filed its petition to intervene, which was granted insofar as its interest might appear, by order of the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region.

Pursuant to notice, a hearing was held on June 5 to July 15, 1939, inclusive at Kansas City, Missouri, before the undersigned, the Trial Examiner duly designated by the Board. The Board, the respondent, the I. L. G. W. U. and the D. G. W. U. were represented by counsel and participated in the hearing. Full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues was afforded all parties.

With respect to the unfair labor practices, the complaint as amended, without objection, at the close of the Board's case alleged in substance: that the respondent (1) on or about April 27, 1939, and thereafter dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of a labor organization among its employees known as Donnelly Garment Workers Union and has given financial and other support to said organization, inter alia, (a) by encouraging and permitting its supervisory and other employees to promote the organization of and membership in the D. G. W. U. on the respondent's time, property, and at its expense; (b) by forming on or about February 12, 1935, through its officers and agents, the Donnelly Loyalty League, herein called the League, by continuing to dominate the League until on or about April 27, 1937, for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of the employees by the I. L. G. W. U.; (c) by creating on or about April 27, 1937, through its officers and agents, the D. G. W. U. as a continuation of the League; (d) by entering into a closed-shop agreement for the purpose of assisting the D. G. W. U. and of depriving the employees of the rights guaranteed them under the Act; (2) discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U. by discharging Sylvia Hull and May Fike in April 1937 because they had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U.; and (3) by various acts[1] has coerced and restrained the employees from becoming members or continuing membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and has encouraged and compelled membership in the D. G. W. U. The amended complaint further alleged that the respondent by entering into a closed-shop contract with the D. G. W. U. has violated Section 8 (3) and 8 (1) of the Act and that the closed-shop contract between the respondent and the D. G. W. U. is void and of no effect.

At the opening of the hearing the respondent and the D. G. W. U. filed motions to make the charge and the complaint more definite and certain. The undersigned granted the motions in part and requested counsel for the Board to make the complaint more definite and certain in specified respects. Counsel for the Board, in compliance with this request, thereafter moved to strike certain por- [fol. 157] tions of the complaint and amend it, which motion was granted. At the close of the presentation of evidence by the Board in support of the complaint, the complaint was without objection again amended on motion of counsel for the Board. Service of the amended complaint was acknowledged by the parties. The undersigned denied various other motions by the respondent and the D. G. W. U. to make the complaint more definite and certain, and the respondent's contention that portions of the amended complaint was so vague, indefinite, and uncertain that they did not sufficiently appraise the respondent of the acts charged was overruled by the undersigned.

[1]The principal acts enumerated in the amended complaint are: (a) by discharging Fern Sigler in April 1937, (b) by statements of the respondent's president and certain supervisory employees in March and April 1937, (c) by a public statement against the I.L.G.W.U. made by James A. Reed, (d) by permitting a loud speaker system in its cafeteria to be used as a medium of propaganda in favor of the D.G.W.U. and in opposition to the I.L.G.W.U., (e) by keeping members and meetings of the I.L.G.W.U. under surveillance, (f) by circulating and inducing the employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to the respondent, (g) by permitting certain supervisory and confidential employees to become members and active in the affairs of the D.G.W.U., (h) by discriminating in the allotment of work and by refusing to recall to work certain named employees who were allegedly members of the I.L.G.W.U., (i) by instigating and permitting the employees to engage in a demonstration on April 23, 1937, against certain members of the I.L.G.W.U., and (j) by granting a contract to the D.G.W.U. making membership therein a condition of employment.

During the course of the hearing, the respondent and the D. G. W. U. made several motions to dismiss the amended complaint and specific portions thereof. Decision on the motions having been reserved the motions for dismissal of the amended complaint in its entirety are hereby denied and the motions to dismiss certain paragraphs of the amended complaint, relating to certain of the acts of interference, restraint, and coercion[2] are hereby granted. The motions in all other respects are denied.

The respondent's answer was divided into four parts: In Part A the respondent contended that upon 10 stated ground[3] the Board is without jurisdiction to maintain the proceedings. In Part B, the respondent avers that the [fol. 158] complaint must be dismissed "for the reason that the Board, its agents, and representatives have exceeded their authority and have demonstrated their bias and prejudice against the respondent, and collusion with the International Union (I. L. G. W. U.) by filing of the

[2]The portions of the amended complaint dismissed were sub-paragraph d,g,g(1),i,k,n, and p of paragraph 11 relating to: (1) public statements of James A. Reed; (2) statements of Alex Green and Ella Mae Hyde, supervisory officials of the respondent, concerning the I.L.G.W.U.; (3) use of a loud speaker system in the respondent's cafeteria to influence its employees regarding their union affiliations; (4) surveillance; (5) discrimination in the allotment of work to employees who were members of the I.L.G.W.U.; and (6) the refusal of the respondent to recall or assign work to certain named employees who were members of the I.L.G.W.U.

[3]The stated grounds were: (1) the Board is without jurisdiction to issue a complaint "at the request of an organization which does not represent a single employee in the respondent's plant: . . and [which] has been found by the United States Federal Court to be engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to force the respondent to compel its employees to join said organization against their wills"; (2) the Board has no authority to issue a complaint "for the purpose of attempting to abrogate and nullify contracts between the respondent and the exclusive representative of 100 percent of its employees, when said contracts are entirely satisfactory to both parties thereto and have been determined by a United States Federal Court to contain higher wages and more favorable working conditions, than are contained in any contracts entered into between the International Union (I.L.G.W.U.) and other garment manufacturers in this part of the country"; (3) this proceeding deprives the respondent, without a judicial hearing, of its right freely to contract as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; (4) if this proceeding were sustained, valid contracts between the respondent and the chosen representatives of its employees would be abrogated without a judicial hearing, due process of law, and a trial by jury in violation of the Fifth and Seventh amendments of the Constitution; (5) this proceeding deprives the respondent of its property without due process of law and of its right to trial by jury by providing for the awarding of unearned wages to former employees and for their reinstatement; (6) the amended charge of the I.L.G.W.U. is vague, indefinite, and does not state facts sufficient to support a formal complaint; (7) the Board, complaint herein and by the maintenance of this proceeding in the face of [certain enumerated] facts of which the Board and its representatives have actual knowledge."[4] Part C is a petition for investigation and certification of representatives of its employees. The answer in Part D admits certain allegations of the complaint concerning the corporate structure and the nature of the business of the respondent, but denies specifically every allegation that it has engaged in or is engaging in unfair labor practices.

[fol. 159] During the hearing, the respondent filed a motion requesting that the complaint be dismissed for the without authority, by the issuance of its complaint has prejudged as true the allegations in the amended charge of the I.L.G.W.U.; (8) the complaint is vague, indefinite, insufficient and alleges conclusions instead of facts, all in violation of due process of law; (9) the maintenance of this proceeding violates the Fifth Amendment in Article III, Section 1 and 2 of the Constitution of the United States by permitting the Board to act as investigator, complainant, prosecutor, triers of facts, and judge of the controversy and by denying the respondent a judicial review of the evidence in accordance with the rules of law and evidence; and (10) the Board has not conducted an election among the respondent's employees to determine their choice of representatives, which is a condition precedent to a proceeding based on charges of unfair labor practices.

[4]The answer of the respondent alleges as facts of which the Board has knowledge: (1) that the I.L.G.W.U. has engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy the respondent's business by publishing false and libelous reports about the respondent and the working conditions in its plant, by inaugurating and threatening to inaugurate secondary boycotts against the respondent's customers and merchandise, by threatening assaults on the respondent's employees similar to those perpetrated against employees of garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Missouri, St. Louis, Missouri, Dallas, Texas, and Memphis, Tennessee; (2) that the I.L.G.W.U., knowing that the employees had refused to be represented by the I.L.G.W.U. publicly announced a drive against the respondent and the employees, requested by letter containing false statements a conference with the respondent for the purpose of making a closed-shop contract, and began attacks of fraud and violence against three other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City, Missouri, at the same time announcing that similar acts of violence would be perpetrated against the respondent's employees; (3) the respondent, after receiving a request to enter into a collective bargaining agreement with the D.G.W.U., a voluntary organization of employees, sought to obtain a determination by the Board of the right of the D.G.W.U. to be exclusive bargaining agent of the employees but was advised by representatives of the Board that an application by an employer for certification of representatives could not be granted under the rules of the Board, and therefore, entered into a collective bargaining agreement with the D.G.W.U.; (4) that sometime after July 5, 1937, the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, three judges sitting, temporarily enjoined the I.L.G.W.U. from committing unlawful acts of fraud and violence against the respondent and the employees, which decision was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States and by that Court remanded to be heard before a single judge in the District Court; (5) that the Board's Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, (Earnest P. Dunbar), on August 25, 1938, notified the respondent by letter that reasons stated in Part A and B of its answer.[5] The I. L. G. W. U. moved to strike certain portions[6] of the respondent's answer.

charges of unfair labor practices have been filed against the respondent by the I.L.G.W.U. and requested a conference on the charges, and thereafter the respondent requested the Acting Regional Director for the facts alleged in the charges and for an opportunity to present evidence thereon, but this privilege was denied by the representatives of the Board who threatened to file a complaint and conduct a long hearing unless the respondent acceded to the demands of the I.L.G.W.U., and further asserted that if a hearing was held the Board would find against the respondent; (6) at on or about February 4, 1939, at the request of representatives of the Board, written proposals upon which settlement of the charges might be reached were submitted to each other by the respondent, the D.G.W.U. and I.L.G.W.U. and that the proposal of the I.L.G.W.U. included an offer to drop all boycott activities against the respondent "so long as the respondent does not recognize any plant union as the bargaining representatives of its employees", acceptance of which proposal by the respondent would have compelled it to violate the terms of the National Labor Relations Act; and (7) that the hearing on the remanded injunction suit was begun in the United States District Court on March 22, 1939, at the close of which a permanent injunction against the I.L.G.W.U. was granted, pursuant to respondent's petition, and that representatives of the Board were in constant attendance at the hearing and consulted frequently with representatives of the I.L.G.W.U. during examination of respondent's witnesses, thus demonstrating that the Board assisted and is assisting the I.L.G.W.U. in its conspiracy against the respondent and is maintaining the proceedings herein, in violation of any authority vested in the Board by the Act.

[5]Part B of the respondent's answer included the findings of fact and conclusions of law of the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri (Donnelly Garment Company et al. v. I.L.G.W.U., et al., D.G.W.U. Intervener's Case No. 2924) in an injunction suit brought by the respondent against the I.L.G.W.U. As a part of these findings of fact and conclusions of law, the District Court found that the respondent's employees acting unanimously had voluntarily formed the D.G.W.U. and at all times freely administered and maintained it. This finding of fact is not binding upon the Board and does not preclude an independent finding by the Board on this issue. Section 10 (a) of the Act provides:

> The Board is empowered . . . to prevent any person from engaging in any unfair labor practice (listed in Section 8) affecting commerce. This power shall be exclusive and shall not be affected by any other means of adjustment or prevention that has been or may be established by agreement, code, law, or otherwise. [emphasis added]

[fol. 160] The undersigned took these motions under advisement and requested the respondent to submit a written statement of the evidence it would offer, to prove the averments set forth in Part A and B of the answer, and any other parts of the answer referred to in the motion to strike. The respondent submitted no statement of evidence in support of Part A of its answer except as to the paragraph relating to wages and working conditions provided for in contracts entered into between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment manufacturers. In Part B of the answer the respondent submitted certain parts of the transcript of testimony taken in an N. L. R. B. hearing, in which it was also the respondent and the I. L. G. W. U. the charging Union and in the United States District Court injunction suit between the respondent and the I. L. G. W. U. The undersigned refused the proffered evidence, granted the motion of the I. L. G. W. U. to strike, denied the request of the respondent for dismissal of the complaint based on Part A of the answer, and refused to receive the respondent's petition for investigation and certification of representatives as set forth in Part C of its answer.[2]

manufacturers in the area; from Part B of the answer the allegations that the I.L.G.W.U. was engaging in an unlawful conspiracy against the respondent, that it had engaged in violence against employees of other garment manufacturers and had announced that similar acts would be perpetrated against employees of the respondent, that the respondent's contract provided for higher wages, more favorable working conditions than contracts obtained by the efforts of the I.L.G.W.U., the allegations referring to the findings and decrees of the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, the averment that the I.L.G.W.U. admitted that the respondent's employees did not desire to be represented by the I.L.G.W.U., the allegations regarding the assistance of the Board's representatives in the alleged conspiracy of the I.L.G.W.U. against the respondent; from Part D the averments that the I.L.G.W.U. sought closed-shop agreements even when it represented only a few or none of the employees of the company with whom it sought such agreements. The reasons stated as grounds for striking these portions of the answer are that they are immaterial to the issues before the Board, that the Board is not bound by the findings of other judicial tribunals, that the "clean hands" doctrine of equity does not apply to proceedings before the Board, that these portions of the answer constitute an attempt by the respondent to try before the Board the Federal District Court injunction suit between the respondent and the I.L.G.W.U., and that under the Act the Board is not empowered to take cognizance of alleged law violation, coercion, or intimidation on the part of the complaining union.

"The main and controlling issue in the case was whether the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union had been supported, dominated, or interfered with by the Company or whether

Prior to the commencement of the hearing, the D.G.W.U. filed a motion requesting that the Board conduct an election among the respondent's employees to determine whether they desired to be represented by the D. G. W. U. or by the I. L. G. W. U., and that the hearing be postponed until the outcome of such election had been announced. Thereafter, on May 17 and June 3, 1939, the D. G. W. U. filed a petition and amended petition, respectively for investigation and certification for representatives. At the hearing the undersigned denied the motion and rejected the petitions. The D. G. W. U. also filed an answer denying all the allegations relating to the unfair labor practices of the respondent, but admitting the existence of a closed-shop agreement between the respondent and the D. G. W. U.

[fol. 161] At the conclusion of the hearing the parties were afforded an opportunity to argue orally before the undersigned, and were requested to file memorandum briefs. Memorandum briefs were filed by the respondent, the I. L. G. W. U., and the D. G. W. U.[8]

On October 11, 1939, the undersigned filed an Intermediate Report, finding that the respondent had engaged in and was engaging in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3),[9] and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act. The undersigned further found that May Fike had not been discriminatorily discharged, and recommended inter alia that the respondent cease and desist from the unfair labor practices which it was found to have engaged in, withdraw all recognition that union was a bonafide independent labor organization formed and administered exclusively by the employees of the Company and completely free from employer influence, domination and support.

We are of the opinion that the Trial Examiner did not err in confining the issues to those which were tendered by the complaint filed by the Board. We are satisfied that the Board was not required to try the International for conspiracy or to try the charge that the Board had conspired or colluded with the International.

[8] By stipulation, dated July 22, 1939, the amended complaint was further amended to conform it to the proof.

[9] The undersigned found that the discharge of Sylvia Hull was discriminatory within the meaning of the Act but did not recommend reinstatement or back pay for reasons discussed in Section E, infra.

and completely disestablish the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of the employees for the purposes of collective bargaining, cease and desist from giving effect to its contract and check-off agreement with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and that the allegations of the complaint as to May Fike be dismissed.

On October 12, 1939, the case was transferred from the Regional Office of the Seventeenth Region to the Board in Washington, D. C. and continued before the Board pursuant to Article II, Section 32, of the National Labor Relations Board Rules and Regulations—Series 2.

On December 1, 1939, the respondent, the D. G. W. U., and the I. L. G. W. U. filed exceptions to the Intermediate Report. The same parties filed briefs in support of their exceptions to the Intermediate Report. On January 9, 1940, a hearing for the purpose of oral argument was conducted before the Board in Washington, D. C., at which the respondent, the D. G. W. U., and I. L. G. W. U. appeared by counsel, who participated in the argument.

On March 6, 1940, the Board after consideration of the exceptions to the Intermediate Report, and the briefs submitted in support of the exceptions, issued its decision, containing its finds of fact, conclusions of law, and order.[10] In brief, the Board found that the respondent had dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and had contributed support to it in violation of Section 8 (2) of the Act; had discharged May Fike and Sylvia Hull in violation of Section 8 (3) of the Act; and had by these and other Acts interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in violation of Section 8 (1) of the Act.

Thereafter the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, filed with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit a petition to review and set aside the Board's order, to which the Board filed an answer requesting the enforcement of its order. The D. G. W. U. filed an intervening petition requesting that the Board's order be set aside, and the I. L. G. W. U. intervened in defense of the order. The petitioners, Donnelly Garment Company, and D. G. W. U. challenged the validity of the Board's [fol. 162] order on two grounds: (1) lack of due process; and (2) lack of sufficient evidentiary basis for the Board's findings, conclusions, and order. The Circuit Court, on November 6, 1941, after consideration of briefs and arguments of counsel for the respective parties handed down its decision remanding the case to the Board for further proceedings.[11]

On April 21, 1942, the Board entered an order vacating and setting aside its Decision and Order dated March 6, 1940, reopening the record for a further hearing to take additional evidence in accordance with the Opinion and Decree of the Circuit Court, referring the proceeding to the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region for the purpose of conducting the further hearing, and authorizing and directing the Regional Director to issue notices of the further hearing. On June 6, 1942, the Regional Director issued his notice of further hearing to the parties, notifying them that on July 6, 1942, at Kansas City, Missouri, a further hearing would be conducted.

Pursuant to such notice, a hearing was held on July 6, 7, and 8, 1942, and on various days between August 3 and September 17, 1942, inclusive at Kansas City, Missouri, before the undersigned, the Trial Examiner duly designated by the Chief Trial Examiner. The Board, the respondent, the D. G. W. U., and the I. L. G. W. U. were represented by counsel and participated in the hearing. Full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues was afforded all of the parties.

On July 8, 1942, prior to the taking of any testimony in the further hearing, respondent filed with the undersigned

> We think that the least the Board can do in order to cure the defects in its procedure caused by the failure of the Trial Examiner to receive admissible evidence, is to vacate the order and the findings and conclusions upon which it is based; to accord to the petitioners [the respondent and D.G.W.U.] an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected by the Trial Examiner; and to receive and consider such evidence together with all other competent and material eviden in the record before making new findings and a new order.

its Affidavit of Prejudice for the purpose of obtaining the designation of another Trial Examiner. The D. G. W. U. concurred in the application. The undersigned referred the matter to the Board, and continued the hearing subject to 48 hours' notice to the parties. On July 17, 1942, the respondent filed with the Board an Application for a Continuance of the further hearing. On July 28, 1942, after consideration of the oral argument by the respondent, the I. L. G. W. U., and the D. G. W. U. before the Board, and related documents filed by the parties, the Board issued its order dated July 28, 1942, dismissing the Affidavit of Prejudice[12] and denying the Application for a Continuance.[13] On July 30, 1942, the undersigned notified the par- [fol. 163] ties that the hearing would reconvene on August 3, 1942, at Kansas City, Missouri.

[12]The Board in its order dismissing the Affidavit of Prejudice, stated:

Each of the particulars relied on in the Affidavit of Prejudice were brought by the respondent to the attention of the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Court decided that the Trial Examiner and the Board has been free of any bias or prejudice. (See Donnelly Garment Company v. N.L.R.B., 123 F.(2d) 215 (C.C.A. 8)

Having carefully examined the matters now adduced by the respondent, we can see no reasons for disagreeing with the findings of the Circuit Court of Appeals or for doubting that the evidence ordered by that Court, to be admitted will be fairly and judiciously received and considered. Indeed, to disqualify the Trial Examiner for his previous error would be equivalent to barring a trial judge who had been overruled on a question of evidence by an Appellate Court, from presiding over the further hearing; such is not the customary practice. See Berger v. United States, 225 U.S. 22, 31; Minnesota and Ontario Paper Co. v. Molyneaux, 70 F.(2d) 545, 547, (C.C.A. 8).

[13]The Board in its order denying the Application for Continuance stated:

Respondent's Application for Continuance asserts that the hearing should be postponed to a date not earlier than December 23, 1942, for the reason that it is engaged in war production and that the employees it expects to call will not be available as witnesses without serious interference with such production. The need for the application of the principles of the Act to industry is even greater in time of war than in peace-time, while the abandonment or postponement of the Act's guarantees might well create the tensions that have in the past led to industrial discontent, disturbance, and unrest, with consequent impairment of efficiency and production.

We believe that the Trial Examiner is in the best position to make provision regarding the availability of particular witnesses and we hereby instruct him that, in so doing, he give every consideration to the desirability of causing as little hindrance as possible to the respondent's production.

The undersigned during the course of the further hearing received no request from the respondent for a continuance, a change in the hours or place of the hearing to accommodate witnesses engaged in war production activities.

The undersigned accorded the respondent and the D.G.W.U. an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected at the prior hearing [14] and permitted Nell Quinlan Reed, the respond-[fol. 164] ent's president, who was, because of a serious illness, prevented from testifying at the hearing of 1939, to testify in the further hearing upon all the issues set forth in the pleadings.

On September 25, 1942, the Board vacated and set aside the Intermediate Report of the undersigned, heretofore issued under date of October 11, 1939, and ordered the undersigned to issue an Intermediate Report on the entire record.

Upon the record thus made and from his observation of the witnesses, the undersigned makes in addition to the foregoing, the following:

Findings of Fact.

I. The Business of the Respondent.

The respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, is a Missouri Corporation, having its office and factory in Kansas City, Missouri, where it is engaged in the business of designing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing ladies' garments under the trade name of "Nellie Don." More than 99 percent of the raw materials and supplies — consisting chiefly of cotton, wool acetate, rayon and linen — used at the factory are purchased and transported through the channels of interstate commerce from points outside the State of Missouri. Approximately 96 percent of the garments designed, manufactured, and sold are distributed through the channels of interstate commerce to points outside of the State of Missouri.

> The petitioners [respondent and D.G.W.U.] proffered the evidence of the employees of the Donnelly Company, some 1200 in number, to show how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the employer either in the formation or administration of the Union, to show what the President of the Company had said to them at the mass meeting in the spring of 1937, to show that their freedom to organize and to choose their own representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining had not been interfered with by their employer, and to show that their union, both in its formation and administration was exclusively controlled and supported by them. The Trial Examiner refused to receive this evidence. He permitted the petitioners to make formal offers of proof.

Officers of the respondent Company are: Nell Quinlan (Mrs. James A.) Reed, president and treasurer; Alex C. Green, vice-president; R. J. Ingraham, secretary. The principal departments of the respondent and the persons in charge of them are: Production, Lee Baty; Merchandising, Retail Store and Receiving, Elizabeth Reeves; Comptroller and Office Manager, J. B. Bachofer; and Employment Manager, Ella Mae Hyde. [15]

During the peak production period of the year, the respondent employs approximately 1200 persons.

The parties stipulated and agreed that the operations of the respondent have a close, intimate, and substantial relationship to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several States, and that the respondent is engaged in commerce within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act.

II. The Organizations Involved.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, [16] is a labor organization admitting to membership the factory employees of the respondent.

Donnelly Garment Workers Union is an unaffiliated labor organization. According to its by-laws, it admits to membership all employees of the respondent.

III. Unfair Labor Practices.

A. Respondent's Responsibility for the Activities of Various Employees.

In the incidents described in the following section, the respondent's responsibility for the activities of various [15] For further findings concerning the respondent's supervisory staff see III A, infra.

[16] At the time of the original hearing the I.L.G.W.U. was unaffiliated.

employees who figured prominently in the organization of the D.G.W.U. must be determined. The Board contends that the respondent is responsible for their activities in most instances because of their supervisory status. The respondent asserts that they cannot be classified as supervisors because no authority to hire, discharge or discipline is vested in them. In view of the role these employees played in the organization and the establishment of the D.G.W.U. it is necessary to assay in general the status and function of "instructors" and "thread girls," in terms of their relationship to the management and to examine in some detail this relationship with respect to a number of individual employees. The undersigned will therefore determine the respondent's responsibility for their activities before considering the alleged unfair labor practices.

1. Instructors and Thread Girls.

The respondent's factory is in part composed of sewing sections. In each of these sections there are approximately 40 operators, each of whom operates a sewing machine. Assigned to each of these sections is an instructor and an assistant called a thread girl or floor girl. Among the duties of the instructor and thread girl in each section is the distribution of materials and supplies with which the operators work. Instructors also distribute directions as to how the work is to be done and teach operators how to execute each step of the process. This much is undisputed. It is also admitted by the respondent that prior to the advent of Lee Baty as production manager and factory superintendent the instructors had a part in determining lay-offs and discharges in their respective sections and also had disciplinary authority. Baty testified that after he became factory manager in June 1935, he took from the instructors and from all other supervisory employees the authority to hire, discharge, and discipline and vested all such authority in himself, so that he has been since that time the sole supervisory employee in the factory and personally observed the conduct, character of work, efficiency and general attitude of all employees.

The respondent has in its employ between 1100 and 1300 persons. On June 2, 1939, there were employed in the production and maintenance divisions, of which Baty is superintendent, 642 operators, 72 miscellaneous piece workers, 77 ironers, 11 folders, 41 examiners, 44 cutting department employees, 15 dividers, 44 instructors and distributors (thread girls or floor girls), 14 mechanics and helpers, 11 bundle boys, 52 clerical workers, 60 miscellaneous timekeepers, 20 porters and maids, working on 10 floors of the factory. In view of the number of employees, and the size of the factory, the undersigned finds that Baty's testimony in regard to the elimination of supervisors to be incredible. [17]

[fol. 166] It is plain from all the circumstances disclosed by the record that after June 1935, the instructors and the thread girls continued in their capacity as supervisors in charge of the operators who work in the various sewing sections of the factory. A number of the respondent's witnesses testified that instructors do not have the power to employ, discharge or discipline operators. There is substantial evidence, however, that they do perform functions which make them part of the supervisory staff.

The instructors, assisted by the thread girls [18] assume complete charge of and are fully responsible for their respective sections of the factory. Among the duties of the instructor is the assignment of bundles containing the materials and supplies upon which the operators work, and the transmission to the operators of the respondent's instructions for the performance of the sewing processes. Mrs. Reeves, who preceded Baty as factory manager and is now in charge of respondent's merchandising department, stated in an affidavit dated October 30, 1937, and confirmed the same in her testimony that: "competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them and constantly supervise the same." [emphasis supplied] In addition to these duties the instructors perform other functions as the representative of the management. When work is slack in the section the instructors determine who shall take a day off and in what order the operators will be released from the section. Although Baty denied that the instructors are charged with the duty of disciplining and reporting upon the efficiency of the operators who work in their rgspective section, the evidence is convincing that they do so the same as before the advent of Baty as factory manager, in June 1935. The instructor constitutes the link through which the operators learn the management's directions and the management learns whether a girl is a desirable employee, her capacity for work, her attitude toward work, and her performance of the work.

[17] The undersigned is unimpressed by the evidence adduced by the respondent to establish that all supervisory authority in June 1935 was vested in Baty. Appraising the respondent's evidence in the light of the contradictions and implausibilities found throughout, especially in the testimony of Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves and Baty, the undersigned is fully persuaded of its untrustworthy character. The evidence is further weakened by the plain indications, during examination of the instructors, thread girls and employees, assuming arguendo, that any change in the supervisory set up of the plant was made when Baty took charge, it was known only to Baty and the respondent's officials. Finally, it is most improbable that such a far reaching reorganization of a large factory would occur without some notice to those affected and particularly to the employees who had for years, according to Mrs. Reed, been under ". . . more supervision and more executives than — I know: I have more than are usual in the plant of this kind . . . yes our supervisors. Now in my plant I have 40 operators, 40 machines under one supervisor with an assistant one in charge."

[18] The evidence clearly indicates that in the absence of the instructor, her duties are performed by the thread girl.

The record clearly reveals that the instructors exercise supervisory, economic control over the operators in their sections. This is particularly true when as here the operators are paid upon a piece-rate basis. The instructors plan the work in each section, determining when the work comes into the section which operator shall work upon the more desirable bundles. They keep the operators busy and correct their mistakes. When repair work is necessary, the instructor decides whether the operator must rip the work out and do it over on her own time or receive pay for the work. Instructors report to the office weekly at a "going over of the cards" on the operators work for the past week. During temporary slack periods the instructors designate those operators who can be spared or transferred to other sections.

Over and above the supervisory and economic control exercised by the instructors, they regard themselves as supervisors and are so regarded by the operators; they are paid twice a month, their names being carried on a time workers pay roll, while the operators are paid on a [fol. 167] piece rate basis weekly; and they are responsible to Baty for the quality and quantity of work in their respective sections. Although a substantial number of employee-operators testified during the hearing, none of them stated that Baty personally gave them any instructions or directions or conferred with them about their work. The undersigned is convinced that there was no apparent change in the conduct of instructors or thread girls after June 1935. Furthermore, it is undisputed that the respondent has continued to hold out the instructors and thread girls to the employee-operators as supervisory employees and has given no notice of any kind to the operators that the instructors' authority had been reduced or in any way changed in June 1935.

The respondent contended that there is no distinction between the duties of the instructor and the thread girl, one having charge of quality and the other quantity, and that none of them act in a supervisory capacity. Even if it be assumed arguendo that there is no appreciable distinction, the undersigned is of the opinion that instructors and thread girls have supervisory authority. Mrs. Reeves testified that the word instructor and floor (thread) girls and the word supervisor "means one and the same to me." Rose Todd, hereinafter found to represent the management, testified that the respondent does not use the term "supervisor" but that it does have an employee, called an instructor in charge of 40 operators and a second girl that might be called an assistant instructor. It is clear from the record and the undersigned is convinced and so finds, that the instructors and thread girls actually and in all respects serve as foremen and assistant foremen of the sections of 40 operators. [19]

[19] The absence of any hierarchy of supervisors between the operators and Baty, with solely the instructors to transmit orders and report on work, renders the instructors more nearly approximate to foremen than any other commonly known class of supervisors. The descriptions of foremen in works on labor relations often point to the "teacher" aspect of his duties. See Arthur G. Anderson, Industrial Engineering and Factory Management, (1928) page 39:

> The foremen provides the necessary human element at the point of contact to make adjustments, rectify errors, remedy deficiencies, interpret and administer instructions, make reports, supervise work, and most important of all, provide personal leadership. In the final analysis the foreman is responsible for output. He is a manager, a teacher, a leader. At the furtherest outpost of management he is management to the workers.

So viewed, the respondent is clearly responsible for their activities. See N.L.R.B. v. Skinner & Kennedy Stationery Co., 113 F.(2d) 667, 670 (C.C.A. 8); N.L.R.B. v. Christian Board of Publication, 113 F.(2d) 678, 682 (C.C.A. 8); Wilson & Company v. N.L.R.B., 123 F.(2d) 411, 414 (C.C.A. 8); N.L.R.B. v. Gamble-Robinson Co., 129 F.(2d) 588, 590 (C.C.A. 8).

It is plain from the foregoing, that the instructors and thread girls are supervisory employees, and exercise economic control over the operators, that prior to June 1935, the instructors and the thread girls were admittedly supervisory employees, that since that time the respondent has continued to hold them out to the operators as supervisory employees, and that the respondent has given no notice of any kind to the operators that the instructors and thread girls have any less authority than formerly. Since the instructors and thread girls are charged with certain duties and economic control which are supervisory, and disciplinary in nature, their interests are closely related [fol. 168] to those of the management and are often incompatible with those of the ordinary worker. On the basis of all the evidence, the undersigned finds that instructors and thread girls are supervisory employees and that they act as representatives of the management in the factory. [20]

2. Rose Todd.

Todd was one of the most active and outstanding among the employees of the respondent in the affairs of the League

---

[20] The instructors are as important as the lead men and group leaders held by the Supreme Court to be employees of such a kind that the Board may base employer liability for unfair labor practices upon the employer's failure to prevent their activities in behalf of a favored union: International Ass'n of Machinists v. N.L.R.B., 311 U.S. 72; N.L.R.B. v. Link Belt Co., 311 U.S. 584; H. J. Heinz Co. v. N.L.R.B., 311 U.S. 514. In the Machinists case the Supreme Court said (pp. 79-80):

> According to petitioner these men were not foremen, let alone supervisors entrusted with executive and directorial functions, but merely "lead men" who by reason of long experience were skilled in handling new jobs and directed the set-up of the work . . .
> The employer, however, may be held to have assisted the formation of a Union even though the acts of the so-called agents were not expressly authorized or might not be attributable to him on strict application of the rules of respondeat superior. We are dealing here, not with private rights (Amalgamated Utility Workers v. Consolidated Edison Co., 309 U.S. 261), nor with technical concepts pertinent to an employer's legal responsibility to third persons for acts of his servants, but with a clear legislative policy to free the collective bargaining process from all taint of an employer's compulsion, domination or influence. . . . they [the lead men] were not high in the factory hierarchy and apparently did not have the power to hire or fire. But they did exercise general authority over the employees and were in a strategic position to translate to their subordinates the policies and desires of the management.

In the H. J. Heinz case the Supreme Court reaffirmed these principles and held that: "to the extent that petitioner may seek or be in a position to secure any advantage from these practices [by foremen and "group leaders"] they are not any the less within the condemnation of the act because petitioner did not authorize or direct them."

and in the formation and administration of the D.G.W.U. She was president of the League during the time that it played so effective a part in resisting the organizational campaign of the I.L.G.W.U. Todd was on the organizing committee of the D.G.W.U. and its first general chairman. Her status in the factory and her relation to the management is in dispute.

Todd, with an interruption of 2 years, has worked for the respondent for approximately 13 years. She was a nurse by profession and through acquaintance with Mrs. Reed as a nurse, secured a job at the respondent's factory in 1926. She worked for a short time as an operator and as a thread girl, during the early part of her employment. Also, prior to the interruption, Todd held various responsible positions with the respondent, including that of an instructor [21] and as an assistant to Dewey Atcheson, production engineer, in making time studies, studying production methods and studying rates of piece-work wages. She left her employment with the respondent in 1931 and for about 1 year worked for the Gernes Garment Company, where she took charge of the factory and later acted as a [fol. 169] traveling sales representative. When she returned to the employ of the respondent in 1933 Todd worked for several months as a thread girl. Until sometime in the spring of 1937 she helped in various sections of the factory spending a good share of her time in the sample department which makes sample dresses before general production begins.

From the record it is impossible to determine that Todd in 1937, 1938, and 1939 had any well-defined duties. During this period she was not assigned to any particular department, being directly responsible to Baty, the factory manager. Todd was assigned a desk in the factory — first on the ninth floor and later on the seventh floor — charged with the responsibility of keeping the various sections supplied with the necessary materials for maintaining operations and checking up on the delivery of various supplies that should be in the sections. In addition, if any of the sections were short of supplies which delayed the work Todd was notified and arranged for the proper supplies to be forwarded to the department. These duties required that Todd move throughout the various sections of the factory and contact instructors and thread girls. For a period of 1938 Todd again worked with Dewey Atcheson on some special work. Baty testified that Todd received the same vacations as given to the instructors and that in August 1937, "He couldn't let Todd go [on vacation] in August as she was indispensable." The president of the First National Bank of Kansas City with which the company carried its account testified that he had known Todd for 10 or 12 years as "a kind of 'all-round man'" for the company and that she had come into the bank for several years as respondent's representative.

During the period from April 16 to 30, 1937, Todd was carried on the designing pay roll, from May 1 to 31, 1937, on the hand sewing pay roll, from June 1 to 30, 1937, on the button and button hole pay-roll and from July 1 to 15, 1937, on the receiving department pay roll, although she did not work in these sections during these pay periods. When the D.G.W.U. was organized she was receiving a salary of $130 a month and although the D.G.W.U. expressed to the respondent a desire to have her services part time, the respondent continued to pay her the $130 a month, in addition to which the D.G.W.U. paid her $65 per month.

The undersigned, appraising Todd's entire employment record with the respondent, is persuaded and finds that her position in the factory was one of considerable responsibility, involving duties of a supervisory nature.

Evidence on Todd's activities in the factory plainly points to the fact that she occupied a close and confidential relation to the management which was made known to the employees by respondent's conduct. On April 23, 1937, when anti-I.L.G.W.U. demonstrations against Fern Sigler, a member of the I.L.G.W.U., took place in the factory, the disturbance was reported to Rose Todd. When Baty ordered Sigler from her section to the office he was accompanied by Todd. At the conference which followed, Todd dominated the scene and took the lead in questioning Sigler about her union affiliation although both Baty and

Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, were present. A reading of the transcript of that conference shows that Todd opened the conference and talked to Sigler of the respondent's policy of operating an open shop as if she represented the respondent, for example: ". . . we have had union people work here for years . . . We don't care. We have hired union people . . . I talked to some of the girls yesterday afternoon and tried to get them to see that it is all right if you want to work and belong to the union. However, they feel so keenly about it, we don't think we can do anything about it. . . We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way." Todd also said: [fol. 170] "My advice to you is, that if you feel that strongly about the union and have enough people to back you up, be in a union shop. I wouldn't any more think I could join the union than a man in the moon. I'd expect to be put out on the street and left there." Baty and Hyde acquiesced in all that Todd said and talked in the same vein. Todd also discoursed at length upon "our" employment policy. After the demonstrations in Sigler's section and the conference in the office it was Todd who finally sent the employees back to work. Todd's status around the plant was such that the respondent's telephone operators announced meetings over the inter-departmental telephone when Rose Todd asked them to, and instructors took directions from Todd when she directed the form in which they were to turn in time slips for employees absent from work on D.G.W.U. business. In addition, Rose Todd's position as president of the League, in which all of the respondent's supervisory force including Mr. Keyes, sales manager, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Reeves and Dewey Atcheson were members, and which came into existence to counteract the activities of the I.L.G.W.U., marked her in the eyes of the employees as a person in whom the management had confidence and whose views reflected those of the management. The respondent did nothing to discourage Todd's activities, although fully aware of them.

Irrespective of Todd's supervisory status, the undersigned is of the view that the evidence, as a whole, clearly identifies her with the management in the minds of the employees.[22] The undersigned finds that Rose Todd occupied a close and confidential position with the respondent and further finds that in such position she was acting for and on behalf of the respondent.

3. Hobart Atherton.

Hobart Atherton has been employed in the maintenance department of the respondent since November 1933. Atherton describes himself as the "clerk" of the company's maintenance department. He transmits orders to six em- [fol. 171] ployees who work with him in that department, shows them how to do the work when occasion demands, and keeps a record of the jobs performed. He also assists with repair work wherever needed. Atherton and the respondent deny that he is a supervisory employee in charge of the maintenance department. To accept their testimony would leave this department without supervision and would mean that each employee in the department decides for himself what repair jobs he will undertake. There is no evidence that any one else exercises any supervision or guidance over the work performed in the maintenance department, or that Baty, the factory superintendent, in any way directs these employees.

The undersigned finds that Hobart Atherton is a supervisory employee of the respondent in charge of the maintenance department of the plant.[23]

[22] International Ass'n of Machinists v. N.L.R.B., 311 U.S. 72, 80, in which the Court said:

> The statute, we think purposely, does not define the particular methods or agents by which the employer may intermeddle unlawfully. So to confine representation of him would open easy escape from the Act's provisions. Nothing in it requires that such representation be limited to officials having any particular kind or degree of authority such as "hiring and firing," "disciplinary power," or even "supervisory capacity." These evidences of authority make more plain the connection of the actor with the employer, but their absence does not preclude the existence of such a connection. What is required is that substantial evidence show that the actor, whatever his official position, is acting in fact on behalf of the employer, not for himself or others only, and that, by whatever method or means, the employer brings pressure to bear upon his employees which deprives them of free and independent choice.

Cf. Cupples Co. Mf'rs. v. N.L.R.B., 106 F.(2d) 109 (C.C.A.-8), where the Court refused to hold the respondent liable for the acts of an employee inasmuch as the respondent had not held out the said employee as a person having authority to advise others with respect to joining or not joining labor organizations, had not directed the acts to be done, and the acts had not been done with the respondent's knowledge or consent.

[23] Atherton's position corresponds to those of the "group leaders" whose supervisory status was an issue in H. J. Heinz Co. v. N.L.R.B., 311 U.S. 514, 518, 521.

4. Other Supervisory Employees.

The status of certain other employees who were active in the League or the D.G.W.U. and who occupy responsible positions with the respondent is in dispute. These persons are Florence Strickland, in charge of the pattern department; Lena Tyhurst, assistant factory manager and in charge of the inspection department; Martha Gray, in charge of the outlet store; Ortense Root, in charge of the sample department; Heath Cowan, in charge of the receiving department (piece goods); Marvin Price, in charge of building maintenance; Ted Scholes, in charge of the cutting department; and Mary Bogert, in charge of the dividing department. Some of these employees admittedly had supervisory authority before the appointment of Baty as factory manager. They are all, except Martha Gray, under the supervision of Baty and so far as the record indicates, their relationship to the management after Baty assumed charge was identical with their prior duties and responsibilities as far as the employees in the various departments were concerned. The employees in these departments were not aware of any curtailment in the authority of those in charge after Baty was made factory manager.

The undersigned finds that the above named persons are supervisory employees and as such were representatives of the management. [24]

B. Events Prior to the Effective Date of the Act.

Prior to 1934 no effort had ever been made to organize the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. In 1934 the I.L.G.W.U. established an office in Kansas City, Missouri, and announced in the papers that an attempt would be made to organize the garment workers of Kansas City. On March 15, 1934, the I.L.G.W.U. held an open meeting at the Musicians Hall to which all of the respondent's employees were invited. Another similar meeting was held at Eagles Hall on December 4, 1934. On both occasions the respondent's supervisory force attended the meetings in a group including Mrs. Reeves, then production manager, [24] The respondent contends that in Baty resided the sole supervisory responsibility over the employees in each of these departments. See footnote 17 supra, for the undersigned's rejection of this untenable position.

Mrs. Hyde, personnel manager, and many of the instructors. Rose Todd, whose relation to the management is discussed hereinbefore, attended the meeting at the Musicians Hall. Dewey Atcheson, production engineer, attended the meeting at Eagles Hall.

[fol. 172] During this period at least a dozen of the employees joined the I.L.G.W.U., several of whom became active, passing out notices of meetings and soliciting their fellow workers to join the organization. Many of the employees attending the meeting and others, irrespective of membership in the I.L.G.W.U., were called to the office where Mrs. Reeves questioned them about their interest in the union and warned them that joining would do them no good. Employees were variously told by Mrs. Reeves that they had been "listening too much to somebody outside," that "Dennelly's don't belong to the union and they never will" and she had thought they had better "sense" than to join the I.L.G.W.U. and that they had been "misled" in doing so, and they ought to have "a darn good spanking" for their own good. Mrs. Gray, in charge of respondent's outlet store, told employees it was a "shame" that an employee had joined the I.L.G.W.U.

Dewey Atchison asked employees why they did not come to the management instead of "going down to a bunch of foreigners," advised against getting "messed up" with the union and warned they would be fired if they did. The instructors warned many of the employees that those who joined the I.L.G.W.U. would be discharged and urged employees not to give their money "to those foreigners." One instructor, referred to the I.L.G.W.U. members as "scum."

A substantial number of the employees who joined the I.L.G.W.U. were laid off or discharged shortly after joining. [25] Approximately 12 employees in June 1934 attended a dinner at the home of Glynn Brooks Yarnell, [26] an employee who had joined the I.L.G.W.U., where they discussed joining the I.L.G.W.U. Yarnell was discharged in July 1934 although she had worked for the respondent since December 1924. Within a few months all except one of the employees who attended the dinner were either laid off or discharged. As a result of these lay-offs or discharges the I.L.G.W.U. on December 6, 1934, filed a charge against the respondent under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, alleging that eight employees had been laid off because they joined the I.L.G.W.U. A hearing on these charges was held in Kansas City, Missouri, in April and May 1935. The taking of testimony was completed, but before a decision issued the National Industrial Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States.

[25] The undersigned makes no findings with respect to the reasons for these discharges which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act and which are not presently in issue.

[26] The pleadings and record designate this employee as Glynn Brooks. At the close of the hearing the pleadings were amended and the record corrected to designate her as Glynn B. oks Yarnell.

In the latter part of 1934 and the first part of 1935 all the other employees who were known to have joined the I.L.G.W.U. were transferred from the main factory of the respondent to a temporary branch which was used by the respondent during the busy season. When the rush of work was over and the use of the temporary building discontinued the employees, most of whom had several years service, were laid off. Employees working in the main factory with less service were retained. A strict seniority system was not followed in the factory, although it was the customary practice to provide regular employment for the older and more experienced operators.

As a result of this sequence of events the employees became hesitant to join the I.L.G.W.U. and those who had joined denied their membership when questioned. Employees who had not joined were even careful not to talk to those suspected of I.L.G.W.U. membership for fear of some discrimination with respect to their jobs.

[fol. 173] In February 1935, Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store, and Florence Strickland, in charge of the pattern department, formed an organization among the respondent's employees known as the "Nelly-Don Loyalty League." The initial step in its organization was a meeting at the home of Gray, attended by approximately 50 employees representing the various sections of the factory. Within the next 3 days membership cards were circulated and were signed by substantially all the employees. Florence Strickland, in circulating the cards, stated "that Mrs. Donnelly (Nell Quinlan Reed) would close her doors before she would have a union shop, and [employees] should sign these cards to keep — [their] jobs and keep [them] in work because she would close the doors." A statement was circulated along with the membership cards stating that:

> We protest against and will resist all attempts of outside interference in the business of said company or with our relations to the company as employees.
> We recognize the fact that . . . we have had generous and fair treatment from Nelly-Don (Nell Quinlan Reed) President of the company, and we repose our confidence in her rather than in professional agitators who are sent here to create discontent among the employees of the company.

Florence Strickland refused to allow Virginia Stroup, who was president of the I.L.G.W.U. local, to sign a membership card because she belonged to "another organization." Similarly Lena Allison, an instructor, refused to allow Frances Reidell a card on the ground that she was an I.L.G.W.U. member. Following the signing of the cards, on February 8, 1935, a mass meeting of all employees was held during working hours on the second floor of the building occupied by the respondent's plant, presided over by Martha Gray, who explained the meaning of the word "loyalty."

Meetings were regularly held on the second floor of the building.[27] The meetings were announced by a notice to the instructors, transmitted either by Mrs. Wherry, factory manager, or by the respondent's switchboard operator, calling each section and the instructors in each section notifying the employees to attend the meeting. Each of the sections in the plant had a representative elected by the employees in the section to represent them in the League. These representatives were chosen by passing a sheet of paper among the employees in each section while at their machines, on which nominations were made and then re-passing the same sheet around in a similar manner so that each employee could mark his vote on the sheet. Virtually all the respondent's supervisors, including Mrs. Reeves, Mae Hyde, Dewey Atchison, Martha Gray, and Florence Strickland were members of the League. The League had songs of loyalty and sponsored the wearing of pins bearing the initial "L" as a demonstration of loyalty to Nell Quinlan Reed.

[fol. 174] It is clear from the events cited above, that prior to the effective date of the Act, the respondent's supervisors expressed to employees the uncompromising hostility of the respondent toward all labor unions and particularly toward the I.L.G.W.U. Employees were made fully aware of their employer's attitude and those who applied for membership or joined the I.L.G.W.U. did so with a great deal of hesitancy. During this period it was made plain to the employees by their supervisors that loyalty to the respondent meant the renunciation of the Union. Membership and influence in the League enabled the respondent to foster an organized employee resistance to outside unions. Membership of management representatives and supervisory employees, in the League, convinced the rank and file of the respondent's employees that the League was an organization approved by the respondent to which they must give their support, and that they must correspondingly refrain from joining or assisting the I.L.G.W.U. which the League so consistently opposed. [28]

The respondent contends that since the above-related activities took place prior to July 5, 1935, the effective date of the Act, they are irrelevant to the issues in this proceeding and that all evidence thereof should have been excluded. This contention fails to recognize that the League

[28] Since the League was set up as a rival to the I.L.G.W.U., the League cannot be held out as a "purely social organization," as contended by the respondent. See N.L.R.B. v. J. Freezer & Son, 95 F.(2d) 840, 841 (C.C.A. 4) also Senate Committee on Education and Labor, S. Rept. No. 573, 74th Cong., 1st Sess. pp. 10, where the following statement appears:

> Nor does anything in the bill interfere with the freedom of employers to establish pension benefits, outing clubs, recreational societies, and the like, so long as such organizations do not extend their functions to the field of collective bargaining; and so long as they are not used as a covert means of discriminating against or in favor of membership in any labor organization. (Emphasis supplied)

continued in existence after effective date of the Act. Furthermore, evidence of an employer's attitude and conduct with respect to labor unions for a reasonable period before the effective date of the Act has often been admitted for the purpose of evaluating the significance of events occurring after such date. [29]

Since the League was inspired by the respondent and fully supported by its representatives from its inception, the undersigned is convinced that the respondent thereby forcibly impressed upon its employees its anti-union sentiments.

Further, the League was dominated and controlled by the respondent, and prior to the effective date of the Act, the respondent used it to prevent its employees from joining the I.L.G.W.U. or any other outside labor organization. [30]

[fol. 175] C. Events Prior to April 27, 1937; Interference, Restraint, and Coercion.

Following the lay off and discharge of the I.L.G.W.U. members in late 1934 and early 1935, the organization of the League in 1935, and the inability of the I.L.G.W.U. to carry to a successful conclusion the case under the NRA, due to the decision declaring the Act unconstitutional, labor relations at respondent's factory remained in a quiescent condition until March 1937. During this period the I.L.G.W.U. abandoned temporarily its efforts to organize the factory. The League continued in existence, and solicited new employees to join. In some instances, instructors brought new employees notices that they were eligible to membership, directed them to the desk of the League president and later brought them their League pins.

On February 26, 1937, there appeared in the Kansas City Star an article stating that the I.L.G.W.U. had announced a campaign to organize the respondent's employees and had appropriated a large sum of money to be spent in a drive for recognition of the I.L.G.W.U. as the collective bargaining agent in the respondent's factory.

On March 2, 1937, Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren, shipping clerks, went during working hours to the various departments of the factory and secured the signatures of respondent's approximately 800 factory employees to a pledge which read as follows:

We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company Co: wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with the organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed. [Emphasis supplied]

The petition was passed through most, if not all, of the sections, being handed from operator to operator while they were at work at their machines. With six exceptions the instructors and thread girls did not sign when the petition went through their respective section, although they knew the petition was being circulated. Instructors Carrie Abrams, Ada Wolf, Clara Finnell, and Helen Little, and thread girls, Nellie Biggs, Grace Davis, and Emma Grover signed the pledge. Three employees, Sylvia Hull, Mamie Carlson, and Elsie Greenhaw, refused to sign, one stating that she disagreed with the expression of opposition to labor organizations, another, that she was not satisfied with conditions in the factory. Two of these individuals later signed for fear of losing their jobs, their names being later erased.

On the afternoon of the same day, Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren took the signed pledges to Mrs. Reed's home and presented them to her. Thereafter, as the result of arrangements made between Mrs. Reed and a newspaper representative, a picture of the employees presenting the pledge was taken and appeared on the front page of the Kansas City Star, accompanied by the statement that Mrs. Reed was going to place the pledge in the cornerstone of the new building she was planning to erect.

Mrs. Reed shortly thereafter expressed to her office manager, Marguerite Keyes, a wish that all employees, not merely factory employees, would sign the petition. Keyes requested an employee in her department, Pauline Shartzer, to circulate the pledge of refusal to acknowledge any labor organization, among all the employees who had theretofore not signed. As a result, everyone in the plant including the supervisory employees, watchmen, porters, maids and stenographers, indeed every employee except the three heretofore mentioned, signed the "loyalty" pledge. The instructors and thread girls who signed when the petition first went through their section, signed again a second [fol. 176] time on the same page with the other instructors and thread girls. The additional pledge was thereafter presented to Mrs. Reed.

Under all the circumstances above related the undersigned finds that the respondent, by permitting Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren, and requesting Pauline Shartzer to circulate the pledges in the factory during working hours and by requesting that additional signatures be secured, gave approval and lent assistance and encouragement to the solicitation of its employees to pledge themselves not to join the I.L.G.W.U. [31] and thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced them in the free choice of a collective bargaining agent. [32]

On March 6, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post carried an article stating that David Dubinsky, president of the I.L.G.W.U., at a meeting of 700 union members in Kansas City had officially launched a movement to organize employees of the Donnelly Company. This announcement was followed by a letter to the respondent from the I.L.G.W.U. under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a conference between the I.L.G.W.U. and representatives of the respondent. The respondent did not reply to this letter.

[31] The solicitation of expressions of employee opinion on union matters during working hours, with the knowledge and assistance of the employer, has been uniformly held to violate the Act. N.L.R.B. v. Remington & Rand, Inc., 94 F.(2d) 862, 870 (C.C.A. 2); Titan Metal Mfg. Co. v. N.L.R.B., 106 F.(2d) 254, 260 (C.C.A. 3); Wilson & Co. v. N.L.R.B., 103 F.(2d) 243, 251 (C.C.A. 8).

[32] It may be noted that the circulation of this pledge, coincidental with the renewed organizational activities of the I.L.G.W.U. among the respondent's employees, bears striking similarity to the circulation of the League membership cards and anti-union statements by the respondent 2 years earlier, soon after the I.L.G.W.U. had initiated its campaign among the employees. In each instance the pleas to the employees to be "loyal" to the respondent and to resist outside interference, appeared at crucial junctures in the campaign of the I.L.G.W.U. to organize the respondent's employees.

A meeting of all the respondent's employees took place during working hours [33] on the afternoon of March 18, 1937, on the second floor of the building housing the respondent's [fol. 177] plant. [34] Employees were notified orally by their instructors that they were to attend the meeting, the instructors having been notified by either Mrs. Wherry or over the factory telephone system. Most all of the supervisory force were in attendance at the meeting, including Ella Mae Hyde, Martha Gray, and Elizabeth Reeves, the instructors and the thread girls. Rose Todd, with the assistance of Hobart Atherton, both of whom were officials of the League and supervisory employees, called the meeting and Todd presided. Chairs for the meeting were rented from the Kansas City Rental Chair Company under the name of the League. From these facts, the undersigned concludes, despite the denial of Rose Todd, [35] that the meeting was sponsored by the League and its officials.

[33] The Board contends and the respondent denies that this meeting and the one of April 27, 1937, referred to later herein, were held during working hours. Evaluating the evidence in its entirety, the undersigned is not persuaded by the testimony adduced by the respondent. A finding favorable to the respondent's position would necessitate the acceptance of testimony which is contrary to the weight of the evidence. The indefinite and routine testimony of respondent's witnesses with their lack of knowledge of details, and the mutually corroborative testimony of Board's witnesses, supported by other evidence, that operators attended meetings in their uniforms, that employees went to the meetings in groups and that no definite time was given in the call for the meetings, although the hours of work were staggered and the operators were working overtime, convinces the undersigned that the meetings of March 18 and April 27, 1937, were held during working hours.

[34] The meeting was held on the second floor of the building in which the respondent's plant was located; however, the respondent on March 18, 1937, did not have the second floor under lease, although occupying practically the entire building. Although the first and second floors were not leased by the respondent prior to May 1937, employees had regularly attended Loyalty League meetings and company style shows, held on these floors and did not know whether they were leased by the respondent. The building occupied by the respondent had ten floors and even during the time when the respondent did not have the first and second floors leased, there were no other occupants in the building except the respondent.

[35] At the hearing Todd testified that the meeting was a "spontaneous" gathering of the employees to discuss what means might be adopted to protect the respondent's employees against anticipated violence in connection with the I.L.G.W.U.'s projected organizational campaign. The record indicates that the respondent's employees had become alarmed by hearing reports that at other garment factories in Kansas City, where the I.L.G.W.U. was conducting organizational campaigns clashes had occurred, involving pickets, non-striking employees, and local police. Some of respondent's employees discussed the reports and expressed fear that an organizational campaign at the respondent's factory might precipitate similar strikes and violence.

Rose Todd made a few opening remarks, after which Mrs. Reed was requested to come in and address the employees. Mrs. Reed brought with her the letter which the respondent had received from the I.L.G.W.U. under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a conference. The letter was read to the employees. Mrs. Reed then made a talk in which she expressed her pleasure at receiving the "loyalty" pledge which had been presented to her on March 2, told the employees that the respondent was an institution to be proud of, that it had taken care of its employees by keeping the factory in operation during the depression, and that she intended to continue to run the business. Then she spoke of threats of violence that the I.L.G.W.U. was alleged to have made against employees of the company, and promised protection against such violence. Finally she directed her remarks to the question of unionization of the factory. What she said at this point is a matter of dispute. The Board's witnesses testified that Mrs. Reed stated she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized and that she would not allow "Dubinsky or any other 'sky' to tell her how to run her business." According to respondent's version, Mrs. Reed stated ". . . Neither Dubinsky or any other but-tinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you to join the International (I.L.G.W.U.) against your will." The undersigned does not consider it necessary to resolve the precise conflict in this testimony, since in the undersigned's view, Mrs. Reed's own version of her speech at the March 18 meeting, and the events which took place there, constituted an unfair labor practice. The meeting was sponsored by the League, which is controlled by the respondent, and was attended by most of the respondent's supervisory employees. Through the presence of supervisors and the sponsorship of the League which had for its purpose the exclusion of outside union organization from the factory, the employees must inevitably have been aware of the anti-union character of the meeting and could not have been free to express their independent views. It may be true, as the respondent contends, that many of them feared the alleged threats of the I.L.G.W.U. but instead of permitting the employees to decide for themselves what attitude they would adopt with regard to the I.L.G.W.U. the respondent [fol. 178] seized upon such fears as may have existed to build up and strengthen a militant employee opposition toward that labor organization. Mrs. Reed's remarks indicated that the I.L.G.W.U. was the common enemy of both the respondent and its employees and promised the employees the respondent's protection and assistance against that organization. Mrs. Reed disparagingly labelled David Dubinsky, president of the I.L.G.W.U., a "but-tinsky" who was seeking to force the respondent's employees to join that Union. Mrs. Reed further told the employees that she had "had lots of nice things happen to me in my lifetime but I have never had anything that made me so proud and so happy" as the receipt of the "loyalty" pledge in which the employees unanimously agreed to refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. While Mrs. Reed sought to appear as a disinterested defender of the respondent's employees in the exercise of their right to join or not to join a labor organization, against the background of the respondent's widely publicized hostility to the I.L.G.W.U. and the past repeated reminders to the employees that "loyalty" to the respondent demanded repudiation of outside union organizations, the undersigned is convinced that Mrs. Reed's remarks [36] made it plain that the respondent's attitude toward unionization had not changed and the membership of any of the employees in the I.L.G.W.U. was not to be tolerated.

The undersigned finds that by its sponsorship and domination of the March 18 meeting and by Mrs. Reed's talk at said meeting the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

On April 22, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post carried an announcement by the I.L.G.W.U. that Sylvia Hull, one of respondent's operators, had been named as a delegate to a convention of the I.L.G.W.U. Hull appeared for work [36] The undersigned is not unmindful that Mrs. Reed told the employees that "you know that you have never been asked whether or not you belong to a union . . . if you want to belong that is your own business . . ." The undersigned cannot agree, however, that the reference to the employees' rights rendered them wholly free with respect to joining unions. On the contrary, in view of the respondent's past hostility to labor organizations, the undersigned believes that the employees could not fail to be discouraged from joining the I.L.G.W.U. or any other labor organization.

as usual at the respondent's plant on the morning of April 23. A few minutes after 8 o'clock while she was working at her machine on the 8th floor of the plant, two groups of employees — each consisting of 12 or 20 persons — successively gathered at her machine. They demanded to know what authority she had to represent them at the I.L.G.W.U. convention. Some of the operators stood on top of nearby tables, others sang Loyalty League songs. They told Hull that they would not allow her to belong to the Union, and demanded that she surrender her League pin, which she refused unless they returned to her the cost of the pin. Shortly thereafter, the operators returned, gave Hull 35 cents and she surrendered the pin. Lena Allison, the instructor in charge of Hull's section, was present throughout the demonstrations, but did not order the girls back to work or take any action of any kind; Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing section, was present and pointed Hull out to some of the demonstrators. Ella Mae Hyde, the respondent's employment manager, appeared on the scene of the demonstration and told the demonstrators to return to work. The operators refused, saying they would not work while Hull was there. Hyde thereupon took her down to the office on another floor. They were followed by a number of the demonstrators shouting that they would not return to work until they heard Hull say she would go home. Hull then said "I will go home, I didn't know the girls felt this way about it or I wouldn't have done it." According to Hull's testimony, which is undenied, Hyde told her she would have [fol. 179] to go home. Hull replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day. Hyde took her employee-identification badge and Hull left a telephone number through which she might be reached. [37]

Later, during the same morning on which the above-described incident occurred, Fern Sigler, an operator who had displayed on that day for the first time her I.L.G.W.U. membership pin, was subjected to similar demonstrations. The employees surrounded Sigler's machine and sang songs, derided her, took her League pin from her and shouted "get up and go home, we don't want you in here." The demonstrations subsided when Baty, factory manager, [37] The alleged discriminatory discharge of Hull based upon this incident is discussed in section E, infra.

accompanied by Rose Todd ordered Sigler from her machine to the office. As Sigler left the floor the operators shouted; "we are not going to work as long as she remains here." When Baty insisted on sending Sigler home she argued with him that she had a right to join the I.L.G.W.U. and it was the employer's duty to control the employees. Baty replied "We don't go in for the Wagner Act, we are just running our business here not a law office." Todd then stated "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way." After the conference participated in by Baty, Hyde, Todd and Sigler, Sigler was sent home. Baty promised to talk to the operators and "quiet them down" and to call her back when the unrest had subsided. Despite his promise Baty admitted at the hearing that he did nothing to allay antagonism toward the I.L.G.W.U. in the plant.[38]

The undersigned finds that the respondent approved of and encouraged the demonstrations and took advantage of them to reveal once more to the employees its hostility to the I.L.G.W.U. and its support of anti-I.L.G.W.U. activities. Further the undersigned finds that by such acts the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees of the rights guaranteed by Section 7 of the Act.

The undersigned further finds that by using the League and its officers as hereinabove described for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I.L.G.W.U., the respondent has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.[39]

---

[38] The complaint contains no allegation of discriminatory treatment of Sigler. It should be noted that Sigler is the sister of May Fike, allegedly discharged for union activities, and referred to in Section E, hereof.

[39] The respondent contends that these demonstrations were of a 'spontaneous' nature for which it is not responsible and that the fear and resentment of the employees to the I.L.G.W.U. was the motivating cause of these demonstrations. The respondent condoned, approved and encouraged these demonstrations and made no sincere effort to check the demonstrators. Neither did it in any way discipline the demonstrators who had disrupted the normal operation of the factory nor did it take any steps to make it possible for these employees to return to their work in the factory unmolested. No deductions were made in the wages of time workers who participated in these incidents. See Matter of General Shoe Corporation and Georgia Federation of Labor, 99 F.(2d) 223 (C.C.A. 5); N.L.R.B. v. General Motors Corp., 116 F.(2d) 306, 309-310 (C.C.A. 7); N.L.R.B. v. Elkland Leather Co., 114 F.(2d) 221, 224 (C.C.A. 3).

[fol. 180] D. Domination and interference with the formation and administration of the D.G.W.U. and contribution of support; interference, restraint, and coercion.

1. The Formation of the D.G.W.U.

Shortly after the March 18 meeting a committee, which had been appointed at the close of that meeting, consisting of Rose Todd, Loyalty League president, and the representative of the respondent, Hobart Atherton, an officer of the League and a supervisor, and Sally Ormsby, employed Tyler, an attorney. When Tyler asked for a retainer fee Todd borrowed $1,000 from the First National Bank of Kansas City on the unsecured note of the Loyalty League, deposited the money in the Loyalty League checking account and a League check signed by Todd as president and Hartman as treasurer was given to Tyler. While the first conference with Tyler was limited to the discussion of the possibility of obtaining an injunction against the I.L.G.W.U., after the Act was held constitutional on April 12, 1937, Tyler suggested the formation of an independent union.

On April 27, 1937, a mass meeting of all respondent's employees was held during working hours, [40] on the second floor of the building in which the respondent's plant was located. [41] Notice of the meeting was given to the employees through their respective instructors who had been notified by Mrs. Wherry, or over the factory telephone system. Instructors and thread girls attended the meeting along with the operators in their sections. Chairs for the meeting were rented in the name of and paid for by the Loyalty League.

Rose Todd who was still president of the Loyalty League presided at the meeting. Her opening remarks indicated that she regarded the meeting as a part of the series which preceded it for she stated she hoped, "this meeting is going to be as enthusiastic as our last one was" and explained that she had called the meeting "as chairman of the committee of employees." [42] Todd stated that she had con- [fol. 181] sulted two lawyers, Mr. Gosset and Mr. Tyler, whom she had known for years, and they advised forming a plant union. She explained that the Loyalty League, being a purely social organization, would not take care of the situation; that another organization was necessary to give them representation to definitely confer with the proper representatives of the respondent at times when they felt that it was necessary. She pointed out that a union would have to be formed if they were to successfully resist attempts of organization by an outside union. She then told the employees that the new organization would be called the "Donnelly Garment Workers Union" and although she was distressed as they were at having to use the word "union" it seemed to be necessary.

Mr. Tyler was then introduced by Todd. Tyler stated that, "Some weeks ago several employees came to my office and employed Mr. Gosset and myself as legal advisers of the employees, so that I am in fact at this moment acting as an attorney for you or for many of you even though you have never seen me before . . . You may believe in unions or you may disbelieve in unions and still agree with the advice I am about to offer you. The reason for this advice I am going to give you is that we believe it is to your best interest to organize your own individual [42] The meeting preceding it was, according to witnesses called by the Board, the meeting of March 18 at which Mrs. Reed spoke. The company claimed a meeting took place either the last of March or the first of April, however, the many inconsistencies in the evidence offered by the respondent respecting this meeting, and its entire improbability in view of the complete circumstances compels the undersigned to conclude that there was no meeting between March 18 and April 27. The borrowing of $1,000 from the bank on March 30 for the purpose of paying Tyler a fee is inconsistent with a meeting on or about that date at which money for Tyler was supposedly raised. Saucke testified that she moved the assessment at a meeting on or about March 30 for paying the fee yet she further testified she never heard of Tyler prior to April 27. Atherton, Warth, Barnes and Dean on the other hand testified that at the meeting on or about March 30, Rose Todd explained about the committee seeing Tyler. This seems unlikely since the minutes of April 27 show this to have occurred at that meeting. Atherton testified that he believed Eva Liberman made the motion that each employee contribute 50 cents for the fee. Saucke when first examined on cross as to whether she made a motion in the spring of 1938 to assess each employee $1 to pay Tyler his fee had no recollection of making such a motion but when confronted with the minutes of the 1938 meeting remembers that she made such a motion both in 1937 and again in 1939. This alleged meeting is furthermore the only meeting for which no minutes or other written record was furnished by the respondent or the independent union.

unaffiliated plant union of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and proceed with such a union." Tyler went on to explain that one of the reasons for the organization was the fact that the I.L.G.W.U. had sent a representative to its national convention and "in order to stop this and to make it clear that you are speaking for yourselves through your own representatives whom you choose, we think your own union is desirable." He also stated, "I do not think this action can or will be considered as an act of unfriendliness to your employer. I believe they recognize your right to take this step and it isn't an unfriendly act to them. [Emphasis supplied] In fact, it is much better for them and yourselves for you to have your own union with your own representatives rather than having a group trying to represent outsiders from New York." Todd then said, "Well, we are together as an entire group of employees. Let's form this organization." It was unanimously decided without any discussion and by a unanimous vote of the approximately 1300 assembled employees to form such a union. A nominating committee of five was then appointed by Todd to select a slate composed of a General Chairman and eight Group Chairmen to serve as representatives and officers of the new organization. While the committee retired to select its nominees, charter membership cards bearing the name "Donnelly Garment Workers Union" previously prepared were distributed for signature. Thereafter Tyler read the bylaws [43] which Todd, Atherton and Ormsby had requested him to draft. They were immediately adopted without alterations. The nomination committee returned to the meeting and presented the names of nominees for General Chairman and Group Chairmen who were unanimously elected as a group with Rose Todd as General Chairman. Thirteen hundred charter [43] The bylaws indicate the purpose of the D.G.W.U. was in part the same as that of the Loyalty League which, in the words of Rose Todd, had become inadequate to give the employees the "protection" they needed. Article II of the bylaws provides inter alia:

> The purpose of this organization (D.G.W.U.) shall be. . . the protection of employees and members of this union from coercion, intimidation, violence, or threats of violence in order to force them to join unions organized and dominated by outsiders and not employees of this plant membership cards previously distributed were collected and [fol. 182] the meeting declared adjourned. [44]

The facts as related above, make it plain that the organizational meeting of the D.G.W.U. was planned, organized and under the complete control of respondent's representatives. Under all the circumstances the undersigned concludes and finds, that the concept of an independent union originated with respondent's supervisory employees and further, that the respondent through the activities of its supervisory employees gave approval, and lent assistance and encouragement to the D.G.W.U.

[fol. 183] 2. Membership and participation by other supervisors in the D.G.W.U.

In addition to Todd's and Atherton's membership and participation in the D.G.W.U. as representatives of the management, the instructors and thread girls all attended

[44] The committee of employees, Todd, Atherton and Ormsby, were instrumental in calling the meeting of April 27, "after a general request from a great many employees that we try to do something for our own protection." This same group had been appointed as a committee at a meeting sponsored by the Loyalty League on March 18 for the same purpose. The ledger sheets of the Kansas City chair rental company show the chairs were rented by the "Ellie Don' Loyalty League to be used on that date and cancelled check of the Loyalty League shows the League drew a check in favor of the chair rental company in payment therefor. The respondent's telephone operator called on the inter-departmental telephone system each department of the building and gave notice that Todd was calling a meeting of employees on the second floor. Todd presided at the meeting but denied that she was acting in her capacity as President of the League. Todd, out of the $1,000 borrowed in the name of the League, paid $500 to Tyler as a retaining fee. Though it is contended that the $500 retainer fee was in payment only for advice concerning a projected injunction suit against the I.L.G.W.U. for the protection of the respondent's employees, the undersigned is convinced that the fee covered Tyler's services in connection with the organization of the D.G.W.U., the proposed injunction suit having been rejected as a method of protection. Instead, Tyler advised the League committee to form an unaffiliated union. He attended the April 27 meeting and read the bylaws he had previously drafted on the instruction of the League committee. Thereafter in May or June 1937, he drafted proposals for a closed shop contract and a wage agreement hereinafter referred to, with the respondent. Tyler received no fees from the D.G.W.U. until November 23, 1937 which was 7 months after its formation and at a time when the D.G.W.U. had undertaken other legal action involving court litigation. Minutes of the group chairman of the D.G.W.U. for June 15, 1937 records that Rose Todd stated in explanation of the fee ". . . we paid Mr. Tyler a $500 retainer fee. He helped us write up our bylaws and working agreement and will advise us and help us when we need it."

From all the circumstances above related the undersigned finds that the meeting of April 27 was sponsored and financed by the Loyalty League through Todd, Atherton and Ormsby, and further that the League financed the employment of Tyler, paid him a retainer fee of $500 and that the fee covered the cost of his services in connection with the formation of the D.G.W.U. and the drafting of its bylaws.

the meeting of April 27 and signed cards for membership in the D.G.W.U. Dewey Atchinson, production engineer, joined but resigned July 14, 1937. The minutes of the meeting show that instructors and thread girls and others closely allied with the management regularly attended and participated in the meetings. At five different meetings, December 7, 1937, March 8, 1938, April 26, 1938, January 10, 1939, and February 7, 1939, Stella Willis, an instructor, participated in the meetings. On one occasion, she suggested an assessment of 50 cents per member to pay Tyler a further fee. While the motion was not put at that meeting, at a meeting held shortly thereafter, upon the motion of Helen Little, an instructor, an assessment of $1 per member for Tyler's fee was voted. In making her motion, Instructor Little stated:

I think most of the employees realize that if they belonged to the C.I.O. or the A. F. of L. they would be assessed quite a little bit more. I think the minimum is $1.25 per month, and I think everyone would be willing to help out and donate $1.

In 1939 Harry Grogan, whose name was listed on the payroll under the heading, "Instructors and Floor Ladies," urged the employees to vote an assessment of $2 apiece for Tyler. On this occasion Todd pointed out that low wages were paid in I.L.G.W.U. shops, and Grogan added that even $10 was not a third or even fourth of what it would have cost them, impliedly referring to the I.L.G.W.U., so that $2 each would be fair for Tyler's fee.

At the election of D.G.W.U. officers in April 1938, five thread girls in succession, Nellie Riggs, Jessie Mudd, Rose Hendricks, Edna Rawlings, and Clarice Martin and two persons whose names appeared on the payroll heading "Buying Records," [45] Hilda Richmond and Veda Hoyland either nominated or seconded the nomination of members of the two nominating committees which in turn recommended nominees for officers of the D.G.W.U. Both committees nominated were unanimously elected. The two nominating committees proposed their respective slates of officers, each of which recommended Rose Todd for chairman, and Marjorie Green for secretary, both of whom had held these positions in 1937, for treasurer, Jack McConaughey, who had been on the board of Group Chairmen in 1937, and for representatives of the mechanics, Walter Higgins. However, despite this close similarity on the two slates and although no campaigning was done for those nominees whose names appeared on only one slate, when a standing vote was taken, Todd, who was presiding, called on two instructors who were present at the meeting, Lola Sheens and Stella Willis to give their opinions as to which slate received the larger vote.

[fol. 184] The election in April, 1939, repeated in many respects the occurrences of the previous year. However, this time Rose Todd herself appointed the two nominating committees without going through the formality of nominations and unanimous elections. Hilda Richmond, whose closeness to management is indicated by appearance of her name on the "Buying Record's" pay roll [46] was named by Todd as chairman of one of the committees and Harry Grogan whose name appeared on the pay roll under "Instructors and Floor Ladies" was a member of the other. These two nominating committees each brought in slates naming Todd chairman, Jack McConaughey treasurer, Marjorie Green, secretary, and Walter Higgins representative of mechanics. Again the election was by an open standing vote.

Heath Cowan, in charge of the receiving department; Marvin Price, in charge of building maintenance; and Ortense Root, in charge of the sample department were members of the D.G.W.U. and, as shown by its minutes, attended meetings and participated in its affairs. Ted Scoles, in charge of the cutting department; Lena Tyhurst, in charge of the inspection department; and Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing department were also members of the D.G.W.U. At various times the question was raised by employees as to whether department heads and instructors should have the right to be members of the D.G.W.U. and attend and participate in its meetings. However, Todd's statement of the D.G.W.U. policy that all employees except the executives Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde were eligible remained in effect. Employees, nevertheless, at various times expressed the view that the presence of such persons at meetings excluded them from speaking freely of their complaints. In a meeting of the D.G.W.U. Group Chairmen, Hobart Atherton when he stated, "I think department heads, instructors and so forth, should have all the privileges of membership except that they shall not be allowed the right to vote," realized the danger of participation by supervisory employees in the affairs of an organization devoted to the improvement of the employees' economic relationship with the employer.

Inasmuch as the respondent through its supervisory employees' membership and participation in the activities of the D.G.W.U., continued its control and direction of that organization, the undersigned finds that respondent is responsible for their activities, and that they were acting for and in behalf of the respondent.

3. The contracts; closed-shop, check-off and piece-work rates.

On April 28, 1937, the day following the D.G.W.U.'s organizational meeting, Rose Todd took the membership cards to Mrs. Reed, president of the respondent, and stated to her the D.G.W.U. had been organized by the unanimous vote of the employees and represented a majority. Mrs. Reed assured her that the respondent would consider the matter. On May 6, 1937, the Group Chairmen of the D.G.W.U. met with Mrs. Reed and told her that they would want a contract covering hours, wages, and working conditions "which up to now have been satisfactory" and that they would like a closed shop. Mrs. Reed at once replied, "I understand that is very essential to industrial peace." The D.G.W.U. then stated that they wished to pay part of Todd's salary. Mrs. Reed, in agreeing, stated, "I do not feel at the present time that you [Todd] need give all of your time to the union." [47]

[47] From these facts it seems clear, and the undersigned finds, that recognition as the exclusive bargaining agent of the employees was accorded the D.G.W.U. almost as soon as it was organized, although no statement of recognition in writing appears until the contract between the respondent and the D.G.W.U. was signed on May 27, 1937.

[fol. 185] Tyler thereafter prepared a draft of the proposed agreement containing a closed-shop provision, which was approved by the Group Chairmen of the D.G.W.U. on the morning of May 27. Tyler read the contract aloud to Mrs. Reed and the other representatives of the respondent and urged that it be given prompt attention. Mrs. Reed replied: "I would like to have a little time to look over this agreement. However, I think it is very much in line — and there will possibly be one or two little changes." Later she added, "I think the only changes it will be necessary to make will be just legal phraseology — the spirit of this agreement is satisfactory." At the close of the conference it was agreed that Mrs. Reed and other representatives of the respondent would meet with Todd and Tyler at 3 o'clock that afternoon, and that Tyler would then report the outcome to the Group Chairmen of the D.G.W.U. at 3:30 o'clock.

The D.G.W.U. committee met in the afternoon as agreed. Its minutes disclose that Tyler reported that the respondent had proposed three or four modifications, the acceptance of which he recommended to the committee. One change suggested by the respondent was the insertion of a provision limiting membership on the D.G.W.U. bargaining committee to persons employed by the respondent for a period of at least a year immediately preceding election to such committee. Tyler explained to the committee the purpose of this provision was "to eliminate the possibility of someone getting on this committee who is not a true representative of the employees and who may be working here merely to act as a traitor to the company." The agreement as modified was then adopted by the committee and signed by the parties.

Subsequently, on June 22, 1937, a supplemental agreement was entered into between the D.G.W.U. and the respondent establishing minimum wages for time workers and minimum weekly guarantees to piece workers. At the request of Todd, Baty, factory manager, supplied her with a detailed statement of wage rates in the factory and on the basis of this information, Tyler prepared a contract which was accepted by the respondent without substantial change. Terms of the supplemental agreement were never submitted to the D.G.W.U. membership for approval before or after its execution, although it set the employees wages for a period of one year with a provision for an automatic extension. The D.G.W.U. demanded a minimum weekly wage of $16.50 for the respondent's lowest paid piece-work operators. Todd explained that the I.L.G.W.U. had announced that it was seeking a $16 weekly minimum in the garment industry, and she therefore thought it a good idea to improve a little on that minimum to defeat efforts of the I.L.G.W.U. to organize the respondent's employees. The respondent acceded to this demand. By its terms the original agreement of May 27, 1937, was to remain in effect for a period of 2 years while the expiration of the supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, was set for July 1, 1938, with a provision for automatic extension from year to year unless either party gave written notice to the other of its desire to terminate it. On June 2, 1939, the original agreement of May 27, 1937, was extended for a 2-year period without any modification except to provide for its automatic renewal. These two agreements have continued in effect without change.

In August or September 1937 the company agreed, at the request of the D.G.W.U., to a check-off of the monthly dues of the members. Employees signed a card prepared and distributed by the respondent agreeing to permit the dues to be checked-off at the end of each month. Pursuant to this agreement the respondent submits to the D.G.W.U. a memorandum showing the number of employees on the pay roll during the month and a check covering their dues. The D.G.W.U. issues no receipts, keeps no record of individual dues payments and has no means of knowing what individuals paid dues during any month. The General Chairman or Treasurer of the D.G.W.U. were unable to state at the hearing what proportion of each month an employee must work to entitle the D.G.W.U. to collect the [fol. 186] dues from the respondent. The checks turned over for each month subsequent to July 1937 range from about $250 to $325. The amount deducted from each employee appears on the employees' respective check stub. Although the D.G.W.U. has never furnished the respondent with a list of its members, every employee of the respondent, upon the assumption that all employees under the closed-shop are eligible to belong to the D.G.W.U., except the salesmen whose dues the company's decline to check off, authorized the checking off of the dues.

Soon after the D.G.W.U. was organized, the Group Chairmen, who composed its executive committee, appointed a committee to represent the D.G.W.U. in adjusting piece-work rates with the respondent. Some 600 to 800 of the respondent's 1300 employees were paid on a piece-work basis, so the procedure by which the piece-work rate is checked is concededly "the most important thing the individual operators have to bargain for with the company." The committee appointed consisted of Lulu Nichols, Josephine Spalito, and Rose Todd. Nichols is a supervisory employee and Spalito her assistant, both of whom are employed by the respondent for the purpose of establishing for it the piece-work prices paid the employees. Nichols was described, by Mrs. Hyde, as an "executive" of the respondent, and admittedly has final authority in setting piece-work prices in the first instance, and of adjusting subsequent complaints of operators that the price set is too low. Nichols' duty is thus described by Mrs. Reeves, who testified:

A. After a garment is designed, that particular garment is analyzed very thoroughly by Mrs. Nichols, who was a former piece-work operator; Josephine Spalito, a former piece-work operator, Rose Todd, a former piece-work operator. Prices are then discussed with the operator and also the instructor . . .

Q. If there is any employee who thinks the price is too low, what redress does she have?

A. She discusses it with the people who set the prices — Miss Todd, Mrs. Nichols, and her instructor . . .

Q. Who has complete charge of the making price rates after the complete report is made by this committee?

A. Mrs. Nichols.

Thus the same persons who set rates on behalf of the respondent in the first instance are also representatives of the D.G.W.U. for the purpose of protesting and negotiating in regard to those rates in behalf of the D.G.W.U. and the employees.

The respondent's immediate recognition of the D.G.W.U. and its ready acquiescence to a closed-shop and check-off through the medium of an organization which allowed it to retain control of the piece-work rates, when viewed in the light of respondent's persistent hostility to independently functioning unions clearly reveals its determination to prevent the employees from enjoying the rights conferred upon them by the Act, by forcing them to become members of an impotent collective bargaining agency to which, by its closed-shop and check-off, it had given assurances of financial stability.

[fol. 187] 4. Respondent's contribution of support to the D.G.W.U.

In addition to the holding of the organizational meeting of the D.G.W.U. on respondent's time [48] the succeeding three or four membership meetings were likewise held during working hours. Thereafter regular monthly meetings of the general membership were held after hours, but they continued to be held on the second and later the first floor of the building in which the factory is located. Prior to May 10, 1937, on which date the respondent took over the second floor under lease, the D.G.W.U. had obtained the permission of the landlord to use, without charge, the second floor as a meeting place. After May 10, 1937, the D.G.W.U. continued to meet on the second floor until April 1938 when the respondent remodeled a portion of the first floor to serve as an auditorium. From that time on, this became the meeting place of the D.G.W.U. Although the D.G.W.U. met on the property under lease by the respondent monthly from May 1937 on, it was not until November 1937 that the question of paying rental was raised. The first rental payment was made in April 1938, and consisted of $3 per meeting, held during the preceding twelve months. It is plain that prior to November 1937, rent-free use of the respondent's premises was contemplated and that the retroactive payment of rent was an afterthought. Rose Todd the General Chairman, twice announced in meetings of the D.G.W.U. that such use of the respondent's facilities was entirely proper. Meetings of the Group Chairmen, who composed the executive committee of the D.G.W.U., prior to May 1938, were held in the office of Beulah Spilsbury, in charge of the designing department and thereafter in the auditorium on the first floor. No rental was ever paid for the use of this property. [49]

The general meetings of the D.G.W.U. and the meetings of the Group Chairmen were called through the respondent's facilities, either by the use of the respondent's inter-departmental telephone system or by sending a so-called I.D.M. to each department of the factory through the respondent's regular messenger service. Announcement of the meeting over the respondent's factory telephone system was accomplished by Todd notifying the telephone operator to call each department. [50] Each section has a telephone, and it is the duty of the instructor or thread girl to answer the phone and convey any message that might be given either to the employees generally if it was a general meeting or to the specific employee in question if it was a Group Chairmen meeting. The inter-departmental telephones were not available to the employees generally and could only be used for calls by supervisory employees pertaining to official business. An I.D.M. is the respondent's term for inter-departmental memoranda. When Todd wished to call a meeting of the employees generally, or of the Group Chairmen, she regularly prepared a notice on the company's I.D.M. paper which was sent to each section of the factory by the respondent's messenger service. Upon the arrival of the I.D.M. in any section, it was the duty of the instructor or thread girl to read the I.D.M. and pass it to the operators in the section.

[fol. 188] Miss Todd also utilized the I.D.M. system for collecting assessments and sending instructions pertaining to D.G.W.U. business to the members on the respondent's

[49] The D.G.W.U.'s treasury book shows only two payments to the respondent for use of space. Both of these were for meetings of the entire membership, as may be seen from the testimony of McConaughey concerning the first of these payments and the fact that the second payment was for "for 13 meetings" one less than the number of general membership meetings as shown by the minutes of the D.G.W.U. to have taken place between the two payments.

[50] Todd testified: "In using our house telephone system in that manner, we have what we call floor girls or thread girls in each department. It is absolutely her duty to answer the phone and convey any message that might be given. That was what was done."

time. [51] The D.G.W.U. receives its mail at the factory through respondent's messengers and freely uses the factory bulletin board.

Piece work operators who served as Group Chairmen or officers were paid by the respondent for the time lost at work while attending D.G.W.U. business, the time workers being allowed to take time from work with no deductions from their pay.

Rose Todd was a full time employee of the respondent. While a request was made to Mrs. Reed immediately after the formation of the D.G.W.U. that it should pay part of her salary, she continued to receive a full salary of $130 a month from the respondent and in addition thereto received $65 from the D.G.W.U. Despite receiving her full salary from the respondent, the nature of the work given her by the respondent to perform permitted her to devote as much time as she desired to the D.G.W.U. business without deduction from her pay. Thus she carried on the business of the D.G.W.U., representing 1300 or more employees, during the respondent's normal working hours. Soon after formation of the D.G.W.U. at the respondent's Kansas City plant, Todd went to the respondent's temporary auxiliary plant at St. Joseph, Missouri, to organize the employees in that factory. She was absent from her employment about a half day without a salary deduction.

At a meeting on May 11, 1937, Rose Todd announced that "our (D.G.W.U.) work will be conducted" at a desk on the ninth floor of the plant and that she could be reached on union business at "any time necessary." Todd's desk was the D.G.W.U.'s only office. Its records were kept there in a file belonging to the respondent and its business [51] Miss Todd made the following announcement at a D.G.W.U. meeting in March 8, 1938: "I will tell you while we are all together how we will handle the payment of this . . . I would suggest that we appoint one person in each department, and I will appoint that person myself, and will send out an I.D.M. with instructions on how to collect this money. It is my idea as to what is put on that I.D.M.

"The name of the person who is to collect that money, and have that person list the names of each person in the department. When this is turned in, put the money in an envelope and return it to me between 11:00 and 12:45 on the 7th floor, or between 4:00 and 5:00 on the 10th floor, with the name of each member paid or unpaid, your name and section number, with the money."

was regularly transacted by employees who went there for that purpose. The check-off cards which were printed and distributed by the respondent were signed and turned in at this desk over a two weeks' period by employees who came there from all over the factory. Membership cards of those who were absent from the April 27, 1937, meeting, or of new members were signed and left at this desk. Grievances of members were reported to Todd during the working day and she attended to them during her hours of work. She collected money for the D.G.W.U. on the respondent's time and directed the D.G.W.U. representatives to do the same. When Todd left on her vacation in December 1937, she informed the Group Chairmen that a substitute, Miss Riddle, would be at the desk from 11 a. m. to 12:45 each day — much longer than the usual half hour lunch hour — to transact D.G.W.U. business.

The membership cards of the D.G.W.U. were mimeographed after working hours by employees in the respondent's circular department, on a machine owned by the respondent. Copies of the D.G.W.U. bylaws were produced [fol. 189] on a ditto machine belonging to the respondent. The D.G.W.U. owns no typewriter, and the secretary of the D.G.W.U. has often used a typewriter owned by the respondent for typing the minutes of the meetings of the D.G.W.U. and of the Group Chairmen.

It is apparent from the facts set forth above, and the undersigned finds, that the respondent has contributed a large measure of support to the D.G.W.U.

Summary and Conclusions.

From the foregoing facts, conclusions, and findings, it is clear that, notwithstanding the contention by the respondent and the D.G.W.U. that the D.G.W.U.'s formation was the result of the employees' own choice of a collective bargaining representative, the respondent has not permitted the employees to freely exercise that right of self-organization free from employer influence and domination.

Prior to the effective date of the act the respondent adopted a policy of opposition and hostility to labor organizations generally and to the I.L.G.W.U. specifically. In furtherance of this policy, the management made it plain to the employees that "loyalty" to the respondent was synonymous with the rejection of membership in any labor organization. To solidify its purpose, the respondent inspired and dominated the Loyalty League, which had for its primary purpose the frustration of the efforts of the I.L.G.W.U. to organize the employees. In 1937, when the I.L.G.W.U. announced a renewal of its efforts to organize the respondent's employees after the Act had been held constitutional, the respondent through the medium of its Loyalty League and supervisory employees formed the D.G.W.U. to prevent its employees from selecting any "outside" labor organization as their representative. It was the League's officers and representatives of the management, Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton who hired the attorney who planned the D.G.W.U. and wrote its by-laws. It was the League which borrowed $1,000 at the bank on the security of its members, including Rose Todd and other supervisory employees, with which to pay a retainer fee of $500 to the attorney, a part of which retainer was for advice and services in connection with the formation of the D.G.W.U. The meeting of April 27, 1937, at which the D.G.W.U. was formed was sponsored and financed by the League. Rose Todd, at the time President of the League, directed and dominated the course of the meeting. The employees had heard nothing of the formation of a labor union prior to the meeting, but under the stimulus and pressure provided by the respondent they emerged from that gathering with a labor organization of approximately 1300 members. It is axiomatic that a labor organization free from employer domination does not persuade employees to join its ranks so rapidly. Like the League, membership in the D.G.W.U. includes a large number of the respondent's supervisory employees whose presence inevitably prevents the organization from being free of the respondent's domination. Through Rose Todd, General Chairman of the D.G.W.U., the respondent has retained complete control of that organization.

The record conclusively shows that the respondent contributed substantial support to the D.G.W.U. The organization has no office or headquarters of any kind apart from the respondent's factory. Respondent's facilities have been freely used in carrying on the business of the D.G.W.U. and while the respondent contends it had no knowledge of the use of its various facilities, the practice has been so persistent and frequent that the undersigned is of the opinion that such a contention is impossible of belief and finds that the respondent had knowledge of these activities.

Rose Todd is allowed to take whatever time during working hours that is necessary for the handling of D.G.W.U. business without any deduction from her salary [fol. 190] and makes a practice of taking up its business at any time during the day. Also Todd, as President of the League and General Chairman of the D.G.W.U., was accorded almost complete freedom to roam through the factory engaging alternately in performing duties in connection with the factory's operation and handling matters relating first to the Loyalty League and then to the D.G.W.U. without interference or objection from the respondent. These facts demonstrate that the respondent has permitted and encouraged Todd to make use of the respondent's time in conducting the business of the D.G.W.U. This necessarily conveys to the employees of the respondent its approval of the League and the D.G.W.U. That the respondent lent encouragement and assistance to the D.G.W.U. becomes even more evident when its cooperative attitude toward the D.G.W.U. is compared with the hostility with which it met the efforts of the I.L.G.W.U. to organize the employees.

The completeness of the respondent's domination becomes more clear, as shown by the personnel of the D.G.W.U. committee for the adjustment of piece-work rates. Two of the three of this committee are persons employed by the respondent to set piece-work rates in the first instance and when one of these two, Lulu Nichols, is the respondent's authority on the finality of the rate, the result is that the respondent sits on both sides of the bargaining table and the aggrieved operators are left without any means of independent collective bargaining with regard to piece-work rates, ordinarily a matter jealously guarded for the promotion of the employees.

Negotiations between the respondent and the D.G.W.U. with respect to the provisions in the Articles of Agreement signed on May 27, 1937, were completed within a few hours, and signed on the same day it was submitted to the respondent. Despite Mrs. Reed's determined opposition to a closed-shop, she made no protest when the D.G.W.U. made such a proposal. She stated: "I understand that [a closed-shop] is very essential to industrial peace." The closed-shop was granted and membership in a labor organization of the respondent's choice became obligatory upon the employees, buttressed with a check-off of dues, to guarantee financial stability to the organization that the respondent initiated and thereafter controlled.

On all the evidence, the undersigned finds the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D.G.W.U. and contributed support thereto, and that the respondent thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

The D.G.W.U. is not and never has been the lawful representative of the respondent's employees for the purpose of collective bargaining in regard to the rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, and other conditions of employment. Under these circumstances, the undersigned finds that the contract, supplemental wage agreement, any extension, renewal, modification or supplement thereof, and any superseding contract between the respondent and the D.G.W.U. are void and of no effect. Independent of this finding of the invalidity of the above mentioned contracts, the closed-shop provision is invalid, having been made with a labor organization established, maintained, and assisted by unfair labor practices, therefore, the closed-shop provision does not fall within the proviso of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

The undersigned further finds that the respondent, by entering into a contract containing a closed-shop provision with the D.G.W.U., discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure and other terms of employment of its employees, thereby encouraging membership in the D.G.W.U. and discouraging membership in the I.L.G.W.U., and that it thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed them in Section 7 of the Act.

[fol. 191] In addition, the undersigned concludes and finds that the respondent, by using the dominated Loyalty League to impede and prevent the employees free choice of labor organization, by permitting the circulation and requesting the employees to sign the pledge of March 2, 1937, and by the speech of Mrs. Reed at the March 18, 1937 meeting, has in these and other respects set forth above interfered with, restrained, and coerced the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

E. The Alleged Discharges.

The amended complaint alleges that the respondent discharged Sylvia Hull on or about April 23, 1937, and May Fike on or about April 26, 1937, and thereafter refused to reinstate them because they had joined and assisted the I.L.G.W.U.

Sylvia Hull was employed as a sewing machine operator by the respondent, with one interruption of 7 months for a period of 8 years. She was originally employed in the spring of 1928 and her employment was terminated on April 23, 1937. Hull became a member of the I.L.G.W.U. on March 23, 1937, and on April 22, 1937, it was publicly announced in a Kansas City newspaper that she had been selected by the I.L.G.W.U. to represent the respondent's employees at a convention of that organization.

The undersigned has previously described the anti-union demonstration by employees against Hull on the morning of April 23, 1937, which the undersigned found was condoned and encouraged by the respondent. During the demonstration, Mrs. Hyde, respondent's employment manager, removed Hull from her machine and told her that she would have to go home. Hull replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day. Hyde took her employee identification card which was necessary for admission to the factory. When Hull asked how she would get back into the plant, Hyde told her that she would come down to the door and admit her. At the same time, Mrs. Hyde took the telephone number of a neighbor, through whom Hull had stated she could be reached and agreed to call her, requesting Hull to get in touch with respondent if she did not receive a call inasmuch as the telephone number that Hull left was that of a neighbor. Hull thereupon left the plant. Hyde testified that the next morning and on another occasion she attempted to reach Hull through the number Hull had given her in order to recall her to work, but was unable to reach Hull and that since that time, she has never applied for reinstatement. Hull did not testify and the record is silent as to whether she ever received Hyde's message which it is found Hyde attempted to deliver.

Respondent contends that Hull voluntarily left the employ of the respondent. This contention was based on Hull's statement made when a number of the anti-union demonstrators demanded that she go home, and also from the fact that she did not seek to return. However, when Mrs. Hyde told her she would have to leave the plant, Hull refused to quit her employment but agreed to go home for the day. These facts plainly show that Hull did not voluntarily give up her position with the respondent and only acquiesced in a one day lay off under pressure from the respondent. Furthermore, from the fact that Hyde agreed to call her indicates that the respondent did not consider Hull's statement a resignation of her employment.

The undersigned finds that Sylvia Hull did not voluntarily leave the employment of the respondent but that she was temporarily laid off by the respondent because of her membership in and activity on behalf of the I.L.G.W.U. The undersigned therefore finds that the respondent discriminated in the regard to her tenure of employment, thereby discouraging membership in the I.L.G.W.U. and interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees [fol. 192] in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act. The undersigned further finds that under all the circumstances, the respondent's efforts to communicate with Hull as to her lay off was equivalent to an offer of reinstatement and the respondent has not discriminatorily refused to reinstate her within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

May Fike was employed by the respondent sometime in 1927 and was, except for a 2 year period in 1931 and 1932, employed continuously until May 1937 when she left, at her request on a vacation. May Fike joined the I.L.G.W.U.

on March 15, 1937. The fact that Fike was a member of the I.L.G.W.U. was not known to the respondent, nor that she was the sister of Fern Sigler, who was excluded from the factory in April 23, 1937, as a result of a demonstration, hereinbefore referred to.

Fike's testimony as to conversations with respondent's agents and an alleged discriminatory lay off, if credited, provides a foundation which would afford an inference that her relationship to Sigler and her union membership was in part at least a motivating reason for the refusal of the respondent to reemploy her after she left on a vacation which was unauthorized. The undersigned does not credit this testimony of Fike. [52]

Sometime in the latter part of April, Fike advised her instructor that she desired to take a vacation. The instructor referred Fike to Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager. Fike explained to Hyde that she wanted the privilege of taking her vacation at a time other than a period set for all of the operators in the section, because her husband was having a vacation at that particular time. It is undenied that it is the customary practice of the respondent to grant vacations to the operators in a section at the same time. Hyde advised Fike that if she did take her vacation, her employment would be terminated and her return to work would depend upon whether there was any work for her. Fike left on her vacation and upon her return called Hyde and was advised that there was no work for her at that time and to call later. Fike called on several occasions thereafter and was advised by Hyde that there was no work available and to call later. On the last occasion Hyde told Fike that she would call her when the respondent needed her, and as far as the record indicates Fike, up to July 1939, had not been called for work.

[52] The undersigned is not unmindful of the fact that Fike worked on the same floor with Sigler and was present during the demonstration of April 23, 1937, nor of the fact that Fike testified that Pearl Atchison, her instructor, spoke to her after the demonstration and inquired if she were a member of the I.L.G.W.U., warning Fike that she was in danger of losing her job because of the situation. Neither does the undersigned believe that there was any discrimination in Fike's lay off shortly thereafter, it appearing that an error was made in the selection of an operator for lay off and she was immediately returned to work. The undersigned is convinced from all the circumstances, that Fike's testimony with respect to the incidents occurring before she took her vacation were after-thoughts and an attempt by her to make it appear that the respondent's refusal to reinstate her after an unauthorized vacation was discriminatory.

Respondent defends the termination of Fike's employment on the grounds that she left voluntarily on April 30, 1937, after being told that if she took her vacation at that time her employment would be terminated. The undersigned is of the opinion that Fike was so advised by Hyde at the time she insisted on leaving on her vacation, and the undersigned finds that May Fike left her work voluntarily, [fol. 193] on April 30, 1937, terminating her employment with the respondent.

The undersigned finds that May Fike was not discharged because of relationship to Sigler or her membership in the Union. The undersigned further finds that, in view of all the circumstances, there is no substantial evidence to indicate that she was refused reinstatement for these reasons.

IV. The Effect of the Unfair Labor Practices Upon Commerce.

The undersigned finds that the activities of the respondent set forth in Section III above, occurring in connection with the operations of the respondent described in Section I above, have a close, intimate and substantial relation to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several States and tend to lead to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

V. The Remedy.

Since it has been found that the respondent has engaged in certain unfair labor practices, the undersigned will recommend that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action designed to effectuate the policies of the Act.

The undersigned, having found that the respondent has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D.G.W.U. and contributed support to it, in order to effectuate the policies of the Act and free the employees of the respondent from such domination and interference and the effects thereof, which constitute a continuing obstacle to the exercise by the employees of the rights guaranteed them by the Act, will recommend that the respondent withdraw all recognition from the D.G.W.U. as the representative of any of the respondent's employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, and other conditions of employment, and completely to disestablish it as such representative. [53]

The undersigned, having also found that the respondent entered into an unlawful contract with the D.G.W.U. providing for a closed-shop, and in addition, agreed to the deduction of D.G.W.U. dues from the employees' wages as an integral part of the respondent's campaign to deny the employees the rights guaranteed them in the Act, will recommend that the respondent cease and desist from giving effect to the contract of May 21, 1937, and to the supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification or supplement thereof, or any superseding contract or agreement which may now be in force. Nothing in this recommendation should be taken, however, to require the respondent to vary those wages, hours, and other substantive features of its relations with the employees themselves, if any, which the respondent established in the performance of such contracts as extended, renewed, modified, supplemented and superseded. [54] The undersigned will also recommend that the respondent cease and desist from giving effect to any check-off agreement with the D.G.W.U. The undersigned is of the opinion that, under the circumstances of this case, the respondent should be required to reimburse each employee for any amounts which the respondent has deducted from the wages of the employee for dues and assessments in the D.G.W.U. The respondent concluded a closed-shop contract with the D.G.W.U., a dominated organization, thus compelling its employees to become and remain members of the illegal organization. The check-off agreement, a [fol. 194] device by which the respondent assured the financial stability of the dominated organization, could, as practiced, no more be avoided by the employees than could the compulsory membership requirement. The undersigned finds that the monies thus deducted from the wages of the employees constituted the price of retaining their jobs, a price coerced from them for respondent's purpose of supporting and maintaining the organization which respondent had dominated in order to thwart bona fide representation. The undersigned further finds that, as a result of the imposition of the illegal closed-shop and check-off requirements, the employees suffered a definite loss and deprivation of wages equal to the amounts exacted from them for illegal purposes. The undersigned also finds that in these circumstances, the propriety of a recommendation requiring reimbursement of dues is particularly applicable, if the unfair labor practices are to be fully remedied and the purposes and policies of the Act are to be completely effectuated by restoration of the status quo. Hence, the undersigned will recommend that respondent reimburse its former and present employees for the amounts deducted from their wages for dues and assessments in the D.G.W.U. [55]

The undersigned has found that the respondent has discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of Sylvia Hull because of her membership in and activities on behalf of the I.L.G.W.U. The undersigned also found that Sylvia Hull never communicated with the respondent after she left the plant on April 23, and that the respondent made bona-fide but unsuccessful efforts to communicate with her to offer her reinstatement. Further, that under all the circumstances, the respondent's action was equivalent to an offer of reinstatement which Hull, by her failure to communicate with the respondent after instructions to do so, refused to accept. The undersigned will therefore recommend that the customary order of reinstatement be withheld, and that the respondent not be required to make Hull whole for any loss of pay incurred because of the discrimination against her on April 23, 1937.

The respondent's entire course of conduct, including its many and varied forms of interference, restraint, and Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc., No. 413, October term, 1937, the relief which the statute empowers the Board to grant is to be adapted to the situation which calls for redress."

coercion, its domination and support of the D.G.W.U., and its discriminatory discharge of Sylvia Hull discloses a fixed purpose on the part of respondent to defeat self-organization and its objects. Because of the respondent's unlawful conduct in the past and its underlying purpose, the undersigned is convinced that there is a real danger of the respondent engaging in other related unfair labor practices proscribed by the Act in the future. The preventative purpose of the Act will be thwarted unless the undersigned's recommendation is coextensive with the threat. In order, therefore, to make effective the interdependent guarantees of Section 7 of the Act, to prevent a recurrence of unfair labor practices, and thereby to minimize strife which burdens and obstructs commerce, and thus effectuate the policies of the Act, the undersigned will recommend that the respondent cease and desist from in any manner infringing the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

The undersigned also has found that the respondent has not discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike, and therefore will recommend that the complaint be dismissed as to May Fike.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact and upon the entire record in the case, the undersigned makes the following:

[fol. 195] Conclusions of Law

1. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Donnelly Garment Workers Union are labor organizations within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of the Act.

2. By dominating and interfering with the formation and administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union and contributing support to it, the respondent has engaged and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the Act.

3. By discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure and terms and conditions of employment of Sylvia Hull and other employees, thereby encouraging membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and discouraging membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the respondent has engaged and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

4. By interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act, the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of the Act.

5. The aforesaid unfair labor practices are unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act.

6. The respondent has not discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike, within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act. The respondent has not violated Section 8 (3) of the Act by refusing to reinstate Sylvia Hull.

Recommendations.

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, the undersigned recommends that the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company (Kansas City, Missouri) and its officers, agents, successors, and assigns, shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Dominating or interfering with the formation and administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union or the formation or administration of any other labor organization of its employees, or from contributing support to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees;

(b) Giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification, or supplement thereof, or to any superseding contract or agreement which may now be in force with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and from giving effect to its check-off agreement with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

(c) Discouraging membership in International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees, or encouraging membership in Donnelly

Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees, by laying off any of its employees, or in any manner discriminating in regard to their hire and tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment;

[fol. 196] (d) Dominating, controlling, and using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain, and coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act;

(e) In any other manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of the right of self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purposes of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

2. Take the following affirmative action which the undersigned finds will effectuate the policies of the Act:

(a) Withdraw all recognition from Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employement, or other conditions of employment, and completely disestablish Donnelly Garment Workers as such representative;

(b) Reimburse its former and present employees for all dues and assessments, if any, which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

(c) Post immediately in conspicuous places on every floor throughout the respondent's Kansas City factory, and maintain for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days, notices to its employees stating: (1) that the respondent will not engage in the conduct from which it is recommended that it cease and desist in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) hereof; (2) that it will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraph 2 (a) and (b) hereof; and (3) that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and that the respondent will not in any manner discriminate against any employee because of membership or activity in such organization.

Notify the Executive Secretary of the Board in writing within ten (10) days of the receipt of this Intermediate Report what steps the respondent has taken to comply herewith.

It is further recommended that the complaint be dismissed insofar as it alleges that the respondent discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike.

It is further recommended that unless on or before ten (10) days from the date of the receipt of this Intermediate Report, the respondent notifies said Executive Secretary in writing that it will comply with the foregoing recommendations, the National Labor Relations Board issue an order requiring the respondent to take the action aforesaid.

As provided in Section 37 of Article II of the Rules and Regulations of the National Labor Relations Board — Series 2, as amended, effective October 28, 1942 — any party may within fifteen (15) days from the date hereof, pursuant to Section 37 of Article II of said Rules and Regulations, file with the Board, Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C., an original and four copies of a statement in writing setting forth such exceptions to the Intermediate Report or to any other part of the record or proceeding [fol. 197] (including rulings upon all motions or objections) as he relies upon, together with the original and four copies of a brief in support thereof. As further provided in said Section 37, should any party desire permission to argue orally before the Board, request therefor must be made in writing to the Board within ten (10) days from the date hereof.

Before the National Labor Relations Board

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company, Respondent,
and
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract, Intervener.

Case No. C-1382

Comes now the above named respondent Donnelly Garment Company and, reserving the right to file such further objections and exceptions as it may be lawfully entitled to make or save, files this its statement of exceptions and objects and excepts to the Intermediate Report of the Trial Examiner herein (dated November 27, 1942), and to the findings, statements, inferences, conclusions and recommendations contained therein; to the acts and rulings of the Trial Examiner and of the National Relations Board in said case and in the hearings thereof; to the conduct of said proceedings and to the various acts and rulings of the Board and Trial Examiner in connection therewith, as follows, to-wit:

[fol. 208] 1.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner therein, for the reason that same thwart and violate the prime purpose and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and deny to respondent and its employees the rights conferred by said Act and particularly the rights and benefits of collective bargaining conferred by said Act, in that the evidence clearly and overwhelmingly shows that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union through its executive committee was at all times the free choice of a majority (in fact 100%) of respondent's working employees as their bargaining agency for purposes of collective bargaining and by reason of which the contracts between respondent and that union were valid, and the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner being contrary thereto are, and any order of the Board in accordance therewith would be, in contravention of the National Labor Relations Act and illegal.

2.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the conclusions and recommendations therein contained are unsupported by the evidence and by the findings of fact; and the findings of fact, upon which the recommendations of the Trial Examiner purport to be based, are unsupported by the evidence.

3.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that said report is based upon a proceeding which is invalid, void, and in violation of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 209]

4.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that said report denies respondent and all of its employees the right of collective bargaining guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act.

5.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner failed and refused to consider, find and recommend that this proceeding be dismissed, in whole or in part, for each and all of the reasons specified in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 of Part A of Respondent's Answer (Board's Exhibit No. 1-JJJ) and by adoption and reference contained in respondent's answer to amended complaint (Board's Exhibit No. 1-LLLL).

6.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner failed and refused to consider, find and report that this proceeding be dismissed for each and all of the reasons specified in Part B of the Amended Answer, Exhibit No. 1-JJJ, and by adoption and reference contained in Respondent's Answer to Amended Complaint, Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

7.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner failed and refused to investigate, by secret election or otherwise, the true representatives of respondent's employees and so report and certify the same in accordance with the petition contained in Part C of the Amended Answer, Exhibit No. 1-JJJ, and by adoption and reference contained in Respondent's Answer to Amended Complaint, Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

[fol. 210]

8.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the essential findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations, therein contained, adverse to respondent, are not the result of the exercise of a judicial consideration of material and relevant facts in evidence but are the result of partisanship, prejudice, abuse of discretion, and a complete disregard of the evidence; and such findings, conclusions and recommendations are arbitrary, capricious, oppressive and contrary to the law and the evidence.

9.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the recommendations therein purport to be based upon findings of fact and conclusions of law which constitute neither findings of fact nor conclusions of law but an intermingling of argument, conjecture, unfair and unreasonable inferences, suspicion, surmise, and immaterial and irrelevant evidence.

10.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the essential findings therein contained, adverse to respondent, are based on purported evidence which is irrelevant, immaterial and insufficient as a basis for such findings, and on purported facts and circumstances which could not legally support a decision of the Board adverse to respondent.

11.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the essential findings therein contained, adverse to the respondent, are based on purported evidence which is incompetent as a basis for such report or the findings, conclusions, or recommendations contained therein.

[fol. 211]

12.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that each and every finding of fact adverse to respondent, and the conclusions and recommendations purported to be based thereon, is contrary to the law and the evidence, beyond the pleadings, the scope thereof, and the issues made thereby, and neither relevant nor germane thereto.

13.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner consistently disregarded the obligation to weigh and consider all the evidence, and ignored the legal doctrine that the burden of proof was cast upon the Board to establish the charges as alleged by a fair preponderance of the evidence.

14.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that said report and the several findings of fact and conclusions therein contained are without support in the evidence and could not lawfully influence or sustain a decision by the Board in conformity with the said report.

15.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the findings of fact, adverse to respondent, and the conclusions and recommendations purported to be based thereon, are based wholly or substantially upon alleged acts occurring prior to July 5, 1935, with the result that respondent is convicted of violation of the National Labor Relations Act by reason of alleged acts occurring prior to the effective date thereof; and, which, if they occurred, were in all respects lawful and innocent.

[fol. 212] 16.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner held respondent to be bound by the alleged acts, omissions and declarations of employees, although no authority was shown for such alleged acts, omissions or declarations and the latter were not shown to be in the course or within the scope of any employment by respondent and the undisputed evidence negatived such authority and such course and scope.

17.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report for the reason that the Trial Examiner held respondent to be bound by the alleged acts, omissions and declarations of instructors and other employees, although the undisputed evidence disclosed that instructors had no authority to hire, discipline or discharge, were not supervisory employees, and were not authorized to commit the alleged acts, omissions or declarations, and the said alleged acts, omissions or declarations were not shown to be in the course of or within the scope of their employment, nor in any way binding upon respondent.

18.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings of fact and conclusions of the Trial Examiner contained therein adverse to respondent, because the Trial Examiner has failed to find and conclude that the respondent has not dominated or interfered with the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and has not contributed support to said Union, and has failed to find and conclude that the respondent did not discriminate against the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or its members or discourage membership therein, and has failed to find and conclude that respondent did not inter-
[fol. 213] fere with, restrain or coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and has failed to find and conclude that the respondent did not dominate, control, interfere with, or act through the Donnelly Loyalty League in any way, and has failed to find and conclude that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not a successor, of, or connected with, the Donnelly Loyalty League, and that the Donnelly Loyalty League did not dominate or interfere in the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and has failed to find and conclude that respondent is not guilty of any of the unfair labor practices charged in the amended complaint and has failed to dismiss or recommend the dismissal of each and all of said charges against respondent, and because the Trial Examiner has failed to find, state or consider material, relevant and uncontradicted facts and evidence favorable to respondent and pertinent to the findings and conclusions made by the Trial Examiner, but has based his said findings and conclusions on incompetent and detached portions of the evidence deemed by the Examiner to be unfavorable to the respondent, and upon conjecture and improper inferences not warranted by the evidence.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations therein contained adverse to respondent for the reason that the evidence and offers of proof herein (including the testimony of offered testimony of every member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union) show that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed and joined by one hundred per cent of the working employees of respondent of their own free will and accord without any in[fol. 214] fluence, domination, coercion or interference by respondent, and that they voluntarily chose said Union and its Executive Committee to represent them for the purpose of collective bargaining with respondent and have at all times desired to be so represented, and all the direct evidence was to the effect that none of respondent's executives or supervisory employees with power to hire, discharge or discipline, attempted to dominate, coerce, restrain or interfere in any way with respondent's employees in regard to their union membership or affiliations, and the findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner that respondent has violated Sections 8 (1), 8 (2), 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act are made in the face of this uncontradicted showing, and said findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner are contrary to the letter and spirit of the National Labor Relations Act in that they deny to respondent's employees the right to bargain with respondent through representatives of their own choosing and require the violation by respondent of the National Labor Relations Act by refusing to bargain with the representatives of a majority of its employees, and if said conclusions and recommendations are upheld by the Board, the Board, instead of endorsing the Act, will be in the position of violating, and requiring the respondent to violate, both the letter and the spirit of the Act.

20.

Respondent excepts to the findings of the Trial Examiner and each of them because said Examiner and/or the National Labor Relations Board did not investigate and certify, although so requested, the exclusive representatives of all of respondent's employees for the purposes of collective bargaining in accordance with Section 9, subsection c of the National Labor Relations Act prior to the institution and/or hearing of the present proceedings.

21.

[fol. 215] Respondent excepts to the conclusions of the Trial Examiner and each of them because said Examiner and/or the National Labor Relations Board did not investigate and certify, although so requested, the exclusive representatives of all of respondent's employees for the purposes of collective bargaining in accordance with Section 9, subsection c of the National Labor Relations Act prior to the institution and/or hearing of the present proceedings.

22.

Respondent excepts to the recommendations of the Trial Examiner and each of them because said Examiner and/or the National Labor Relations Board did not investigate and certify, although so requested, the exclusive representatives of all of respondent's employees for the purposes of collective bargaining in accordance with Section 9, subsection c of the National Labor Relations Act prior to the institution and/or hearing of the present proceedings.

23.

Respondent excepts to the findings of the Trial Examiner and each of them because the said findings are the result of an illegal, partisan and unfair proceeding in violation of the rights secured to respondent under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

24.

Respondent excepts to the conclusions of the Trial Examiner and each of them because the said conclusions are the result of an illegal, partisan and unfair proceeding in violation of the rights secured to respondent under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

25.

[fol. 216] Respondent excepts to the recommendations of the Trial Examiner and each of them because the said recommendations are the result of an illegal, partisan and unfair proceeding in violation of the rights secured to respondent under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

26.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings, conclusions and recommendations therein, for the reason that the evidence is so overwhelmingly contrary to most of said findings and to all of said conclusions, as to show that the Trial Examiner either did not consider all the evidence or was so biased and prejudiced against respondent that he intended to and did make his findings, conclusions and recommendations against respondent notwithstanding that he knew that same were contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence, whereby, in either event, respondent has been and is denied a fair hearing herein and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law, in contravention of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

27.

Respondent excepts to the several findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner, for the reason that it is the duty and obligation of the Board to prove its charges by a fair preponderance of the evidence and is the duty of the Trial Examiner (and the Board) to make findings based on a fair preponderance of the evidence and the Trial Examiner has violated his duty in this respect and has made essential findings which are not only not supported or proved by a fair preponderance of the evidence but are wholly contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence.

28.

[fol. 217] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings, conclusions and recommendations therein, for the reason that the Trial Examiner's references therein to the testimony in most instances are so vague and uncertain that the respondent and the Board cannot determine upon what evidence the Trial Examiner is basing his said findings and conclusions and cannot determine what evidence was in the mind of the Trial Examiner, whereby respondent is and will be deprived of a fair trial and review herein.

29.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the failure and refusal [to] the trial Examiner to dismiss the Amended Complaint herein, for the reason that the Amended Complaint is not authorized by the amended charge upon which it purports to be based.

30.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report of the Trial Examiner and to the finding, statement and conclusion therein contained on page 2 that "full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues was afforded all parties" at the hearing held beginning June 5 and ending July 15, 1939, for the reason that same is not supported by the record, but on the contrary the record shows that respondent was repeatedly wrongfully denied opportunity to be heard and to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues and that the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was likewise denied such rights and opportunity, whereby respondent was denied a fair trial herein.

31.

[fol. 218] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the finding, statement and conclusion contained therein at page 8 that "full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues was afforded all of the parties", at the hearing held beginning July 6 and ending September 17, 1942, for the reason that same is not supported by the record, but on the contrary the record shows that respondent was repeatedly wrongfully denied opportunity to be heard and to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues and that the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was likewise denied such rights and opportunity, whereby respondent was denied a fair trial herein.

32.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the findings, statements and conclusions contained therein on pages 9 and 10 that "the undersigned accorded the respondent and the D.G.W.U. an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected at the prior hearing and permitted Nell Quinlan Reed, the respondent's president, * * * to testify in the further hearing upon all the issues set forth in the pleadings", for the reason that said findings, statements and conclusions are not supported by the record, but on the contrary the record shows that the respondent and the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were repeatedly wrongfully denied the opportunity and right to introduce competent and material evidence rejected at the prior hearing, and that the Trial Examiner refused to permit Nell Quinlan Reed to testify at the hearing beginning July 6, 1942 and ending September 17, 1942 upon many of the issues set forth in the pleadings and in addi-[fol. 219] tion thereto, struck out, over the objection of respondent, a large part of the testimony of said witness after same had been given, whereby respondent was denied a fair trial.

33.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the finding, statement and conclusion contained therein on Page 10, that "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, affiliated with American Federation of Labor, is a labor organization admitting to membership the factory employees of the respondent", for the reason that same is not supported by the evidence or the record herein.

34.

Respondent excepts to the finding, statement and conclusion of the Trial Examiner contained on page 10 of the Intermediate Report, that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union "admits to membership all employees of the respondent", for the reason that same is not supported by the evidence or the record herein.

35.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, A, thereof under the heading "Respondent's responsibility for the activities of various employees" and the subheadings numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, appearing at pages 11 to 17 inclusive of the Intermediate Report, including the footnotes, and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to wit:

[fol. 220] The first paragraph under subheading "1. Instructors and thread girls" except the last two sentences thereof, page 11; the last sentence in the second paragraph under said subheading 1, p. 11; the footnote numbered 17 beginning at the bottom of page 11 and ending on page 12; the second and third paragraphs on page 12 of the Intermediate Report and footnote 18; the last paragraph beginning on page 12 and continuing on page 13; the first full paragraph on page 13 and the first two sentences of footnote 19 on page 13; the last paragraph beginning on page 13 and ending on page 14 and the first sentence of footnote 20 on page 14; the first paragraph under subheading "2. Rose Todd" except the third sentence thereof, p. 14; the second paragraph under said subheading 2 beginning on page 14 and ending on page 15 except the statement therein that "she left her employment with the respondent in 1931 and for about 1 year worked for the Gernes Garment Company" and excepting the last sentence of said paragraph; the first paragraph beginning on page 15; the second paragraph beginning on page 15; the third paragraph beginning on page 15; the last paragraph beginning on page 15 and ending on page 16; the first paragraph beginning on page 16, being the last paragraph of said subheading 2; the following portions of the first paragraph under subheading "3. Hobart Atherton" beginning on page 16 and ending on page 17, to wit, the third sentence and the last two sentences thereof; the last paragraph under said subheading 3, being the first paragraph beginning on page 17, and footnote 23; the first paragraph under subheading "4. Other supervisory employees" on page 17; the second paragraph under said subheading 4, being the last [fol. 221] paragraph under said subheading, and footnote 24 (p. 17);

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, do not show or support a finding or conclusion, that the instructors, Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton or the various employees referred to in subparagraph 4, p. 17, or any of them, were supervisory employees of respondent or represented "the management" or were acting for or in behalf of the management with respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or with respect to any of the matters referred to in said Part III, A, or that respondent held said employees, or any of them, out to its employees as representatives of the management or as acting for the management with respect to any of such matters, or that the employees regarded or had reason to regard said employees or any of them as representatives of the management or as acting on behalf of the management with respect to any of such matters, or occupied a close or confidential position with respondent, or that said alleged supervisory employees exerted any pressure or coercion on the employees or interfered in any way with their free choice of labor affiliations or that respondent's employees were coerced, influenced or interfered with by any of said alleged supervisory employees with respect to any of said matters; because said findings, statements and conclusions, and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact [fol. 222] therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inference or surmise, and not based on any substantial; competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence, and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

36.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, B, thereof (pages 17-20 incl.) under the heading "Events prior to the effective date of the Act", for the reason that same and each of same are irrelevant and immaterial to any of the issues herein, are based upon alleged acts alleged to have occurred prior to the passage [fol. 223] of the National Labor Relations Act, make said Act an ex post facto law, and give a retroactive effect thereto, constitute the basis for the findings against respondent and a conviction of respondent for acts found to have been done when same were not prohibited by said Act or any other law, whereby respondent is denied due process of law and a fair trial in contravention of the Constitution of the United States and the law of the land.

Respondent further excepts to the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, B, of the Intermediate Report and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to-wit:

The last three sentences of the first paragraph thereof, page 17; the second paragraph thereof, being the first paragraph on page 18; the second paragraph on page 18; the third paragraph on page 18, except the second sentence and the last two sentences thereof; the fourth paragraph on page 18, excepting the last sentence thereof; the last paragraph on page 18; the first paragraph on page 19, except the statement of the quotation contained in the two indented paragraphs in the middle thereof; the last paragraph on page 19; the first paragraph on page 20 and the first sentence of footnote 28; the last two sentences of the second paragraph on page 20; the third paragraph on page 20; the fourth paragraph being the last paragraph on page 20;

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence; or by any findings supported by the evidence; [fol. 234] are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inference or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, C, thereof (pages 21 to 25 incl.) under the heading "Events prior to April 27, 1937; interference, restraint, and coercion", particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to-wit:

The first, second and fourth sentences of the first paragraph on page 21; the second sentence and the last sentence of the third paragraph from the bottom on page 21; the second sentence of the second paragraph from the bottom on page 21; the last paragraph on page 21 and concluding on page 22; the first full paragraph on page 22, and footnote 32 on said page; the last paragraph beginning on page 22 and concluding on page 23, and footnote 33 except the first sentence thereof; the first full paragraph beginning on page 23 and concluded on page 24, except the following portion thereof, to-wit, "Mrs. Reed further told the employees that she had 'had lots of nice things happen to me in my lifetime but I have never had anything that made made so proud and so happy' as the receipt of the "loyalty" pledge in which the employees unanimously agreed to refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. While Mrs. Reed sought to appear as a disinterested defender of the respondent's employees in the exercise of their right to join or not to join a labor organization, * * *"; the first full paragraph beginning on page 24; the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, eleventh, thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth sentences of the last full paragraph beginning on page 24 and concluded on page 25, and footnote 36, except the first sentence thereof; the word [fol. 226] "subjected" in the first sentence of the first full paragraph on page 25 and the remainder of said paragraph; the second full paragraph on page 25; the last paragraph on page 25 and footnote 39 except the first sentence of said footnote;

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements [fol. 227] or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, under the heading "Domination and interference with the formation and administration of the D.G.W.U. and contribution of support; interference, restraint, and coercion", and to subheading "1. The formation of the D.G.W.U." (pages 26 to 28 incl.), and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to-wit:

The first sentence of the first paragraph on page 26; the second paragraph on page 26; the third paragraph beginning on page 26 and concluded on page 27, except the first sentence thereof; footnote 42 on page 26; the statement in the first full paragraph beginning on page 27 and concluded on page 28 that it was decided and voted to form the D.G.W.U. "without any discussion"; footnote 43 except the first sentence thereof; the first full paragraph beginning on page 28, being the only paragraph on said page; the following portions of footnote 44: the second, third, fourth, seventh and last sentences of said footnote 44;

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges [fol. 228] against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

[fol. 229] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, thereof, under the subheading "2. Membership and participation by other supervisors in the D.G.W.U." thereof, (pages 29 to 30 incl.), and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to wit:

> The first three sentences of the first paragraph on page 29, and footnote 45 on said page; the first full paragraph on page 30; the second full paragraph on page 30; the last paragraph on page 30 under said subheading;

for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmises, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges al- [fol. 230] leged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

40.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all of the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, thereof, under the subheading "3. The contracts; closed-shop, check-off and piece-work rates" thereof, (pages 30 to 32 incl.), and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to-wit:

> The statements, findings and conclusions in the third paragraph beginning on page 31, that the contract prepared by Tyler "was accepted by the respondent without substantial change"; that the terms of the supplemental agreement were not submitted to the D.G.W.U. membership for approval before or after its execution; and that Rose Todd thought it a good idea to improve a little on the minimum of $16.00 "to defeat efforts of the I.L.G.W.U. to organize the respondent's employees"; the last paragraph beginning on page 31 and concluded on page 32, except the first two sentences thereof; the fourth sentence of the first full paragraph beginning [fol. 231] on page 32; the last two paragraphs on page 32;

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent, and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

41.

[fol. 232] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, under the subheading "[redacted]. Respondent's contribution of support to the D.G.W. U." thereof (pages 33 to 35 incl.), and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to wit:

The first paragraph on page 33, except the second, third and fourth sentences thereof, and footnote 49; the second paragraph on page 33; the first paragraph on page 34; the second paragraph on page 34; the third paragraph on page 34; the fourth paragraph on page 34; the last paragraph of said subheading 4, appearing on page 35;

for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not sup- [fol. 233] port a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

42.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in and under the heading "Summary and conclusions" beginning on page 35 and ending on page 37, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but [fol. 234] are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

43.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all of the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, E, under the heading "The alleged discharges," beginning on page 37 and ending on page 39, and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to wit:

The first five sentences of the third paragraph thereof on page 37; the fourth paragraph thereof on page 37, except the first sentence of said fourth paragraph; the fifth paragraph thereof being the last paragraph beginning on page 37 and concluded on page 38, except the last sentence thereof; the second full paragraph thereof be- [fol. 235] ginning on page 38, except the last sentence thereof;

for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

44.

[fol. 236] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part IV thereof, on page 39, under the heading "The effect of the unfair labor practices upon commerce," that respondent engaged in the activities set forth in Section III of the Intermediate Report, for the reason that same are not supported by the evidence or by any inferences to be drawn therefrom, and for each and all the reasons heretofore set forth under respondent's exceptions to the findings, statements and conclusions set forth in said Section III. Respondent does not dispute that it was engaged in interstate commerce as set forth in the stipulation concerning said matter filed in this proceeding.

45.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part V thereof, under the heading "The remedy," beginning on page 39 and ending on page 40, and particularly those contained in the following portions thereof, to wit:

The first, second, third and fifth paragraphs thereof; for each and all the following reasons, to wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not in accordance with the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, but are contrary thereto, and because same are not conclusive to effectuate the policies and purposes of said Act but have the contrary effect; because they are not supported or justified by the evidence or by any findings supported by the evidence; are immaterial and irrele-
[fol. 237] vant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against respondent or support any of the Trial Examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to respondent, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the Trial Examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inferences or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the respondent was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence; because the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to respondent; because respondent is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on respondent; and because respondent has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial.

46.

[fol. 238] Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained and set forth in the first five paragraphs under the heading "Conclusions of Law" on page 41, for the following reasons, to wit:

Respondent excepts to the conclusions contained in paragraph "1" of said Conclusions of Law, for the reason that the conclusion that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of the Act, is not supported by the evidence.

Respondent excepts to each and all the findings, statements and conclusions contained in each of said paragraphs numbered 2, 3, 4, and 5, under the heading "Conclusions of Law" on page 41 of the Intermediate Report, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

1. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent has engaged in, or is engaging in, any of the unfair labor practices referred to in said paragraphs and each of same.

2. Because same are contrary to the evidence and contrary to the law under the evidence.

3. Because same are not supported or justified by the evidence or any inferences which may be properly drawn therefrom, or by any findings of fact by the Trial Examiner which are supported by the evidence or any reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom.

4. Because same are not supported or justified by the findings of fact or any inferences which may be properly drawn therefrom.

[fol. 239] 5. Because same are partisan, biased, arbitrary, conjectural and speculative, and are not based on all the evidence or upon a fair consideration of the evidence.

6. Because same are based on conjecture, surmise and improper inferences and on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence and upon findings of fact not supported by the evidence.

7. Because the findings of fact upon which same are based are not supported by the evidence; and because the findings of fact are insufficient in law and in fact to support or justify said conclusions, for all the reasons hereinabove set forth in the respondent's exceptions to said several findings of fact.

8. Because there is an absence of evidence in the record to justify said conclusions or any of them, or to justify a finding or order of the National Labor Relations Board in accordance with said conclusions.

9. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent has violated the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act therein referred to.

10. Because said conclusions and determinations deprive respondent of its property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

11. Because said conclusions are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, respondent was denied a fair trial.

12. Respondent excepts thereto for each and all the reasons hereinabove set forth to the findings of fact on which said conclusions are based.

[fol. 240] 47.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the recommendations and each of same contained and set forth under the heading "Recommendations" and under subparagraphs 1 (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e), on pages 41 and 42, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

1. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inference therefrom.

2. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the findings of fact or conclusions or any reasonable inferences therefrom made by the Trial Examiner.

3. Because said recommendations are contrary to the evidence and to the law under the evidence.

4. Because said recommendations are based upon the findings of fact and conclusions of the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report, which findings of fact and conclusions are in turn not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inferences therefrom.

5. Because under the law and the evidence respondent should not be required or ordered to cease and desist from doing the acts and things enumerated in said recommendations of the Trial Examiner.

6. Because said recommendations or any order based upon same would deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

7. Because said recommendations are not based on a fair consideration of all the evidence, but are partisan, biased and arbitrary, and are based on conjecture and speculation, inference and surmise, not supported by any substantial competent evidence.

[fol. 241] 8. Because said recommendations are made in utter disregard of the evidence and of the obligation of the Trial Examiner to consider and weigh all the evidence.

9. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent has violated any of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

10. Because there is an absence of evidence in the record to justify said recommendations or any of them, or to justify a finding or order of the National Labor Relations Board in accordance with said recommendations.

11. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, respondent has been denied a fair trial.

12. Because said recommendations and each of same are based on incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant evidence.

13. Because said recommendations and each of same are contrary to and thwart the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

14. Because said recommendations and each of same are not conducive to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and are beyond the power of the Board to impose or require under the facts here existing.

15. Respondent further excepts to said recommendations and each of them for each and all of the reasons hereinabove set forth in its exceptions to the findings of fact and conclusions of the Trial Examiner.

16. Respondent further excepts to each and all of the recommendations contained and set forth in said subparagraphs 1 (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e), because the evidence does not show that the respondent is doing or has done any of the acts or things set forth in said recommenda-
[fol. 242] tions and for said reason respondent cannot desist and cease from doing same, and said assumption by the Trial Examiner is erroneous and not supported by the evidence.

48.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to each and all of the recommendations of the Trial Examiner contained and set forth under the heading "Recommendations" and in subparagraphs 2 (a), (b) and (c), except the third paragraph of 2 (c) and the last paragraph of 2 (c), on page 42, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

1. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inference therefrom.

2. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the findings of fact or conclusions or any reasonable inferences therefrom made by the Trial Examiner.

3. Because said recommendations are contrary to the evidence and to the law under the evidence.

4. Because said recommendations are based upon the findings of fact and conclusions of the Trial Examiner in said Intermediate Report, which findings of fact and conclusions are in turn not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inferences therefrom.

5. Because under the law and the evidence respondent should not be required or ordered to cease and desist from doing the acts and things enumerated in said recommendations of the Trial Examiner.

6. Because said recommendations or any order based upon same would deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 243] 7. Because said recommendations are not based on a fair consideration of all the evidence, but are partisan, biased and arbitrary, and are based on conjecture and speculation, inference and surmise, not supported by any substantial competent evidence.

8. Because said recommendations are made in utter disregard of the evidence and of the obligation of the Trial Examiner to consider and weigh all the evidence.

9. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent has violated any of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

10. Because there is an absence of evidence in the record to justify said recommendations or any of them, or to justify a finding or order of the National Labor Relations Board in accordance with said recommendations.

11. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence.

12. Because said recommendations and each of same are contrary to and thwart the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

13. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, respondent has been denied a fair trial.

14. Because said recommendations and each of same are not conducive to effectuating the purposes and provisions of the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and are beyond the power of the Board to impose or require under the facts here existing.

15. Respondent further excepts to said recommendations and each of them for each and all of the reasons hereinabove set forth in its exceptions to the findings of fact and conclusions of the Trial Examiner.

By excepting certain sentences and paragraphs in the foregoing exceptions to the Intermediate Report, respondent does not admit or intend to admit that the statements, findings or conclusions contained in said excepted sentences or paragraphs are true or are supported or justified by the evidence, or that any adverse inferences or implications that may be drawn therefrom are supported or justified by the evidence. The trial examiner, in preparing the Intermediate Report, has so intermingled statements that are supported by the evidence with statements that are not supported by the evidence that it is impossible to separate the true from the false even in single sentences, and the findings and statements in the Intermediate Report often set forth portions of the evidence which, standing alone, are strictly true, but do not fully or fairly state the whole evidence or the true purport thereof, and the inferences that might be drawn from the portions stated are not and would not be justified by the whole evidence if same had been fairly stated by the trial examiner. For these reasons, respondent excepts to any and all inferences adverse to respondent which are or may be drawn from such partial or unfair statements of the evidence, and does not intend to admit the truth of any of the findings or statements in the Intermediate Report which are adverse to respondent, whether such statements are excepted from the foregoing exceptions or not.

[fol. 245] 50.

Respondent excepts to the action and order of the National Labor Relations Board (contained in Board's Exhibit 1-BBBBB) designating James C. Batten as trial examiner to conduct the further hearing of this case ordered by the Board, and excepts to the action and rulings of the Board and each of same contained and set forth in the Board's order (Board's Exhibit 1-GGGGG) denying respondent's motion (Board's Exhibit 1-CCCCC) for the designation of another trial examiner herein, and excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Board contained and set forth in Board's order, Exhibit 1-GGGGG, and excepts to the action of the trial examiner, James C. Batten, in continuing to conduct said further hearing over respondent's objections set forth in its said motion, Exhibit 1-CCCCC, and in the affidavit attached thereto, and excepts to the trial examiner's disregard of and failure to sustain respondent's protest and exceptions (Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQQ) to the action, rulings and order of the Board denying respondent's motion for the designation of another trial examiner. These exceptions and each of same are made for each and all of the reasons and grounds set forth in said motion, Exhibit 1-CCCCC, and in the affidavit attached thereto, and for each and all of the reasons set forth in said Exhibit 1-QQQQQ, and for the further reason that by the denial of said motion and by virtue of said James C. Batten continuing to act as the trial examiner in charge of said further hearing, respondent has been denied a fair and impartial trial herein and same constitutes and has resulted in a denial to respondent of due process of law and respondent is deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 246]

51.

Respondent excepts to the conducting of said further hearing by said James C. Batten as trial examiner and to his acts and rulings in the conduct thereof for the reason that said James C. Batten became and was biased against respondent in and during the first hearing of this matter, and took a biased and unjudicial attitude toward the evidence and particularly respondent's evidence and proffered evidence, and said bias and prejudice and unjudicial attitude of said trial examiner continued in and throughout the further hearing held herein whereby respondent has been denied a fair trial herein and is deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

52.

Respondent excepts to the Board's denial of respondent's application for a continuance of said further hearing (Board's Exhibit 1-EEEEE) and excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Board contained and set forth in its order, Exhibit 1-GGGGG, denying said continuance for and upon each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in said application for continuance; and for like reasons excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in proceeding with said further hearing in denial of the application.

53.

Respondent excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in the conduct of the former hearing herein, made over the objections or exceptions of Re-
[fol. 247] spondent or which are adverse to Respondent (as to which adverse rulings and action Respondent was allowed an automatic exception) for each and all the reasons and grounds stated in the record, and for the further reason that the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner toward Respondent and its evidence permeated said rulings and action and because by virtue of said rulings and each of same the record is filled with incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence upon which the Trial Examiner has based his findings, conclusions and recommendations, by virtue of all of which Respondent has been denied a fair trial.

54.

Respondent excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in the conduct of said former hearing herein for the reasons set forth in Respondent's Statement of Exceptions heretofore filed herein. To avoid incumbering the record by setting out at length herein said exceptions, and for the convenience of the Board the Court and all parties Respondent hereby adopts and makes a part of this its Statement of Exceptions each and all of the following numbered exceptions contained and set forth in its said Statement of Exceptions heretofore filed herein (which Statement of Exceptions appears in the record herein at pages 6310 to 6600 inclusive), to-wit, Exceptions Nos. 15 to 41 inclusive, Nos. 168 to 360 inclusive, and Nos. 366 to 368 inclusive and Nos. 371 to 378 inclusive, as fully as though said exceptions and each of them were herein set forth in haec verba.

[fol. 248]

55.

Respondent excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner, James C. Batten, made or taken during said second or further hearing of this matter, of the objections or exceptions of Respondent or which are adverse to Respondent (as to which adverse rulings Respondent was allowed an automatic exception) for each and all the reasons and grounds stated in the record and for the further reason that the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner toward Respondent and its evidence permeated said rulings and because by virute of said rulings and each of same the record is filled with incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence upon which the Trial Examiner has based his findings, conclusions and recommendations and by virtue of all of which Respondent has been denied a fair trial.

56.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comment of the Trial Examiner in striking the testimony of the witness, Mrs. Reed, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, page 3212, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) You are referring to circulars he distributed to your customers?

"A. He had a circular made of the letter, copy of the letter he sent to me, he had that made and distributed to my employees, shortly after the letter came to me; I don't remember what date. I also know that he tried to put it in the newspaper and they wouldn't put it in.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that that be stricken out as hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

[fol. 249] 57.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 3444, 3445, to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Then your answer would be she would decide for herself whether she wanted to follow the method given her by Mrs. Tyhurst, or given to her by someone else, or some other method that she wanted to follow, without regard to the fact that she had other instructions?

"A. I don't know what you are getting at.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think what you are trying to get at, when that situation existed in the plant that you just described, that is, Mr. Baty was responsible for the entire production, the sewing section, and the instructions suggested one method and Mrs. Tyhurst should come through the section and suggest another, the operator then decided for herself which method she would use, is that correct?

"Miss Weyand: No, the question was—

"A. (Interrupting) Well, I don't know what you mean.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Even if that did not occur, would the operator be free to—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I don't understand it then, myself. I am afraid I'd better quit.

"Mr. Hogsett: May I make a general observation?

We have sat here for hours, listening to hypothetical questions that are not predicated on any facts. In other words, Miss Weyand is working out questions with geometrical precision, and has spun out of that geometrical precision a psychological vacuum, and has predicated her questions on that theory of hypothetical assumptions; and I submit it doesn't get us any place. That technicality of interrogation, in character, is objectionable, and not founded upon anything that is known to exist, I submit.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't believe I will sustain your objection. As I previously stated, Mrs. Reed is the president of the company, and thus far I have permitted, I think, somewhat more latitude with Mrs. Reed than I perhaps would have with other witnesses, in view of the fact she is the president of the company. I will permit Miss Weyand to proceed, but I want to be sure that the witness understands the question.

"So, Miss Weyand, will you proceed, please?"

[fol. 250] 58.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner, appearing in the record at pages 3454, 3455, and 3456, as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) So Mrs. Tyhurst has the authority to speak for the company in saying the notch should be put in?

"A. When you talk about authority—

"Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) It seems to me that is carrying this question of authority to an absurdity. Now, a truck driver might be driving a truck, and another assistant on the truck might say, 'You have got a flat tire, you'd better stop.' Would anybody say the assistant had authority to speak for the company, because he ordered the truck to stop? In other words, we reach a point beyond all reason.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think the important point is the statement which Miss Weyand made yesterday, I believe, along with other matters, what was actually done in this plant.

"Mr. Hogsett: I agree.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, it seems to me the way to show what was done would be in the daily and ordinary operation of this plant. Now, you might call a person a foreman, when he is not a foreman, and you might call him a superintendent when he is not a superintendent; I think that is, as far as I am concerned, and I think as far as the Board is concerned, with what actually took place in this plant at these various times.

"Now, it seems to me some of these questions Miss Weyand has asked are hypothetical, and it seems there is no showing here that many of these things, which have been asked Mrs. Reed and answered, have ever occurred.

"Mr. Hogsett: That is exactly the point.

"Trial Examiner Batten: But I will say again, I am not going to attempt to tell any of the attorneys how to ask their questions. Thus far, with Mrs. Reed, I feel I have been very lenient with all of counsel, and I intend to pursue that policy until we are through with this witness, because she is the president of the company, and unfortunately was unable to testify in the prior hearing.

"Now, on that basis, Miss Weyand, you may proceed. Now, what was the question?

"A. Mr. Batten, may I try to throw a little light on this thing we are doing?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Mrs. Reed, if you understood the question, that you answer the questions, and then I think we will get along.

"A. Well, I will make a note of something then, when I get back.

[fol. 251] "Trial Examiner Batten: I think when Miss Weyand gets through, if your counsel wants to clarify these points, he can ask you questions regarding them.

"I told you yesterday, when you get through with your testimony, if you want to make a statement, you may do so, the witness may do so.

"Mr. Hogsett: Well, it is just a matter of her making a note now.

"Mr. Reed: I submit if the witness wants, at this time, to make a statement to clarify any answer she has made, she has a right to do it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: There is a question pending and I would like to clear that up first."

59.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner contained in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 3476 and 3485, to wit:

"Q. What was Ted Scoles's position in January of 1935?

"Mr. Reed: That has been gone into, if Your Honor please, these identical questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am sure I couldn't say, Senator. Will you answer the question, Mrs. Reed? * * *

"Q. Prior to 1942, what difference was there between Jack McCaughey's duties and his present duties?

"A. Well, for—

"Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) I submit that question has been answered and the details given in each instance. It has been asked what were his duties at a certain time, and what they were at another time. Now it is asked, to state the differences.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness may state what the difference is, in her opinion.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I object to this interminable repetition.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us what she considers to be the difference."

[fol. 252] 60.

Respondent excepts to the action of counsel for the National Labor Relations Board in introducing in evidence Board's Exhibit 32-E as a part of Board's Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D, and cross-examining the witness, Mrs. Reed with reference to said Exhibit 32-E as being a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D, and as being filed in the Wages and Hours Division on October 31, 1940 as a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D in the files of the Wages and Hours Division, when as a matter of fact said Exhibit 32-E had not been prepared on said date and was not filed in said Wages and Hours Division on October 31, 1940 and was never a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D in the Wages and Hours Division, but on the contrary the data in said Exhibit 32-E was assembled and related to a much later data and was not filed in the Wages and Hours Division until after December 29, 1940, and was never filed therein as a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D; and respondent excepts to the attempt of counsel for the Board by the use of said official document Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D having the apparent authenticity of a document signed by the respondent's Vice President and duly filed in the Wages and Hours Division and bearing its date stamp as having been received therein on October 31, 1940, and by attaching said Exhibit 32-E thereto as a part thereof, to mislead, confuse and entrap the witness Mrs. Reed and thereby obtained testimony that the matter set forth in said Exhibit 32-E existed on and before said date of October 31, 1940; and excepts to the examination by the Trial Examiner of said witness Mrs. Reed with reference thereto and to the Trial Examiner's [fol. 253] action in permitting counsel for the I.L.G.W.U. after the Trial Examiner had stricken said testimony, to further examine the witness with reference thereto by reading into the record portions of said stricken testimony; and excepts to each and all the rulings of the Trial Examiner with reference to said matter, all of which rulings and action of the Trial Examiner and said actions of counsel for the Board and for the I.L.G.W.U. were highly prejudicial to respondent and show the Trial Examiner's bias against respondent and his desire to acquit counsel for the Board of said improper examination, by reason of all of which respondent has been denied a fair and impartial trial.

The matters herein referred to appear in the record at pages 3526 to 3535, 3550 to 3586, 3748 to 3750, 3847 to 3859, 3875 to 3881, 3910 to 3920, 3932 to 3940, and 3947 to 3952, inclusive.

[fol. 254] 61

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 3544, 3545 and 3546, as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Do you know what was the largest number of girls you ever employed in St. Joseph at one time?

"A. I do not.

"Q. Do you have any idea?

"A. Not any very definite idea.

"Q. Could you give us an approximation?

"A. I really couldn't.

"Mr. Hogsett. If it please the Examiner, I object as wholly pointless. We have again run into a line of questions that haven't any bearing on this case at all. It might be of interest if someone were writing a history of the Donnelly Garment Company, but it hasn't anything to do with whether this company dominated, sponsored, or coerced the formation of the employees' union, which is the issue here to try. It is far afield.

"Miss Weyand. I do not intend to pursue this line of questioning further.

"Mr. Hogsett. She always says that, and then—

"Trial Examiner Batten: In view of Miss Weyand's statement that she does not intend to pursue it any further—

"Mr. Hogsett. —there is nothing you can do about it.

"Trial Examiner Batten. —that will dispose of the matter. * * *

"I didn't assume, Miss Weyand, that when you said you didn't intend to pursue that further, you were precluded from asking any further questions if, in your opinion, it was necessary."

Respondent further excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in permitting counsel for the Board to examine and cross-examine witnesses at great length upon immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant matters, and when objection is made, permitting said testimony to stand as a result of counsel's statement that she does not intend to pursue the line of questioning further, or the statement [fol. 255] that the questions asked are preliminary, or the statements that the questions are asked for the purpose of testing the witness' credibility, as a result of which the record is filled with incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence which has improperly influenced the Trial Examiner's findings and conclusions adverse to respondent.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 3591, 3598, to wit:

"Q. Do your employees have credits for the purpose of purchasing dresses in your retail store, is that a cash transaction?

"Mr. Hogsett: I can't see the remotest connection between that. I really have no objection, but I can't see it is at all relevant. I object to it, to save time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. * * *

"Q. Could you indicate what factors in her experience impressed you with her qualifications for being an instructor?

"Mr. Reed: I think that is a ridiculous waste of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection, Senator?

"Mr. Reed: I object. It is a ridiculous waste of time."

Respondent further excepts to the failure of the Trial Examiner to instruct and require counsel for the Board to desist from such questioning upon utterly immaterial and irrelevant matters whereby the record is encumbered therewith and the true issues obscured and the Trial Examiner's findings and conclusions influenced by immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant evidence, all to respondent's prejudice.

[fol. 256] 63.

Respondent excepts to the comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, page 3606, as showing the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner towards respondent and its witnesses and his endeavor to get the witness to make a statement contrary to the facts:

"Q. Turning now to April 1937 was Rose Todd assigned to any department of the plant?

"A. I testified about three times that she went through the plant supplying notions of thread, or whatever supplies might be missing to complete cuts.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, the question is, was she assigned to any department? Was she assigned to any definite department or section in April of 1937?

"The Witness: No, her job was just to go through the plant from one section to another.

"Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, she was not a part of any sewing section or department of the plant or the business; is that right?

"The Witness: She was a part of all of them. She simply went from one place to another, and when there was something missing, she would find out what it was, and then she would go to the notions department, if it was to get more thread, or—"

64.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner with reference to Board's Exhibit No. 28 (being purported copies of certain pay rolls of respondent, which copies were prepared by the Board), as shown by the transcript of the record, pages 3612 to 3635 inclusive, pages 3688, 3689, for the reason that such record shows the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner toward respondent and its counsel and his evident desire to make use of error or mistakes of the Board in copying exhibits furnished by respondent to the Board because such record shows the Trial Examiner's fixed purpose to refuse to take said erroneous record as true and not accept testimony of [fol. 257] the witness, Mrs. Reed, that same was incorrect, although the error therein was plainly pointed out by both counsel for the respondent and by said witness Mrs. Reed, and shows the evident purpose and intention of the Trial Examiner to enlarge the terms of the stipulation with reference to said Exhibit 28 in a manner unfavorable to respondent, casting the entire burden upon respondent's counsel for the correctness of said exhibit when the error was wholly that of the Board in copying same, and in representing to respondent's counsel that same was a true copy and thus obtaining the signature of respondent's counsel to said stipulation, by reason of all of which the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and its evidence is shown and the non-judicial attitude of the Trial Examiner is shown by his refusal to permit correction by the witness of palpable errors in evidence caused by the Board and the correction of which would result in favorable inferences to respondent and the non-correction of which might be used for the purpose of drawing unfavorable inferences against respondent.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent calls particular attention to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, to wit:

"A. I don't find it.

"I would like to call the Examiner's attention to the fact that I was puzzled about this pay roll list yesterday, and last night I looked up to see why these queer headings would be on certain pages, and I saw the original pay roll that was put in evidence, and apparently when this was copied the pages were not followed. Now, when--

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Well, do you have the original pay roll? * * * (p. 3613)

[fol. 258] "Mr. Ingraham: We brought in the original pay rolls.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And wasn't this supposed to be a copy of it?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I do not have any recollection of making a copy of those pay rolls. We brought the original pay rolls in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Whoever made them, they were marked as an exhibit and were received on the assumption that they were a copy of the pay roll. Now, are they a copy or aren't they, Mr. Ingraham?

"Mr. Ingraham: They are a copy, as far as the names and wages are concerned.

"I think this is what actually happened: I was asked by the Board's counsel to produce the pay rolls for their inspection, and I brought up the pay rolls, including the ones for the particular exhibits that you were inquiring about yesterday, and the Board took those pay rolls—.

"The Witness: The pages were mixed.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean the Board inserted these titles?

"Mr. Ingraham: No. But the pages got mixed up.

"The Witness: A title would be carried over to the next page, and the wrong page would be there.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that the original pay rolls be marked and photostats be provided.

"Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, I object to that change from the record as it now exists, until we look at the record and see what actually happened. * * * (pp. 3613, 3614)

"Mr. Ingraham: I was asked to produce these pay roll records, and I did produce them, and the next thing that appears is this stipulation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you signed the stipulation, didn't you?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it seems to me, if there is anything wrong with it, it is up to you folks to check it up—

"Mr. Ingraham: We will produce the pay roll records.

"Mr. Langsdale: I don't agree with that. I want to rely upon what they did produce in 1939.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may rely completely, Mr. Langsdale, upon what is in the record, unless it is changed. Unless what is now in the record is corrected, it will remain, and any counsel may use it. * * * (p. 3615) [fol. 259] "Mr. Ingraham: That's true, Miss Weyand, and the Board, as I recall, never challenged the division of the people in the pay roll, there never was any question raised.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed on the assumption it is correct, until otherwise shown. * * * (p. 3631, 3632)

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, we produced the record the last time, that the Labor Board asked for, and I brought them in, and I have a receipt in my pocket.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, just a minute. I just said we are going to proceed on the basis this record is correct. Now, if the parties who contend it is not, may or may not have an opportunity to present it in this hearing, I am not going back, I don't think, now, on this record, and revise it from page 1 up to 3200, whatever it is, including all of the numerous exhibits. (pp. 3632, 3633)

"Mr. Langsdale: My point is this, Mr. Examiner; if there is going to be any contention that the records they bring in here are the originals, I think it would be well to send someone representing the National Labor Relations Board down there this afternoon to see where they get them and how they get them and whether or not these are people who have been there any length of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so, Mr. Langsdale, because I think the burden is entirely on Mr. Ingraham's shoulders. He signed this stipulation and agreed to this. It is in the record and has been used since—what is it now? —since July, 1939.

"If it isn't correct, I think the burden is on [your], Mr. Ingraham, to produce whatever is necessary to show that it is correct. You agreed to the stipulation."

"Mr. Ingraham: I agreed to the stipulation but—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on that basis, as I said awhile ago, we are going to proceed on the assumption that this is correct.

"Mr. Langsdale: I say, if they are going to come in later with a lot of—

"The Witness: I didn't say this was incorrect. I said it was incorrect in the way it is put together. Sometimes the heading is carried over and sometimes refers to the employees on the next page, when it shouldn't. (p. 3634)

"Mr. Ingraham: I didn't make up this exhibit. I produced the pay rolls and Mr. Leary took the pay rolls and checked them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Whether you prepared them or not, you were the attorney who signed the stipulation.

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. The Board had these pay rolls before them—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Therefore, you must assume the responsibility of entering into the stipulation.

"The Witness: We didn't know the Board would do a thing like that until this morning.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you find it is incorrect, check it up and— The burden is on you. (p. 3635) * * *

[fol. 260] "Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I said we will proceed on the assumption that it is correct. It is in the record, and it was stipulated, and unless some action is taken by one of the parties to make a motion or take some step to correct it, we will proceed on the assumption that the record is correct. (p. 3688) * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to initiate any action to change the record. The record stands. It has gone through the hearing, it has gone through the Board, and it has gone through the Court, and as far as I am concerned, I will accept the record as it is." (p. 3689).

65.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as shown by the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, page 3652, for the reason, among others, that same shows the purpose of the Trial Examiner to have elicited immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent evidence and then to base findings against respondent thereon:

"Q. Did you ever hear of a Twilight Club, prior to reading that today?

"A. I did not.

"Mr. Hogsett: What possible difference would it make if she did or did not? I object; it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I overrule the objection; the answer is necessary."

66.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing at pages 3656 to 3658 inclusive and to the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"A. I don't call to mind in a definite way a pin. I have heard discussions of a Loyalty pin, or a pin with the name Loyalty on it, but I don't remember that it was ever brought to my particular attention.

"Q. Was such a pin sold to employees around the plant?

"A. No to my knowledge.

"Mr. Hogsett: If the Examiner please, I object to this line of questioning as being wholly immaterial, and not having the remotest infinitesimal value, whether proving the Donnelly Garment Company dominated a garment union. It has not even a faint tendency to prove that. We [fol. 261] are all sitting here, wasting the time of the government, and every individual in this room, to no purpose at all, listening to such examination.

"I know that your Honor, and I think I might say that it is commendable—I know that you have been liberal in the examination in chief and in cross of this witness, for the reason, I think, that was commendable and a proper thing to do; but there must be a limit. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Well, I am going to pursue the same policy I have consistently followed, unless I feel that it is entirely beyond any matter which we covered in the original hearing, and there was a great deal of testimony in the first hearing concerning the Donnelly Loyalty League. I will permit you to continue, Miss Weyand."

Respondent further excepts to said ruling for the reason that the failure of the Trial Examiner to exclude said immaterial and irrelevant evidence encumbers the record therewith and obscures the real issues involved and has contributed to the erroneous findings of the Trial Examiner against respondent.

67.

Respondent excepts to the refusal of the Trial Examiner to exclude testimony as to whether respondent ever issued instructions to the instructors directing them to maintain a neutral attitude in labor matters, and to the Trial Examiner's interposing and asking questions to elicit said testimony over the objection of the respondent as same appears at page 3678 of the transcript of the record, for the reason that said testimony is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to any issue in this case and said action of the Trial Examiner shows his prejudice against respondent and his prejudgment of the charges against respondent, and because same incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner herein.

[fol. 262]

68.

Respondent excepts to the comments of the Trial Examiner set forth on pages 3680, 3681 of the transcript of the record which show the prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and its witnesses. The following are excerpts from said comments:

"Q. Were the employees present there at the meeting wearing uniforms?

"A. A number of them were. I don't remember specifically how they were dressed. My plant employees do wear white uniforms.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) You thought some of them were wearing uniforms?

"A. If this hadn't come to my attention, I don't think I would have thought about it. I didn't think about it.

"Q. Is that your recollection?

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. Then, Mrs. Reed, when you are asked these questions and you don't remember, say you don't remember.

"A. The first thing I was thinking of, naturally, Mr. Batten, my plant employees do wear white uniforms, and, it being time to go home in the evening, some of them may have changed or they may not.

"At the time I wasn't thinking how they were dressed, so I don't remember whether they were wearing uniforms or not.

"Q. I would suggest that you give some thought to these questions, because after all that is the reason you are here, to answer these questions.

"A. I have been on the stand about five hours, and I am tired.

"Q. Irrespective of that, I would suggest that you give thought to these questions, and take your time.

"A. All right. Thank you.

"Q. And don't proceed to make an answer, and then make the statement later that you don't remember. I would think about the question first.

"A. Well, thank you very much."

69.

[fol. 263] Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing at pages 2690-91 of the transcript of the record as follows, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Is the door to your office one that leads into an outer reception office, or is it directly connected with the main part of the building?

"Mr. Reed: Now, Mr. Examiner, I have to object. This is a mere consumption of time. What difference does it make where her office door leads, or how many minutes it is open during a period of six or seven years? I can't see the reason for questions of this character.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, as I have indicated before, I am not going to attempt to limit the examination at this point in any way. Whether it is material or not, I presume will appear. I don't suppose I can ask any of counsel on preliminary or introductory questions just the purpose.

I will permit you to proceed, Miss Weyand."

70.

Respondent excepts to the repeated interposition of the Trial Examiner in the examination of witnesses and to his rulings, action and comments as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3695-96 and pp. 3703-04), to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question was, Mrs. Reed, did you make any investigation of it yourself after Mr. Baty reported the incident to you?

A. After the incident was reported to me I made no further investigation.

Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did you give any directions that the girls should be contacted and assured protection to emain in the plant and work?

A. Mr. Baty was in charge of the plant, and I didn't feel that it was necessary for me to go into that incident at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, did you? Did you do anything about it?

[fol. 264] "The Witness: But I say I didn't feel any reason for it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's assume that you felt that way, did you do anything about it?

The Witness. I did not."

71.

Respondent excepts to the rules, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as shown from the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3743-44), to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?

A. That is my remembrance.

Mr. Reed. Wait a minute. We object to that. That is opening up exactly the question the Commissioner has ruled out.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't rule it out, Senator.

Mr. Reed: If you didn't rule it out—

Trial Examiner Batten: I have been trying to arrive at some sort of a limitation. I said we will proceed with Mrs. Reed. I do not intend, Senator, as I previously stated, to attempt to limit the matter at this time. When Mrs. Reed is through, I am more than convinced we have to work out some sort of a limitation on this thing.

Mr. Reed: This is something we didn't go into at all. It raises the question, if it raises anything, whether or not these girls were properly discharged.

Miss Weyand: The company did go into the resignation of various persons, Jack McConaughey and Lyle Jeter, that happened in 1939, 1940, and 1941.

Mr. Reed: If the company went into the question of Jack McConaughey and somebody else who resigned from the union, that has nothing to do with the discharge of these two girls. There is no connection between them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

[fol. 265) 'Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?')

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. Do you know whether you received a written notice, Mrs. Reed?"

72.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth from the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (p. 3765), to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I would like to ask one more question.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) 'Then, that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison, and Mr. Atchison discusses with them very thoroughly, he sees what they have made and he knows the reason that happened, he has listed each week on pay roll cards with the instructor, and Mrs. Wheery', was that true?

Mr. Reed: I insist, if your honor please, this witness ought to be asked direct questions, and not have things read.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is not whether Mrs. Reeves' testimony is true, but was that the true situation in the plant at the time, if this witness knows.

Mr. Reed: I object to that method of examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Reed: As incompetent, and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know if that was the method?"

73.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner throughout the hearing in permitting testimony and evidence to be introduced concerning matters which occurred prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act for the reason that said evidence is immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent, and for the further reason that same has contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner, and in [fol. 266] connection with this exception respondent calls attention to the testimony at pages 3760-3784 and to the ruling of the Trial Examiner concerning same as shown in the following excerpt from pages 3775-76, to wit:

"Q. And Mrs. Reeves was your production manager at that time, was she not?

A. Yes.

Q. And reading further from the same testimony—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) Just for the record, we object to the testimony with reference to what happened in 1935 and prior thereto, as entirely remote. It does not throw any light, it does not furnish a background for this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection to each question.

Mr. Reed: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, with respect to the 1935 situation.

Mr. Reed: I just think it is cumbering the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed."

74.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record pages 3825-26, to wit:

"Q. Would you have approved of her going around and getting these petitions signed and taking a whole day?

Mr. Reed: We object to that. That is purely a hypothetical question.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us whether she would have approved.

Mr. Reed: Approved something that never took place?

Trial Examiner Batten: Whether she would have approved of Mrs. Shartzer's going around and spending a day getting a petition signed.

Mr. Reed: There is no evidence that she took a day.

[fol. 267] "Mr. Langsdale: I am going to assume it would have taken a day to get 1,000 names signed.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) On that assumption, would you have approved of that?

Mr. Reed: How can she talk on an assumption made for the first time by Mr. Langsdale in this courtroom? I [objection] to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

You may proceed.

A. I know we had week workers that would go out and have their hair done and—

Mr. Langsdale: You said that before.

A. (Continuing) —and take two or three hours to do it, and —

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, the question is would you have approved this young lady's —I have forgotten her name — spending a day getting a petition signed in the plant?"

75.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3863-64), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) I asked you if you have any information that Lena Tyhurst was not in the position that she is described as here in the handwriting of Lee Baty on June 1, 1937?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I have said over and over and over again here that while Mrs. Reeves and Mr. Baty were managing the factory I had no knowledge of my own of the details of how they did it and what they called the people who are in the plant.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter).

Mr. Reed: That is calling for hearsay evidence. Whether you have heard something about it, that doesn't make evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Reed?

The Witness: I have said over and over and over again—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Will you read the question again?

[fol. 268] "Trial Examiner Batten: The question is this: Do you have any information that Lena Tyhurst was not assistant factory manager on this date as described on this document by Mr. Baty?"

76.

Respondent excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in repeatedly interposing in the examining of witnesses, an illustration of which appears in the excerpts from the transcript of the record hereinafter quoted from pages 3888-3889, and Respondent excepts to said testimony so elicited by the Trial Examiner for the reason that same relates to a period prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, and for the further reason that said evidence contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner. As a part of this exception Respondent calls attention to the following excerpts from the testimony (pp. 3888-3890), to-wit:

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Well, I thought this morning, in that old N.R.A. record—wasn't he one of the four that were mentioned as passing upon the people?

A. I am saying they would get his opinion and— The reason they would get his opinion, Mr. Batten, was to see how much—if we had a lot of double-stitching to do, he would be the one to know it and—

Q. Irrespective of what they got his opinion on, he was one of the four, was he not, Mrs. Reed?

A. But his opinion was always on the work.

Q. Whatever his opinion was on, he was one of the four mentioned by Mrs. Reeves, wasn't he, when she said they always got the opinion of these four people before they did anything?

A. That is right. But I am trying to say, Mr. Batten, the reason his opinion would be worth something was because of his knowledge of how much of a specific kind of work we had to get through and how many machines we had to do it with, and from that point of view.

Q. Well, of course, I didn't ask you why he is there.

A. I think you ought to let me explain.

[fol. 269] "Q. Mrs. Reed, I have no objection to your explaining. My only question to you was, was he one of the four mentioned this morning?

A. But it seems to me you ought to let me explain. It wasn't that he had personal control over the woman who was on the job, but he could tell us how much work we had of a certain type that this woman could do. We didn't lay off any double-stitchers if we had—

Q. Mrs. Reed, I think you have explained that several times.

A. But it comes back all of the time, Mr. Batten, and it would seem that Dewey had control of managing the plant.

Q. No, we are not interested in managing the plant. We are interested in what these people did.

A. I am trying to explain it to you.

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, you have already explained it several times. In fact, I think it was explained to Mr. Ingraham on direct examination and to Miss Weyand on cross-examination.

A. Well, Mr. Langsdale seems to want to know about it again.

Mr. Langsdale: I just don't want you to be confused about it, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: I am not confused about Dewey. You are the one that is confused about Dewey.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Didn't Mrs. Reeves testify:

'Nobody is let out of the Donnelly Garment Company unless four people pass on it.'

Would you say that is true?

A. That was my general knowledge.

Q. Would you say this is true?

'Then that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison and Mr. Atchison discusses them very thoroughly and he sees what they have made and he knows the reasons about what happened each week because he analyzes each week our pay roll cards with the instructor and Mrs. Wheery.'?

A. That wasn't my testimony, was it, Mr. Langsdale?

Q. I asked you if that was true. That was Mrs. Reeves' testimony."

77.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts

[fol. 270] from the transcript of the record (pp. 3968-69), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you make any order at all with reference to the use of the i. d. m. system by the Donnelly Garment Workers' representatives?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as immaterial. The evidence so far, if it shows anything about this, is that this information, if it ever was received, came during the trial of these cases. If so, it is long subsequent to the charge that is filed here. If after this case was started or after this case was tried or while it was being tried the witness heard something in the trial, it is immaterial whether she went to investigate to find out whether it was going on or not.

Mr. Langsdale: I am past that. I am asking her now if she made any order with reference to the use of the i. d. m. system by the Donnelly Garment Workers' representatives.

Mr. Reed: If it was an order, it was the same thing.

Trial Examiner Batten: At what time?

Mr. Langsdale: At any time after she learned it was charged that they were using the i. d. m. system to pass information among the employees connected with that union.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Mrs. Reed, you have stated you did not make any investigation of it. Did you take any action with respect to it?

A. I never made any orders—

Mr. Reed: I make the same objection to the Examiner's question that I made to Mr. Langsdale's.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Did you take any action on that?"

78.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3983-84), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) While you were reading articles in the newspapers about the I.L.G.W.U., let me ask you if you read this article in the magazine 'Life', August 1st, 1938."

* * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. We object to this kind of an inquiry. This purports to be an article concerning the recreational activities of the I.L.G.W.U. I don't know what the purpose of it would be in this hearing.

[fol. 271] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't either. I think the question to Mrs. Reed is, did she read this article or see it. Now, I will permit her to answer that question."

79.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in directing the order of proof herein by requiring Respondent to proceed first with employee witnesses and by confining their testimony strictly to the offers of proof by "the 1200 employees", and in refusing to receive testimony under other offers of proof made by Respondent, and in denying to Respondent the right to put on its proof in the order it desires (when there was no reason such as the convenience of a witness involved which might call for the Trial Examiner's discretion in receiving particular evidence first), and in refusing to permit witnesses, while on the stand, to testify to matters which the Trial Examiner did not consider came within his strict construction of said "employee" offers of proof, and in refusing to receive pertinent and material testimony from said witnesses and other witnesses for respondent bearing on the question "how and why" the DGWU was formed and on whether there was any coercion, interference or support on the part of Respondent in connection with the formation of said union.

These rulings and action and Respondent's objections and exceptions thereto made at the time appear in the transcript of the record at pages 4049 to 4096 inclusive.

In connection with this exception, Respondent calls attention to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record and excepts to each and all of said rulings and comments of the Trial Examiner, to-wit:

[fol. 272] "Trial Examiner Batten: I say to you, is this an introductory question opening up the question of violence through this witness?

Mr. Ingraham: We made an offer of proof by the employees on the facts involved in the so-called strikes at 26th and Grand, and I was briefly going to inquire of Miss Tobin who had charge of the strikes up there and if it was the I. L. G. W. U. and what went on." (pp. 4051-52)

• • • • • • •

"Mr. Ingraham: I think that we have a right to show by this witness what the facts were up there, so that—

Trial Examiner Batten: As to violence, yes.

Mr. Ingraham: —so that there will not be any question but what this violence did occur.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I will say I am going to rule that it is immaterial, to this extent: I am now going to direct the order of proof to this extent, I am going to direct that we first receive the testimony of the 1,200 witnesses, if they testify to material evidence that was ordered by the court, in accordance with the order of the court remanding the case.

• • • • • • •

"I am going to direct that order of proof at this time.

• • • •

Now, I am going to spend the rest of the afternoon listening to any argument which counsel have on my ruling that we will proceed with the 1,200 witnesses, as the court stated that testimony should be received. • • • (pp. 4052-53).

"Mr. Ingraham: Before Miss Tobin is excused, and before making any offer of proof, I have just one other question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she has not answered the last one, has she?

Mr. Ingraham: No. I understood you to state that you were going to have us make an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I want an offer of proof on that, as far as this witness is concerned; not a general offer of proof, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Miss Tobin, who is the chairlady at the Marguerite Keyes shop at the present time? (p. 4054)

. . . . . .

[fol. 273] "Mr. Ingraham: May the witness answer the question I have just asked, so that we can go ahead and present any argument we have on this legal point?

Trial Examiner Batten: I prefer that you present your arguments now, Mr. Ingraham. That was my request.

Mr. Reed: I want to say first, that the order of proof in a case is in the hands of the counsel who proffer the proof. If they do it in an improper way, it is then for a court or an examiner to rule on the evidence as it is offered. But no court has the authority to tell counsel the order in which they shall introduce proof. I don't think I am mistaken about that.

So, I say we propose to exercise our right to offer our proof in the manner which seems to us is best and proper. If the Examiner sees fit to exclude it, we can only save our exception at that time.

Now, in regard to this witness, you have stated that you did not propose to make any rule or follow any rule with regard to who brought in a witness—that you might bring in a witness and you might ask them questions like you would on cross-examination—

Trial Examiner Batten: If they become adverse to you, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Yes. Now, we have the right to show the interest of this witness. That is what we are trying to show, her employment for a number of years by the prosecuting force in this hearing. We have the right to show her interest and to show that by her acts. And if we had no other ground than that, we have the right to ask this question and to have it answered now, and not two weeks from now, or some other time when we may reach it.

I insist we have the right to ask this lady if she was here when those strikes occurred and to ask her if she did not take part in them, and to ask her if she did not have direction of the violence that took place, and to show her photograph here—her picture in the pictures that display the riotous conduct of these strikers. That for the purpose of showing her interest, if nothing else.

Then, this evidence is competent for another reason. Of course, it cannot be that in a strike of this kind, violence of this kind, where there were hundreds and perhaps thousands of people concerned—we could not be expected to show by every one of the witnesses that we may put on here that they saw the strike. Some of them saw parts of it. But if we offer the person that was conducting the strike, who knows all about it, and prove the fact that the strike took place and the kind of strike it was, that it was given publicity through the papers and the employees hear of it and know it—the air is full of it, the air is full of danger for them, and that is a reason why they would want to organize a union of their own, to be protected against this violence, that is clearly within the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

[fol. 274] "Now, here is what they said: —Mr. Hogsett called attention to it very graphically.

'At the hearing before the Trial Examiner, the petitioners proffered the evidence of the employees of the Donnelly Company, some 1200 in number, to show how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the employer either in the formation or administration of the union, to show how and why they organized the union.'

One of the whys is that this riotous conduct was going on, these brutal abuses were being visited upon girls going to work, that the threats had been made that the same thing would be done to the Donnelly Garment workers, so that they were intimidated into riding there in busses or riding there in streetcars, all of that forms a part of this picture.

The only question, then, is, was the violence here? Not what reasons they had for it. We do not have to go into that. But was the violence here? Was the danger here? Was the threat here? Those things we have the right to go into.

Now, here is the lady who conducted the strike. We want to ask her a few brief questions about it.

Now, if Your Honor undertakes to take this case out of the hands of the attorneys and tell us how we shall introduce our evidence and the order of it, all I can say is that we will have to do as we did before, save our exceptions." (pp. 4056-57-58-59).

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: Won't you let us finish with the question that is asked this witness?" (p. 4060).

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed. In line with my suggestion when we adjourned I went along the matter of the order of proof in the hearing, and with respect to the procedure which we will follow.

First, I am going to receive the testimony of the employees referred to in the Circuit Court's decision, and on that basis we are ready to proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, may I ask you what you mean by 'in accordance with the Circuit Court's decision'? In other words, do I understand you to mean that you will receive the testimony of the employees that was offered?

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right. In accordance with the offers of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: And that doesn't mean then the same employees can go over the same matters that they did go over at the hearing?

[fol. 275] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't intend to cover all the matters covered in the prior hearing, Mr. Langsdale. I intend to accept first the testimony of the employees referred to in the Circuit Court's decision in the offers of proof which I rejected. Now, that doesn't mean I am limiting the hearing to that. (p. 4077.)

* * * * * *

"Mr. Reed: I confess I am not sure that I comprehend the ruling. Your Honor states that you will receive testimony of the employees on the matters that were referred to in the offers of proof. Do we understand that is all the testimony you are going to permit?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I think I stated that is the testimony which I intend to receive first, Senator. In other words, I believe the Circuit Court, in that one matter at least, was specific, and they said I should receive the testimony of the 1200 employees in accordance with the offers of proof. Now, that much of the decision is definite, and I think in line with the Court's decision, that is the testimony which I should receive first, and accordingly I am directing that order of proof." (p. 4078)

* * * * * *

"Mr. Reed: We are in the middle of the examination of Wave Tobin. We insist respectfully that we are entitled to proceed with that witness, and I call attention to the Examiner's ruling, which, as I understand it, is that he proposes now to regulate the order of proof, and to direct the Respondent how they shall put in their case. That, we think, deprives us of our right under the law, and that is bad practice in any event." (pp. 4078-79).

* * * * * *

"Mr. Reed: * * * Now, we insist and we propose, on our part—of course, we cannot do it if the Examiner refuses—to go on with the examination of Miss Tobin, and when we ask questions that are outside the issues of this case, the proper objections can be made, but we are not required to tell counsel what we intend to prove by this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I stated the last day we met, Senator, that I did not intend to require it, as far as Miss Tobin was concerned.

We are ready to proceed in accordance with my ruling. We will proceed with the employees, in line with the offers of proof which were made and in line with the circuit court's opinion.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to your ruling. We will have to get the employees up here.

. . . . . .

Mr. Ingraham: I would like to call Wave Tobin to the stand.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that this morning, Mr. Ingraham." (pp. 4087-88-89).

. . . . . .

[fol. 276] "Mr. Ingraham: Do I understand the ruling this morning is limiting the testimony to the testimony of Donnelly employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that was the ruling Mr. Ingraham. You may read the record in the morning. I said I would receive first the testimony of the employees referred to by the circuit court in the offers of proof which I rejected.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, we have made other offers of proof besides the offers of proof of the employees. There are other offers of proof that were made at the last hearing besides those made on behalf of the employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think that is right.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, are we to be limited to the evidence that is covered in the offers of proof of employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: You are to be limited now to the 1,200 employees referred to by the court—why and how—the offers of proof made on behalf of those 1,200 employees. That is the matter which I will hear first." (pp. 4089-90).

. . . . . .

"Mr. Ingraham: I want to call the Examiner's attention to the last paragraph in respondent's last answer. It is Board's exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

Mr. Langsdale: What exhibit is that?

Mr. Ingraham: Board's exhibit No. 1-LLLL. Page 3441 of the record.

'Respondent further states'—I am reading from the answer—'that during all of the times mentioned in paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint the International Union, its officers, agents, and members were engaged in the said and lawful conspiracy against respondent set forth in section (B) of this answer and the matters set forth in said section (B) of this answer are by reference made a part specifically of respondent's answer to paragraph 11 as though set out in hæc verbae.'

Now, section (B) of respondent's answer was stricken out. Paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint remained in the complaint, and our answer to is remained in our answer; it wasn't stricken out.

Now, respondent offered to prove those facts which are in paragraph 11 by the following witnesses: Nell Quinlan Reed, Elizabeth Reeves, R. J. Ingraham, John Bachofer, Marguerite Keyes, Inez Warren, Pauline Shartzer, Mary Sprofera, Nelly Stites, Ruby Rickett, Lyle Jeter, Raymond Smith, Effie Hall, Geoge Couten, Flora Ruden, W. D. Rosenfield, Gordon I. Gordon, Velma Dowdy, Meyer Perlstein, David Dubinsky, Wave Tobin, Sylvia Hully and Ellen Pry.

[fol. 277] "That offer was rejected.

We offered to prove the allegations contained in subdivision B of our answer and those are— I will not take the time to read subdivision B.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean subdivision B of your answer?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. Now, in order to proceed we feel that Wave Tobin's testimony is essential and that under the offers of proof we have a right at this time to examine her." (pp. 4090-91-92).

* * * * * *

"Mr. Reed: I want to call attention to this situation which has arisen:

We are contending that Wave Tobin continue on the witness stand and that her testimony should be heard before other testimony is called for. That is the situation.

Now, the Examiner rules that he will not rule at this time and directs us to go forward with other witnesses; he is going to reserve his decision. If the decision is not made at this time, then the effect of it will be that we will go on and hear these other witnesses and we don't have a ruling. I think we are entitled to a ruling now, so that we will know how to proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I ruled this morning that I was first going to hear the 1,200 witnesses which the court referred to and which offers of proof I rejected, and I have not changed that ruling.

Mr. Reed: You have not changed that ruling, but we have now filed a paper here and we ask a ruling on it, and you say you will reserve that ruling. Of course, if you make the ruling after the damage, as we think, is done, that will do us no good if you then decide it in our favor.

Now, I don't think I will be able to change your mind, but I want to make this observation, that in the orderly procedure in courts of justice—and I have been there a good many years—and as said by the Court of Appeals here in its quotation from another eminent authority, it is the right of a litigant, through its counsel, to put its evidence in the order it sees fit, and the only question is whether the evidence is competent. The order of proof rests with the person proffering the proof.

Now, this proceeding that we are now talking about I have never seen in any court, at any time, where a judge undertook to say in what order you shall put on your testimony.

We offer it, and if it is incompetent, of course you can rule it out, but you cannot tell us, under any rule of law that I ever heard of, the order in which we shall proceed with our defense in this case." (pp. 4095-96).

[fol. 278] This exception is made for all the reasons and grounds given at pages 4049-4096 and 4315-16 of the record and for the further reasons that said rulings were and are arbitrary and unnecessary to orderly procedure and constitute an abuse of any discretion vested in the Trial Examiner with reference thereto are contrary to law, and deprived respondent of a fair trial and of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

79-a.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing in the Transcript of the Record at pp. 4049-4073 inclusive, and to the statements and comments of the counsel for the Board and ILGWU therein appearing and to the refusal of the Trial Examiner to permit counsel for Respondent to continue with the examination of Wave Tobin, the witness then on the stand, and to his refusal to permit Respondent to proceed with the offering of its evidence in the order desired by Respondent and to the refusal of the Trial Examiner to permit said witness to answer the question appearing at the bottom of page 4048 and top of page 4049, as follows:

"Q. Now, Miss Tobin, there has been reference in this case to strikes at 26th and Grand, in the spring of 1937. Were you in charge of the strikers in the Missouri Garment Company plants?"

and in refusing to permit Respondent to proceed to elicit testimony from said witness concerning said matters and other pertinent matters herein, and excepts to the Trial Examiner's requirement that Respondent submit an offer of proof as to what Respondent would prove by said witness' testimony for each and all the reasons stated by counsel for Respondent at pages 4051-52 and 4056-4060 of the Record, and Respondent further excepts to the refusal of the Trial Examiner (as shown by the Record at pages [fol. 279] 4056-4060) to permit the witness Wave Tobin to answer the question asked by the Respondent at page 4054 of the record, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Miss Tobin, who is the chairlady at the Marguerite Keyes shop at the present time?"

and excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit Respondent to recall said witness Wave Tobin to the stand for such purpose or for any purpose as shown by the Record at pages 4088-92; and in refusing to permit Respondent to examine the witness Wave Tobin with reference to the matters set forth in section B of Respondent's answer, and with reference to the matters contained in or referred to in Respondent's offer of proof (Board's exhibit 1-SSSSS) as shown by the Record at pages 4090-4092.

In connection with this exception Respondent calls attention to and makes a part hereof all the quotations from the Record set forth in Respondent's preceding exception No. 79.

This exception is made and based upon all the reasons and grounds set forth or referred to in said foregoing exception No. 79, and upon the further ground that said ruling and action have denied to Respondent a fair trial herein and deprived it of due process of law under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 280] 80.

The respondent excepts to the refusal of the Trial Examiner and the Board to grant a secret election among the employees to determine their choice of a bargaining agency as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 4157-58 as will appear from the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Mr. Reed: I just want to ask—I tried to ask it before Mr. Tyler reached the floor—now, if you will give us a secret election, since you say these people are afraid to testify in the presence of their employers or their associates, will you now give us a secret election? And I challenge the Board to that.

"Miss Weyand: I would like to state the Board's position with reference to a secret election for the record.

"The Board's position has consistently been, and was upheld by the Courts in this regard, that a secret election cannot be fairly conducted if any employer's unfair labor practices have not been corrected or dissipated.

"Mr. Reed: Well, you assume there are unfair labor practices, therefore you assume you can't have an election; therefore you get an election if the Board wants it and not as a matter of right, and the Board's position is, 'We have prejudged you, you are guilty of unfair labor practices, and therefore we won't give you a chance to have an election or give the employees a chance to have an election to determine what their wishes are.'

"That is the fine logic we have in this case, and it runs throughout it."

81.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 4196-97 as shown from the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Q. Were you given any instructions, oral or written, or any rules of conduct, which stated what your duties as an operator were between January, 1936 and July, 1937?

"Mr. Ingraham: I would like to ask Miss Weyand under what offers of proof this line of questioning comes.

[fol. 281]. "Miss Weyand: I do not believe that on cross-examination I am restricted to any offers of proof. I think as I develop my questioning the point at which I am aiming will be clear. I think it is proper cross, under the questions that were allowed over my objections to be put to this witness, and, therefore, even though I objected to the questions as to what the instructors' duties were, I can certainly cross-examine as to that matter.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If course, Miss Weyand, I don't believe I could agree with you that you are not restricted to offers of proof on cross-examination. I think, generally speaking, you are, assuming—

"Miss Weyand: I do not mean—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. —assuming I am able to confine the direct examination to the offers of proof, which I will attempt to do.

"Now, as to your second point, I don't know your purpose, but I think I permitted some questions of this witness as to supervisory employees, instructors, and so forth, and following that examination on direct, I think you are within the direct examination, so you may proceed.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, we object to this line of questioning as outside the scope of the ruling of the court.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection".

82.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing on pages 4227-28 of the transcript of the record as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Q. Did you ever hear that either Sylvia Hull or Fern Sigler left their work as a result of certain demonstrations? A. I heard something about it.

Q. What did you hear?

Mr. Ingraham: Would you read the question, please?

Miss Weyand: Will you read the last question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please read the last question?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: The answer was what?

(Last answer was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 282] "Mr. Reed: We object to that as calling for pure hearsay evidence.

A. I can't recall—

"Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment, Mrs. Cooper, I don't believe at this point of the proceeding I would exclude hearsay, hardly.

"Mr. Reed: Well, we object to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I'll overrule the objection."

83.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comment of the trial examiner appearing on pages 4256-57 as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Would it have made any difference in your mental attitude toward the ILGWU had you believed Mr. Reed was telling the truth when he said that Mr. Dubinsky was a Communist and a Bolshevist?

"Mr. Reed: That is a purely hypothetical question, and the hypothesis is a mere assumption, 'Would it make any difference to you if something else had happened?'

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Cooper?

"A. I think he wants to know if I had heard that he was a Communist, if it made any difference in my opinion of the union.

"Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, if you had believed Senator Reed's statement, would it make any difference?

"A. I was going mostly by their actions here in the city.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Now, Mrs. Cooper, that isn't the question.

"Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please read the question?

(Last question read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and entirely outside the issues in this case.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Do you understand it?

"A. I think I do.

"Q. Well, if you do, you may answer it."

[fol. 283] 84.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as shown in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record on page 4263, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale:) Did you get from this article any belief that Mr. Dubinsky was a Communist and a Bolshevist?

"Mr. Reed: Well, we object to that as immaterial and incompetent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Reed: I want to get my objection into the record, that is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I will overrule it, Senator."

85.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner throughout the hearing in permitting counsel for the Board and for the I. L. G. W. U. to adduce incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial testimony on the pretext that the same was for the purpose of credibility or that the questions asked were preliminary questions, whereby said improper and incompetent evidence was gotten into the record and contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner; that such was the purpose of the Board and its counsel is shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4335, 4336, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: I should say that if my cross-examination had brought out a connection of the company with the incident, the Board would be entitled to rely on it in its decision. * * *

"Miss Weyand: My purpose was directed at credibility, but I don't believe that when I direct a question at credibility which is a proper question to direct at credibility I am to be barred from taking the answer and saying I wish to use it for something else if the answer developed into a statement of a connection of the company with the incident."

[fol. 284] 86.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4314 to 4316 inclusive, to-wit:

"Q. Do you recall at that time what the International was—What charges they were making about the working conditions at the Donnelly plant?

"A. I think I do.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, is that in the offer of proof, the N. R. A. hearing?

"Mr. Ingraham. No. But the Examiner and the Labor Board laid great stress on the events that occurred prior to the effective date—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I do not intend to go into that on these offers of proof.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will have to except to Your Honor's ruling.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

"Mr. Ingraham: That is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I stated pretty clearly, Mr. Ingraham, on these employees, I want to confine it first to these offers of proof. That is the thing that the circuit court clearly indicated I should have taken. Now, I am not making a ruling, as I said before, at this time that I will not take anything else, but I am going to take first the things the circuit court clearly indicated I should have received, and that is my reason for it.

"Mr. Ingraham: At this time do you want me to make an offer of proof on these matters that I was going into?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't know that it is necessary to make an offer of proof. If you want to, you can. I haven't excluded it.

"Mr. Ingraham: You have not excluded that testimony?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No.

"Mr. Reed: Now, then, are we to try this case if—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, you are going to proceed, I hope, as I indicated yesterday, and I thought everybody understood, and take first the employees, in accordance with the offer of proof, which the court said I should have accepted.

"Now, that is the plan we are going to follow.

[fol. 285] "Mr. Reed: I seem to be unfortunate. Every time I try to make a statement you interrupt me. I would like to make a statement for the record.

"How are we to try this case if the Examiner undertakes to direct us as to what testimony we shall offer first and not tell us what other testimony will be received, but withholds his decision until we have put our witnesses upon the stand and examined them, within the limitations that he has fixed; then, after that is all done, he may open up the case and try many other things.

"Now, I simply protest that that method is unfair and I except to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I understand, Senator, you excepted to it yesterday. You stated, however, that if I intended to pursue that policy, you would comply with it.

"Mr. Reed: We are forced to comply with it. I didn't state I would voluntarily comply with it.

87.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner, appearing at page 4350 of the transcript of the record, that "whether or not the employer exerted any pressure to exclude these people from the plant I don't think is material under these offers", and in refusing to permit respondent to adduce such evidence.

88.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from transcript of the record at pages 4353, 4354, 4355, 4356, to-wit:

"Q. Did Mrs. Hyde say anything to you?
"A. She did.
"Q. What did she say?

"A. She asked me to please go back to my machine.

"Q. And what did you do?

"A. Well, I still wanted to go down and see who the other girl was. I didn't know the other girl. But she asked me repeatedly to go back to my machine and go to work, and I went.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you see, Mr. Lane, what this leads into. You are leading into trying out the whole issue. * * *

[fol. 286] "Trial Examiner Batten: The question here is how and why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized under the offers of proof.

"Mr. Lane: It is more than that. * * *

"Mr. Lane: Now, Your Honor makes repeated reference to the offers of proof and the Board's offers of proof. I find nothing in the opinion which confines the Intervener or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Respondent to specific offers of proof. The opinion says the evidence of the employees was to be taken, whether they were dominated or coerced.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Lane, I am referring to my ruling that we are first going to take the testimony of the employees, in line with the offers of proof. Of course, if you concede this is in accordance with the offers of proof, it is not in accordance with my ruling. * * *

"Mr. Reed: The difficulty is we are trying to do the impossible, we are trying to separate evidence which bears upon the whole case and limit it to bear upon one feature of the case, and that feature of the case is an essential part of the case itself; so that our difficulty arises from that attempt to first try one particular question.

"Now, you can't try that question, you can't try the very question here, without introducing evidence as to what took place. This lady saw it, and everything that took place there was dragged into this case by both sides before.

"Now, this witness is asked how she felt, what her state of mind was; she saw this difficulty. What took place at that time would affect her mind, and what took place at that time would do something else; it would be a factor in arriving at any other conclusion whether the company was guilty of unfair labor practice by not going in and protecting these people.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Senator, that is not because of the order of proof, and it is not because of the issues in the case. The difficulties that we are running into is that we are trying to explore the minds of people.

"Mr. Reed: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I don't care whether it is a Labor Board hearing or what kind of a lawsuit it is, when you attempt to do as we are doing here, explore people's mental reactions and their opinions—

"Mr. Reed: That is shown by what they do, isn't it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: But you get into serious difficulty. I feel that is what the Circuit Court wanted done; within the limits of our ability, I am going to comply with the Circuit Court's decision. I have made my ruling we are going to proceed in that manner. If I am wrong, Senator, we probably will be back here again.

[fol. 287] "Mr. Reed: I think we will.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I hope I live to be here; I have enjoyed it very much thus far, but I made the ruling, and that is the ruling which we are going to follow."

89.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4358 to 4360 inclusive, to-wit:

"Mr. Lane: Well, the Board has taken the position, apparently—

"Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) The Board hasn't taken any position. The Board has set aside its decision and order, there is no decision and order in existence, so that can't be used as stating what the Board's decision is.

"Mr. Reed: Well, is there a record in existence that is a part of this hearing?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I would assume so, Senator. At least we started with page 3000 and something, so I assume something precedes it.

"Mr. Reed: Well, the record is here, whether the Board did or didn't make a finding—we know it did make a finding. We know this point adverse to us was in the minds of the Court, and this case has been sent back here, and the Board is ordered to set aside its judgment and decision, and we are here now, prepared to try the issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is the very point I am glad you mentioned, Senator. I have felt that way for some time, that the position of the Respondent is that on every point I passed, the Board made an adverse finding in its prior decision and order; that means the Respondent can now come in here in a further hearing for a specific hearing, and attempt to disprove all the adverse findings brought.

"Mr. Reed: And that, not because of the adverse finding, but because we are entitled to put in this evidence, and the adverse findings simply go to this fact, that it is apparent that the Board has in its mind the importance of this question, and that their opinion was that we were guilty under this particular phase of the charge. Now, we come back to try it. We have the old record here and we have the right to meet every contention that is made. That contention is made by the Board today, although it set aside its findings, and the record is there, and it is here now, undertaking to say that on that record made, which is now, as I understand, a part of this hearing, certain deductions we have drawn, and it drew them. Now, we come in and want to show the facts in this case; and to shut us off from that—[fol. 288] "Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Of course, Senator, I can't agree with you that you are coming in here to show the facts; you are coming in here to show the facts on the basis of the remand of the Circuit Court.

"Mr. Reed: I understand that, and you and I differ on that radically, on what the remand is, and we object to the ruling that has been made, to the effect that we are confined here to our offers of proof, and then we make the further point that our offers of proof are broad enough to cover every contention that we have thus far made in this case; and that we have the right now, under our offers of proof, to meet every issue in this case; and we object and except to any rulings to the contrary.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think the record is pretty clear, Senator, that you have excepted to all of these rulings."

90.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 4365, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Lane) Will you state, Mrs. Saucke, what was said by anybody in the section?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll object to that question and sustain my own objection. If this questioning indicates this witness can't identify what anybody said—I mean the names of anybody—then I would say the proper foundation is laid for your last question."

91.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4381, 4382, to-wit:

"Q. Who did you deal with in arranging that picnic?

"Mr. Reed: Now, if Your Honor please, isn't this utterly immaterial to this case? I submit that it is. It is a useless consumption of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. Who did you deal with?"

92.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 4393, to-wit:

[fol. 289] "Q. Do you remember what the vote was against you?

"A. No.

"Q. How was the vote conducted?

"Mr. Reed: If Your Honor please, isn't this testimony an utter waste of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know, Senator.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I am objecting to this line of questioning as incompetent and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I'll overrule the objections. I think it has to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Senator, clearly."

93.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4399, 4400, 4405-4406, 4410, 4411-4412, to-wit:

"Q. Did you know whether she would be a good person to represent you in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Reed: Well, I object to that as utterly immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she can answer.

Mr. Reed: An opinion of the witness as to whether some other lady, whom she says she hardly knew, would be a good person to represent her or not—

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I want to put my objection in. It is immaterial, outside of the issues in this case, and a useless consumption of time.

"A. Well, what little I have seen of her, I imagine she would be very capable.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): Did you know her well enough to form an opinion?

"A. I think I did.

"Q. And had you formed an opinion?

"Mr. Reed: I make the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. * * * *

[fol. 290] "Q. What discussions did you hear her participate in?

"A. I couldn't say.

"Mr. Reed: May my previous objection stand to any of this line of questioning?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection. * * *

"Q. Do you know what her opinion in regard to labor matters is?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as calling for the information of somebody else, incompetent and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you have already answered it, haven't you?

"A. No, I haven't.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent further objects, that the question is general.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer. * * *

"Did you ever hear him make any statement about labor matters?

"A. I don't remember.

"Mr. Reed: I wish to call to the attention of the Court that that question is unfair as it simply refers to labor matters. Now, there are a thousand—ten thousand different things that concern labor matters. The question does not mean anything in the form that it is put, and the witness might have to answer on matters entirely outside of this issue on labor matters. I got opinions on labor matters; most everybody has; and how many different opinions, and how many different kinds of questions is all open, it is all embraced in this one question on labor matters.

"I object to it as an improper form of examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will recess until 20 minutes of 4. * * *

"Q. Did you know his character sufficiently to know whether he would make a good representative for the employees?

"Mr. Reed: Now, I object to that as utterly incompetent and immaterial, did she know this man's character sufficiently to know whether he would make a good representative for the employees. Now can that throw any light on this case? How can she be required to pass an opinion upon the qualifications of some man who is not even here in court?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may tell us whether you knew him well enough to have him represent you.

[fol. 291] 94.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 4421, to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): And did you participate in the nomination of Mildred Mattox?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Mr. Lane: If the examiner please, the Intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union objects to that question; whether this witness, Mrs. Saucke, participated in the nomination of Mildred Mattox in April 1938, as a member of a nominating committee, whether this witness acted wisely or unwisely in so participating, or whether this witness was casually or intimately acquainted with Mildred Mattox doesn't throw any light whatever on the issues of this proceeding, it is entirely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't even approach the issue we are here to try out, and I object to it for that reason.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

95.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to rule upon and sustain the objection made at page 4426 of the record, as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: She said she didn't know who Stella Willis was and I just wanted the record to show how completely ignorant she was on what goes on there at the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Mr. Lane: I object to the comment and move that it be stricken."

96.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4454, 4455, 4456, to-wit:

[fol. 292] "Q. Do you know anything about the way it happened at this election?

"A. What year?

"Q. 1938, that the two tickets brought in each had Rose Todd for president on each ticket, Jack McConaughey for treasurer on each ticket, and Margaret Green for secretary on each ticket.

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as immaterial; whether the witness noticed it or didn't notice it, is purely immaterial in this case.

"Miss Weyand: She was a candidate on one of the tickets for vice-president, and I think she would be a good person to explain.

"Mr. Ingraham: I didn't know there was a vice-presidential candidate.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know anything about it?

"A. I had nothing to do in making up those tickets, didn't know who was on those tickets until they were placed on the board in front of me.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): And you didn't later learn how that happened?

"A. I didn't even inquire.

"Q. You don't to this day know how that happened?

"A. You mean how those names—

"Mr. Reed: (Interrupting): She has already said she was not present, that she didn't know how the [list] were made up. Now she is asked if she didn't know how that happened; I object to it.

"Miss Weyand: She indicated at that time—

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is whether she ever found out it occurred.

"Mr. Reed: Then it would be hearsay.

"Mr. Langsdale: That is not a question from the testimony in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Did you ever find out, Mrs. Saucke?

"A. I never tried to find out.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Then, you didn't find out?

"A. I didn't ask.

"Q. Then, if you didn't ask, you didn't find out, did you?

"A. No, I guess I didn't.

[fol. 293] For the reason that the testimony elicited there and on similar matters shown in the succeeding pages of the record is wholly immaterial and irrelevant to the issues and does not tend to prove any of the charges in the complaint and obscures the real issues and contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner, and because said interposition of the Trial Examiner shows his partisanship and bias against respondent.

97.

Respondent excepts to the constant interposition of the Trial Examiner in the conduct of examinations by counsel and to his refusal to rule on respondent's objections and let counsel proceed to try the case in their own way, and to his rulings, action and comments, as same appear on pages 4483 to 4487 of the transcript of the record, said instance of such interposition by the Trial Examiner being but one of the hundreds throughout the record, to all of which respondent excepts.

98.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4511, 4512, to-wit:

"Q. Now then, would you have done the things you did on April 23, 1937, at Sylvia Hull's machine if you had known she was going there to represent only members of the I. L. G. W. U.?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and asking the witness to testify to what she might have done under a state of facts which is not shown to have existed and which the witness did not have in mind, as shown by her own testimony.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Patten: You may answer.

"A. I certainly would, because the article also states they were going to call a strike.

"Q. That they were going to get permission—

"A. —to call a strike.

"Q. At any rate, you would have done and said exactly the same things you did say and do on April 23 at her machine or near her machine had you known she was going there to represent only employees of the Donnelly Garment Company that belonged to the I. L. G. W. U.?

"Mr. Reed: I renew my objection last made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled.

"You may answer."

[fol. 204] 99.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner in ruling and requiring that the witness on the stand, Mrs. Warth, give the name of a friend who she stated had had her clothes torn in the I. L. G. W. U. strikes, and in striking out the testimony of said witness with reference thereto because of her refusal to state the name of said friend, which said rulings, comments and actions appear at pages 4565 to 4575 of the record, and particularly in the following excerpts therefrom at pages 4573, 4574, 4575, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: If it is for the purpose of credibility, I will ask the witness to disclose the name.

"Mr. Reed: Do the counsel on the other side now say that they are going to test this lady's credibility by bringing in the witness, and do they vouch for the fact that that witness will contradict this witness?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is not what I asked them. I asked Miss Weyand if it was a matter of credibility, and she said it was. I asked her, entirely so? And she said yes. Upon her statement, the witness may disclose the name of the person. * * *

"Mr. Reed: Are we, then, to understand that this question is to be asked, although limited to impeachment purposes, and that we can follow and show that this young lady, if she would come in and deny this, the fact back of it, or show, if she didn't deny it, that she spoke the truth?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am making no ruling of any kind, senator, except to this witness, that she may disclose the name of the person.

"Mr. Reed: That's the trouble.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That isn't the trouble. If you believe you have the right to present such testimony, Senator, you present it, and at the time it is presented I will rule upon it.

"Mr. Reed: I am going to say to the witness that she has the right to withhold this name, if she wants to.

"The Witness: I think I will stand on that right, then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: All right. You may do so, and I shall strike your testimony with respect to this incident which was given on direct examination—

"Mr. Lane: Intervener excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: —in accordance with the Board's rules.

"Mr. Reed: And we also except to the ruling."

[fol. 295] 100.

Respondent excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit Respondent to recall witness Wave Tobin to the stand and to continue its examination of her as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 4692, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: I would like the record to show that Wave Tobin is present in court and has been present at every session since she was on the stand, and respondent again asks the right to continue its examination of her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Has Mrs. Reed been in court since we started up again, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: No, she has not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I can verify the fact for you that, as far as I recall, Miss Tobin has been here every day.

We will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: And my request to be permitted to continue my examination of her will be denied?

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed in line with the ruling which I have previously made, Mr. Ingraham."

101.

Respondent excepts to the rulings of the Trial Examiner limiting the Respondent's examination of its witnesses strictly to the Examiner's conception of what is covered by the offer of proof and refusing to permit witnesses while on the stand to testify as to other material and pertinent phases of the case as set forth in the following rulings and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing in the transcript of the Record at pages 4755-56, to-wit:

"Mr. Reed: Will you pardon me at that point?

We are now running into the vice, I think, of— I don't say that disrespectfully of the ruling. You say at the present time we are going to hear only from the witnesses who were named and that you are going to confine the issues to the one question of offers of proof.

[fol. 296] "Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

Mr. Reed: But hereafter you will leave it open.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not ruling upon that matter.

Mr. Reed: So, when we undertake to present our case we are handicapped by a ruling which limits our right to put in evidence on only one phase of the case, when the same witness that we have here could testify as to the other phases, if you hereafter admit them.

Now, we ought to know what is coming into this case, Mr. Examiner. We ought to know now.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I would like to know, myself. If I knew, I could make a ruling, but I don't know, so I can't rule.

Mr. Reed: So we all proceed in the dark.

Trial Examiner Batten: We certainly do.

Mr. Reed: Very well, then. I object to that procedure.

Trial Examiner Batten: Except in accordance with the ruling I have made that we are first going to take the testimony which I rejected in the offers of proof. That is the order of proof and we are going to follow that."

102.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in limiting Respondent's evidence to matters occurring within six months prior to March 18th, 1937, to-wit, from November, 1936 on, and in ruling that things prior to that date are not covered by the offers of proof and should not be received in evidence under the Examiner's ruling directing the order of proof, as set forth in the ruling and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing at pages 4763-64 of the transcript of the Record as follows, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed, and I think the offers of proof contemplate the period in or about March 18, 1937, and as to any strikes or matters of that kind which occurred during that period, and I think it is reasonable to go back to—I think the offers contemplated at least a period, I would say, from November on, and any things prior to that I will now rule aren't covered by the offers of proof, and therefore shouldn't be presented at this time, in line with my ruling directing the order of proof."

[fol. 297] for the reasons among others that said ruling was and is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and demonstrates the Trial Examiner's bias against Respondent and denies to Respondent a fair trial and the opportunity to get evidence admitted on behalf of the Board and ILGWU and constitutes the taking of Respondent's liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

103.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4795-96-97-98, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: I am going to hand the witness Board's Exhibit No. 2 and ask her to direct her attention to the second page thereof, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4362, and ask her to read an article there appearing, entitled 'Nine Hundred Join Loyalty League.' The article runs over to page 4363 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

Mr. Reed: What is that?

Miss Weyand: The article appears in the N. D. A. A. (being Nelly Don Athletic Association) News for February 1935.

Mr. Ingraham: We object to the witness being examined about what appeared in the Nelly Don Athletic Association News. There is no showing that the company had anything to do with the publication or is in any way responsible for anything that appeared in it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there isn't any question pending yet, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, wasn't it your ruling this morning that you were going to confine the examination at this point to matters occurring within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937?

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there isn't any question pending yet to rule upon.

Mr. Lane: She is directing attention to what occurred in 1935.

Mr. Reed: I think if the Examiner will search his recollection, he will remember he refused to let Mr. Lane show the witness an article which lay outside of these limits, or examine about it.

(Thereupon the above-specified article was read by the witness.)

* * * * *

[fol. 298] "Q. (By Miss Weyand): Did you read that article when it appeared?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. I don't remember whether I read that or not.

Q. (By Miss Weyand): Have you ever read this article before?

A. I don't believe that I read it.

Q. Did you attend the meeting here described as a meeting at which 900 persons were present and cards were passed out for membership in the Loyalty League?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I object to that question. It is outside the scope of the offers of proof, and the witness has stated that she did not read the article.

Mr. Reed: Outside of the scope of the ruling this morning made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you state, Miss Barnes, that you did not read this article?

A. I don't remember reading it in that pamphlet, no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the question now is did she attend the meeting of 900 people, is that right?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Lane: I would like to have a continuing objection to showing the witness any article excluded by your ruling this morning. This witness was questioned about something that happened in 1935 and 1936, and the Board has gone back to 1935, and I want to object.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Ingraham: The respondent would like to have the same continuing objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same continuing objection."

[fol. 299] for reasons among others that said testimony and the testimony adduced thereafter and appearing on pages 4798 to 4805 of the Record relating to the organization of the Loyalty League and similar matters is wholly immaterial and irrelevant to any issue herein and contrary to the Trial Examiner's ruling that evidence of events occurring prior to six months before March, 1937 would not be received, and because said rulings are arbitrary, unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and demonstrate the biased and unfair attitude of the Trial Examiner toward Respondent and his non-judicial attitude toward the evidence by reason of all of which Respondent has been denied a fair trial and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law.

104.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 4829-30-31-32 and 33, to-wit:

"Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they?

A. No.

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. I think counsel ought not to try to mislead the witness. If he puts in part of these minutes, he ought to put in the qualifying phrase that it was explained that the by-laws could be changed at any time. Isn't that right in the minutes before you?

Mr. Langsdale: No. Here is what Mr. Tyler said about it, 'I suggest that if the by-laws are satisfactory someone move they be adopted'.

Mr. Reed: Is that all that was said?

Mr. Langsdale: And then the motion was made by Ellen Nokes that 'we accepted the by-laws as they were read; seconded by Virginia White, unanimous acceptance.'

Mr. Reed: Give me the minutes.

Mr. Langsdale: Senator, I am examining this witness. Wait until I get through.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed. There is no question pending.

[fol. 300] "Mr. Lane: I submit that with respect to the minutes, he read only a portion of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, he hasn't read all the minutes; but I say, Mr. Lane, there is no question pending.

Mr. Lane: Well, his statement is incomplete and misleading.

Mr. Langsdale: Are you trying to suggest to the witness part of her answer?

Mr. Lane: No, I am not, but I am objecting to the misleading nature of your examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is any misleading here, I think I would intercede. I am convinced he was not misleading anybody. Will you proceed, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Ingraham: We would like, before you proceed, to make an objection to the question, and move that the question and answer be stricken out.

* * * * * *

Mr. Reed: Well, I move to strike out the question as misleading and improper for the reason that there is no connection with the other matter called attention to, which counsel did not refer to, although he apparently was reading from the records. This was said, 'I suggest to adopt, then, the bylaws, and then leisurely amend them, when the majority of you wish them changed. They are drawn as follows:' so that there was in this meeting a statement made that if they adopted them, then they could change them afterwards.

Now, I think Mr. Langsdale, perhaps inadvertently, omitted to call attention to that fact.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't do it inadvertently. I don't have to read everything that happened at that meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer, please; there is a motion to strike.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter as follows:

'Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they?
A. No.')

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't see anything improper with that.

A. Mr. Examiner, I think before that I was asked if these by-laws were accepted, and I said they were accepted subject to change.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, then, you weren't misled by any questions Mr. Langsdale asked you, were you?

A. No, but he didn't read all of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you weren't, the motion is denied. Let's proceed."

[fol. 301] 105.

Respondent excepts to the interposition of the Trial Examiner in the examination of witnesses throughout the hearing and has illustrated by the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 4917, to-wit:

By Mr. Ingraham:

"Q. I will ask you to state whether or not after Mr. Baty took over the plant there was any change, to your knowledge, of the authority of instructors, passing on hiring or laying off or disciplining employees.

A. I don't know as the instructors ever had that authority to hire and fire employees.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean by that, not knowing whether they ever had it, you couldn't say whether there was any change? Is that what you mean?

A. Oh, yes, there was a change—

Q. No. My question to you is, not knowing whether the instructors ever had the right to hire and discharge, you couldn't say whether there was any change?

A. I know they never had the right to hire and discharge.

Q. Well, then, can you say whether there was any change when Mr. Baty went in there?

A. Yes.

Q. As to hiring and firing?

A. Well, as to— I don't know, but—

Q. My question to you was, as Mr. Ingraham's question was, whether there was any change as to hiring and firing.

Mr. Langsdale: I think the question was a little more comprehensive than that.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may have been, but that was the point I was concerned about."

as showing the partisanship of the Trial Examiner against Respondent and his evident desire to elicit testimony favorable to findings and issues which he had already resolved in favor of the Board and against Respondent.

[fol. 302] 106.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4945-46:

"Trial Examiner Batten: What did you understand it to mean?

A. My understanding was she was going to represent all of us.

Q. You mean from reading the article?

A. From reading the article.

Mr. Langsdale: We certainly are not bound by understanding of someone who doesn't understand the English language when she reads it. I ask that the answer be stricken out as utterly irrational and having no foundation or basis in the article.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Reed: I am protesting against the insulting remark made to a witness on the stand.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't consider it insulting but when I get ready to make that kind of remarks I will come around and take some lessons from you.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the remarks of Mr. Langsdale for the reason they are argumentative and they are not directed to the question I asked. They are not proper remarks to be made by counsel.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you have a question pending?

Mr. Lane: No, I am asking those remarks be stricken."

107.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 4962-63, to-wit:

"Q. When was the first Loyalty League meeting, can you recall?

A. Well, the first Loyalty League meeting I recall was in 1935, I think, when they joined the organization down there to the plant; the Loyalty League is a social affair — we joined our clubs together, each section had a club.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has a continuing objection to inquiring into matters around 1935 or thereabouts? Your ruling was given when the intervener was going into matters except those within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937.

[fol. 303] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, this question has nothing to do with my ruling, but I'll grant you the continuing objection.

Mr. Lane: Well, she is inquiring of something that occurred in 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, concerning the Loyalty League, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Ingraham: It is understood the respondent still maintains its objection to any matters prior to July 15, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't understand it, unless you make it.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I made an objection at the first hearing as to all matters that occurred prior to July 15, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean your original objection in the first hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the objection you made at that time, I assume, continues through the entire hearing.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, that will be my understanding of it."

for the reasons, among others, that said rulings are contrary to the Trial Examiner's ruling refusing to permit Respondent to adduce evidence of matters occurring prior to six months before March, 1937, and for the further reason that said evidence does not tend to prove any of the charges against Respondent.

108.

Respondent excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner permitting counsel for the Board to interrogate the witness concerning Board's Exhibit 2 and other related matters appearing in the transcript of the Record at page 4983 over the objections of Respondent and Intervener, for the reason that said examination is contrary to the ruling of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit Respondent to adduce evidence prior to November, 1936, and for the further reason that said evidence does not tend to prove any of the charges against Respondent.

[fol. 304]

109.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth on pages 5006-07 of the transcript of the Record, to-wit:

"Q. Well, at that time did you learn that if you had a plant union and got a closed shop, that you could keep the I. L. G. W. U. out by firing everybody that joined it?

Mr. Reed: That is what you do all the time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection, Senator?

Mr. Reed: Yes, I object to the question as improper, not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. What was the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Lane: Well, I object to that for the reason that it is not the situation, and never had been the situation, that everybody that joined the I. L. G. W. U. —

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection?

Mr. Lane: Yes, that is an objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the objection?

Mr. Lane: Because the question states a hypothetical situation.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you know or did you learn that at that time, if you should form a plant union, get a closed shop agreement, that everyone would have to belong to that union?"

110.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts of the transcript of the Record (pages 5010-5011), to-wit:

[fol. 305] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if the question is asked and answered, then an objection is not proper at this time is it?

Mr. Lane: You have been interrogating the witness yourself, so I didn't have an opportunity to make the objection. Now, my objection is, to the question Mr. Langsdale asked, the last portion of it, with respect to keeping — to preventing any employees from joining the I. L. G. W. U. — now, that is not a provision of the Wagner Act, and I submit counsel should not be permitted to ask that question, that if they get a closed shop they have a right to require all the employees to belong to that union, and the Wagner Act doesn't provide that every employee shall stay out of the I. L. G. W. U.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I say, Mr. Lane ought to go and read the Wagner Act, and read some of the decisions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if that is an objection; it is overruled, because the question has been put and the answer is in the record. So, you proceed, Mr. Langsdale."

111.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5063-64-65, to-wit:

"Q. Did you know that you were being paid far in excess of wages that were being paid in plants that had contracts with the I. L. G. W. U. in Kansas City?

A. I felt sure I was making far more than I would in some of these other factories.

Q. Was this article —

Trial Examiner Batten: How is that material? You say did she know. Well, of course, I have no objection to it, she has answered it. Of course, it doesn't mean that we are going into that whole question of whether, in fact, they were. The only question that will raise is whether or not this witness — what her own information is concerning the statement, whether it is supported by anything. I didn't want you to think that raises the whole issue of the truth.

Mr. Ingraham: We still contend that is an issue we are interested to go into and that even under your ruling, that is a factor that these employees have a right to consider.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is what I just said.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: I am only going into it to the extent I indicated. These witnesses have testified what it was that lead them to form the organization or why they did it. Now, I am permitting it to that extent and that doesn't mean I am excluding the testimony you indicated, Mr. Ingraham, that you still take the position it is an issue. I am not ruling on that matter now, only with respect to this witness' testimony."

[fol. 306] 112.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth on pages 5154 to 5160 and at pages 5168 to 5169 of the transcript of the Record as showing the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner towards Respondent and his evident desire to have elicited evidence unfavorable to Respondent even though the questions asked were clearly incompetent.

113.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5203, 5204, 5205, to-wit:

"Q. Did you think you could ignore the Act up until the time the Supreme Court declared it constitutional?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial, entirely outside the issues in this case.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

'Did you think you could ignore the Act up until the time the Supreme Court declared it constitutional?')

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

Mr. Reed: Now, how does that throw any light on the issues?

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Mudd?

The Witness: I understand the question, but I don't believe he quoted me right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of whether he quoted you right or not, if you understand this question, you may answer.

. . . . . .

Mr. Reed: I submit that question is incompetent and immaterial for any purpose, whether she thought she could ignore it or couldn't ignore it. She has simply said she read about the Act in the paper and she read it was before the Supreme Court, and there is no question of whether she wanted to ignore it or didn't want to ignore it; that is not in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall the question, Mrs. Mudd?

[fol. 307] "The Witness: Yes, but—

114.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to sustain Respondent's and Intervener's objections to questions propounded by the Board's counsel concerning the organization meetings of the Loyalty League and related matters extending back as far as 1935, which examination together with Respondent's and Intervener's objections appears at pages 5288 to 5301 of the transcript of the Record, for the reason that same are contrary to the rulings of the Trial Examiner limiting Respondent in the production of evidence to a time not prior to November, 1936, and because said rulings and action are emphatically unfair and prejudicial to Respondent, and by reason of which Respondent has been denied a fair trial herein.

115.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5343-44, to-wit:

"Q. Did the thought occur to you that getting that Loyalty petition signed and getting the pictures in the paper might be the answer of the company to Perlstein's interview?

Mr. Reed: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and in no manner binding upon the parties to this case.

Mr. Stottle: And assuming as evidence something that is not in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question.

The Witness: I was going to say—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you understand the question that was asked you? Do you remember what it was?

[fol. 308] "The Witness: Well, it referred to the pictures going to be in the paper.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Not clearly; not that part of it, 'answer of the company'. I don't understand just what he means.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, restate it, Mr. Langsdale. The witness says she doesn't understand the latter part of it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Was there anything that came to your mind about the company's getting this petition signed and then having pictures in the newspaper as an answer to Perlstein's interview that you read 4 days earlier?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and as assuming that the company had this petition signed, when all of the evidence is to the contrary.

Mr. Langsdale: It isn't assuming that at all. I am asking her — for the reasons, among others, that same show the partisanship of the Trial Examiner and his desire to get into the Record an unfavorable statement of the witness with reference to the subject matter inquired about upon which the Trial Examiner was already committed in his previous finds and conclusions in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled."

[fol. 309] 116.

Respondent excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner that so far as the offers of proof are concerned and the employee witnesses are concerned with respect to respondent, that he had heard sufficient and that anything further would be cumulative and would not enable the Examiner or the Board or the Circuit Court to get any better picture of the situation, and excepts to the Trial Examiner's ruling and determination that he had heard enough employee witnesses both as to the respondent and intervener, and in refusing to permit respondent to call any more employee witnesses or adduce any further testimony under respondent's offers of proof and excepts to his ruling and action in refusing to permit intervener to put on any witnesses whatever or adduce any evidence whatever under the offers of proof, for the reasons, among others, that said rulings and action are contrary to the holding of the Circuit Court of Appeals in remanding the case and contrary to the order of the Board herein in ordering a further hearing of this matter; and for the further reason that respondent was prepared to call and place upon the stand all or substantially all of the witnesses named in the offers of proof referred to, and all of said witnesses would have testified to matters refuting each and all the charges against respondent and such testimony would have presented to the Trial Examiner, the Board and the Circuit Court of Appeals an overwhelming case sustaining respondent's contentions and refuting all of the charges against respondent, and because said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner deny to respondent an opportunity to adduce said material, competent and relevant evidence bearing on the issues involved herein, whereby respondent has been denied a fair trial and has been denied due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings having been made over and against the objections of respondent.

[fol. 310] In connection with this exception, respondent refers to the following excerpts from the record (pages 5797, 5800), and excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner set forth therein for each and all of the reasons hereinabove stated, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is there anything further?"

"Well, if not, I think I shall rule at this time that as far as the offers of proof are concerned, and the employee witnesses are concerned, with respect to the respondent, that I have heard sufficient; that anything further would be cumulative, and any addition wouldn't enable the Examiner or the Board or the Circuit Court to get any better picture of the entire situation, the light of the entire hearing, the entire record and exhibits. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I feel, Mr. Tyler, if you want me to determine the question entirely myself, I take it that is in substance the same position which the respondent takes.

"Then, I will now determine that I have heard enough employee witnesses, both as to the respondent and the intervener.

"So, that disposes of that matter."

Respondent further excepts to said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as constituting an abuse of any discretion vested in the Trial Examiner with reference to said matters and as being unfair and prejudicial to the respondent and intervener by reason of other rulings and action of the Trial Examiner, and by reason of his subsequent rulings permitting the Board and I. L. G. W. U. to adduce in rebuttal extensive evidence which was not proper rebuttal but which related to matters which if pertinent at all should properly have been adduced in the Board's case in chief; and respondent further excepts to all the rulings and actions for all the reasons set forth in its exceptions to said rebuttal evidence.

117.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in striking out all of the testimony of the witness Mrs. Reed pertaining to the period subsequent to July, 1939, for the reasons among others that said testimony is competent, relevant and material to many, if not all of the issues involved in this case; and for the further reason that said ruling does not designate with any degree of certainty the particular evidence which it was the intention of the Trial Examiner to strike; and for the further reason that the Trial Examiner has permitted testimony to be adduced by the Board and I. L. G. W. U. relating to the same matters to which said stricken testi- [fol. 311] mony relates, and the striking of same is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and denies to respondent a fair trial herein and denies to respondent due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings and action having been taken over and against the objections of respondent.

In connection with this exception, respondent refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pages 5800, 5801), and excepts to the rulings and action therein set forth for each and all of the reasons hereinabove stated, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Now, there are two or three other matters that I think I should dispose of with respect to Mrs. Reed. I am now striking out all of her testimony which pertains to the period subsequent to July 1939, in accordance with a ruling which I made after Mrs. Reed testified. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: So, any matters after that are stricken."

118.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in rejecting the offer of proof made by respondent with respect to the testimony of witness Wave Tobin which offer of proof is designated as Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS and to the Trial Examiner's determination that the matters therein are not material to the issues herein, and excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in ruling and determining that the testimony already given in the hearing by said witness Wave Tobin is not material or relevant to the issues herein, and excepts to the Trial Examiner's ruling and action in striking out the testimony of said witness Wave Tobin, for the reasons among others that said testimony given by said Wave Tobin and that offered to be proved by her in said offer of proof was and is competent, material and relevant to the issues herein, and for the further reason that said testimony so stricken and said testimony so offered to be proved by said witness relates to matters as to which the Trial Examiner permitted the Board and the I. L. G. W. U. [fol. 312] to adduce testimony, and the striking out of the testimony so given and the refusal to receive the testimony so offered is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and deprives respondent of a fair trial herein and of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings and action having been taken by the Trial Examiner over and against the objections of respondent.

In connection with this exception, respondent refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pages 5802, 5803), and excepts to the rulings, actions and comments of the Trial Examiner therein set forth for each and all of the reasons hereinabove stated, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think there is one other matter, the matter with respect to Wave Tobin. I believe at the time that matter came up Mr. Ingraham presented an offer of proof and a protest against the ruling of the Examiner, which I made on August 19, 1942, which is Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS. Now, as far as the offer of proof is concerned, I have gone over Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS, and I don't consider that there are any matters in there which are material in the hearing, and therefore I reject the offer of proof; and furthermore— . . . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: And furthermore, with respect to the testimony which Wave Tobin has thus far given, I have reviewed that, and I do not consider that it is material or relevant to the issues, in this case, and accordingly it is stricken.

"Now, with these rulings I think, Mr. Ingraham, we are ready to proceed."

Respondent further excepts to said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner because of his subsequent rulings permitting the Board and I. L. G. W. U. to adduce in rebuttal evidence relating to matters which said witness would have testified concerning, and permitted evidence in rebuttal which was not proper rebuttal but which related to matters which should properly have been adduced in the Board's case in chief, if pertinent at all.

[fol. 313] 119.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to restrict the evidence of the Board and ILGWU after Respondent and Intervener rested in the further hearing, to proper rebuttal evidence and in permitting the Board and ILGWU to adduce extensive testimony which, if pertinent at all to the issues, was properly a part of their case in chief, and not proper to be offered in rebuttal.

These rulings arose upon Respondent's objections to the question asked of Board's witness Etta Dorsey at page 5844 of the Record as follows: "Q. How did you learn of that meeting?" (referring to the organization meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on April 27, 1937), as not being proper rebuttal testimony, and upon Respondent's motion to strike the answer given and upon Respondent's objection to the succeeding question (at page 5844-45): "Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?" as not being proper rebuttal testimony. The next fifty pages of the Record contain a discussion of this objection, as a result of which the Trial Examiner permitted the answer given to stand and permitted the Board to continue the examination upon matters covered by the Board's case in chief. To this ruling and action of the Trial Examiner Respondent excepts for all the reasons and grounds set forth in the statements and arguments of Respondent's and Intervener's counsel appearing at pages 5844 to 5895 inclusive of the Record; and for the same reasons excepts to all the testimony thereafter adduced by the Board and ILGWU from said witness Etta Dorsey in pursuance of said ruling and action of the Trial Examiner.

[fol. 314] In connection with this exception and for convenience Respondent refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record (pages 5844, 5845, 5848, 5857, 5859, 5886 and 5894) setting forth the Trial Examiner's position and rulings to which rulings and action Respondent excepts for all the reasons aforesaid, which are too voluminous to be stated here, and for the further reasons that said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent in view of the Trial Examiner rulings limiting Respondent's and Intervener's evidence to the offers of proof and in restricting Respondent to some ten or eleven employee witnesses and in refusing to permit Intervener to put on any witnesses, and because in applying said ruling the Trial Examiner permitted the Board and ILGWU to go far beyond even the limits set by the Trial Examiner in his said ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and as set forth in said excerpts from the transcript of the Record, by reason of all of which Respondent has been denied a fair and impartial trial and due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The excerpts above referred to are as follows:

"Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is not proper rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: This is a preliminary question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is preliminary, she may answer.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you want the question read?

A. No, that's all right. Well, I don't remember, but it was either by telephone or by Mrs. Wheery telling us; she usually went around and told the instructors.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out; it is not a preliminary question, it is an attempt to prove the Board's case in chief, not proper rebuttal.

[fol. 315] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll determine whether it is preliminary. You may proceed.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear your closing ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said I will determine whether it is preliminary.

Mr. Reed: This answer, now, is not a preliminary answer.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as not proper rebuttal." (pp. 5844-45).

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, all I can say is, Senator, I am going to require that Miss Weyand confine it to rebuttal. I further want to say that this undoubtedly is preliminary in nature. Now, if this lady, who was there at the time, is in position to testify concerning these definite things which these people testified to, I think it is rebuttal.

Now, I have no idea, and will say so now, of permitting Miss Weyand or Mr. Langsdale to go into this entire subject matter in any form or fashion, and it is confined to rebuttal." (p. 5848)

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is possibility of that, Senator, providing I were to permit it. Now, we may differ as to just what is rebuttal. I think clearly Miss Weyand's first statement is entirely out of line, as far as I am concerned. I mean by that that you aren't going to try all the issues of this case over again, but I am still convinced in my own mind that if this witness testifies about these matters, which these four or five or six girls testified about here, that were in her section, and about specific matters in their testimony in the record, I don't see why that isn't rebuttal." (p. 5857)

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, I think my statement that I have made two or three times, about what is rebuttal, would cover, perhaps, that matter. Where a specific witness — you had several specific witnesses say that they worked in section 415 during March and April, that the instructor did not tell them to go to this meeting, nor did she say anything to them." (p. 5859).

* * * * * *

[fol. 316] "Trial Examiner Batten: I think that particular matter is in line with the suggestion which I indicated this morning, without having given any thought to the matter. As a matter of fact, I am more certain now, after having given the matter some thought, that my statement this morning concerning it is correct, and I am equally certain that my statement to Miss Weyand this morning about her first proposition is correct. So, as the result of two hours or two and a half hours of giving it some thought and listening to all counsel, I am still of the opinion that my statement on it this morning was substantially correct." (p. 5886).

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, you may proceed, in line with the suggestions which I made this morning, and if you have any other testimony in line with your other suggestion, you make it as an offer." (p. 5894).

120.

At pages 5895 to 5899 of the Record Respondent objected to questions as shown by the following excerpts from the Record and was allowed a continuing objection to said line of questioning, to-wit:

By Miss Weyand:

"Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to for all of the reasons heretofore asserted as not proper rebuttal and particularly unless the question is limited to the particular witnesses heretofore offered by respondent, by name.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer the question, and then you may proceed, Miss Weyand, to bring it within the ruling which I have made. (p. 5895)

* * * * * * *

"(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter, as follows:

'Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?')

A. Yes, I do.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How did they learn that?

A. I told the girls.

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to, unless the question is confined to witnesses offered by respondent who were working there in her section. (p. 5896)

* * * * * * *

[fol. 317] By Miss Weyand:

"Q. Was Oma Lee Cooper working in your section at that time?

Mr. Reed: I make the same objection.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I assume we may have the same arrangement we have pursued here all the time, a continuing objection if you so desire.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, we do.

Trial Examiner Batten: In order that you don't have to object to every question, that will continue through with this witness. Of course, it will be necessary to renew it on the next witness.

Mr. Tyler: The same objection will be allowed for the intervenér, as to this witness, I take it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is correct. Let me say this, we will get started here pretty soon, I guess. You may have a continuing objection.

Now, that means to either the respondent or the intervener I am granting a continuing objection to Miss Weyand's examining this witness within the bounds of what I indicated that I thought was proper.

Now, if Miss Weyand exceeds the bounds, I of course, would expect counsel to object, not upon the basis of my ruling, but upon the basis of my statement to Miss Weyand that I don't propose to go into all inclusive matters." (pp. 5898-99).

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting said testimony and in permitting the Board's counsel to continue said line of questioning, and excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling Respondent's and Intervener's objections to each and all of the questions asked by Board's counsel of the witness Etta Dorsey at pages 5895 to 5944 of the transcript for the reasons, among others, that said testimony is not rebuttal and does not come within the Trial Examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and covers matters which Respondent was not permitted to go into in said further hearing herein, and because the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and denies to Respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

[fol. 318] 121.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner denying and overruling each and all of the special objections made by Respondent and Intervener to particular portions of said testimony of Etta Dorsey, which objections and rulings appear on each and all of the following pages of the transcript, to-wit, 5900 to 5904 inclusive, 5907 to 5911 inclusive, 5913, 5914, 5916 to 5922 inclusive, 5924 to 5929 inclusive, 5931 to 5936 inclusive, 5938 to 5941 inclusive and 5943 respectively, for each and all of the reasons given in said respective objections and for the further reason that said questions related to matters which the Trial Examiner refused to permit Respondent and Intervener to go into in further hearing, and because same does not come within the Trial Examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and because by the admission and consideration of said testimony Respondent has been denied a fair trial and due process of law.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6042-6043, to-wit:

"Q. Did the mere fact that you said, 'There is to be a meeting of the employees,' in your opinion amount to an order to attend it?

A. Well, the girls felt like I had the authority—I was given that authority. See?

Mr. Tyler: Now, I object—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. He asked the question, and I suggest that he keeps still until she answers it, and then if he wants to move to strike out any part of it, all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Read the question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter).

[fol. 319] "Trial Examiner Batten: Now, finish your answer.

A. (Continuing) The girls felt like I had the authority to tell them what to do, and when I said, 'Do this,' they usually did it.

Mr. Tyler: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out, because it doesn't state whether she felt she was giving the order, but only what she assumes the employees understood, which wasn't the question, and is a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Langsdale: I submit, the answer is a perfect answer to his question. Certainly she has a right to judge from appearances and conduct of these people. And this is a [preety] late day for Mr. Tyler to be talking about conclusions of the witness.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects because it is not responsive at all to the question."

123.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling Respondent's objection to the Board's questions of the witness Lola Skeens as shown in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6096-6098 and 6100 of the transcript, to-wit:

"Q. Do you know of any occasions upon which she went to Mr. Tyler's office or attended to business of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during working hours?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as not rebuttal of anything in the respondent's case.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: Now, that embraces more than whether she went to his office. The question is, whether she knows of any occasion when she went to his office or attended to business of the union on company time. Now, that is not in rebuttal of anything we have put in this case.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?

A. I told them.

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing objection to this line of questioning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

[fol. 320] "Mr. Hogsett: As not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it is upon the same grounds stated as to the previous witness."

for the reason that said testimony and rulings do not come within Examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence and relates to matters which Respondent and Intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing, and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and denies to Respondent a fair trial and due process of law. In pursuance of the continuing objection allowed to Respondent by the Trial Examiner to said line of questions and testimony, Respondent further excepts to the admission of the testimony thereafter adduced by the Board and ILGWU from said witness Lola Skeens in pursuance of said ruling and action of the Trial Examiner appearing in the transcript of the Record at pages 6098 to 6114 inclusive and at pages 6166 to 6168 inclusive, for the reason that same is not proper rebuttal evidence but if pertinent to the issues at all was a part of the Board's case in chief, and for the further reason that same does not come within the limits set by the Trial Examiner as to rebuttal evidence and for the further reason that same relates to matters which the Trial Examiner refused to permit Respondent and Intervener to go into in said further hearing herein, and because the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and denies to respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6172 to 6174 inclusive, to-wit:

[fol. 321]. "Mr. Hogsett: If the Court please, we object to this line of examination on the ground that it isn't rebuttal of anything. In other words, it is just going into the Board's case in chief again.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is, insofar as it attempts to determine what transpired at the meeting.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that is the line of inquiry I am now objecting to.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, of course, part of this testimony, as I recall it, was this witness' statement as to why she joined.

Mr. Hogsett: Which is not rebuttal either.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's take them one at a time. I agree with you that the other matter, I don't believe is, the matter as to what transpired. But I gathered from the questions that it was an attempt of Miss Weyand's to set the time of the occurrence rather than what transpired.

Mr. Hogsett: Then, if that is so, I move to strike all of the testimony of this witness as to what transpired at the meeting of April 27, 1937, because it isn't proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it may stand, because I think that was the purpose of it.

Mr. Hogsett: And I move to strike out what occurred at the latter meeting, for the same reason.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing objection to this testimony, for reasons we have heretofore given?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Of course, I agree that going into what transpired at the meeting is not proper rebuttal, but, as I said before, I don't think that is the purpose of it."

for the reason that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and in pursuance to the continuing objection allowed Respondent by the Trial Examiner Respondent excepts to said rulings and to the admission of all the testimony of said witness Geneva Copenhaver adduced by the Board and ILGWU in pursuance of said ruling and action of the Trial Examiner, appearing in the transcript of the Record at pages 6169 to 6200 inclusive, and pages 6280 to 6287 inclusive, for the reason that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence, and does not come within the limits of the ruling of the Trial Examiner as to rebuttal evidence and relates to matters which the Trial Examiner [fol. 322] refused to permit Respondent and Intervener to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to former rulings of the Trial Examiner and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and denies to Respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

125.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6176-77-78 for the reasons stated in Respondent's objections therein made, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: I offer Board's exhibit No. 37 for identification in evidence.

Mr. Reed: We object—

Trial Examiner Batten: What—For the purpose of indicating it recalled to the witness' mind that she attended the meeting?

Miss Weyand: No. I want to offer it for the purpose of showing that every girl that attended that meeting, as far as I can see, is in uniform. I think that is proper evidence for the Board to consider in connection with the testimony—

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: I am certain everything said officially there is in the record. It doesn't make any difference. I will receive it, and I am receiving it on the same basis I have received other newspaper articles which have been received thus far—I think, about 38 of them.

Mr. Reed: We object as incompetent and immaterial and not proper direct examination, undertaking to introduce into the case as substantive evidence a mere newspaper article, and as not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand the article itself is not offered but merely the picture.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I have received it."

[fol. 323] 126.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, actions and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at Pages 6178-79 and 6182, to-wit:

"Q. Were you working on the same floor with Sylvia Hull the last day Sylvia Hull worked for the company?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you recall what happened that morning?

Mr. Tyler: We object. The Sylvia Hull incident is in no sense proper rebuttal. It was gone into in long detail in the case of the Board in chief.

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, I ask you to just stop for a second and think if this is rebuttal—everything is rebuttal that pertains to the case in any way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, my idea of the Sylvia Hull incident is this—I tried to, I think, in my talk here a month or so ago, indicate I did not think it was within the offers of proof upon which I was taking testimony, but I don't remember whether Mr. Tyler, or who it was, convinced me that I was wrong. I know Mr. Langsdale very strenuously opposed it and said it was a closed book.

Mr. Hogsett: I ask you to draw the line somewhere, if the Examiner please.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: As I recall, both witnesses presented by the Board so far has been permitted to testify about the matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Miss Weyand."

for each and all the reasons therein stated in Respondent's and Intervener's objections and for the further reason that said questions relate to matters which the Trial Examiner refused to permit the Respondent and Intervener to go into in said further hearing and because same does not come within the limits of the ruling made by the Trial Examiner as to rebuttal evidence and because same are contrary to former rulings made by the Trial Examiner in said further hearing and because same are unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and deprived Respondent of a fair trial and due process of law.

[fol. 324] 127.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit respondent to recall Wave

Tobin to the stand, as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 5815, to-wit:

"Mr. Reed: Now, Your Honor said for us to proceed. We would now like to recall Wave Tobin, we haven't finished her examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Senator, I disposed of that matter by my ruling on the offer of proof, and so forth."

128.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6189, 6190, to-wit:

"Q. Did you consider your instructors as supervisors?

"A. Absolutely.

"Mr. Ingraham: Now—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment?

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move to strike the answer out as not proper rebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the answer may be stricken. While you make your objection—I assume you had one?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I object to the question on the ground that it is not proper rebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. Absolutely, I regarded her as being my supervisor.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Why?

"Mr. Ingraham: May I have a continuing objection?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Well, I think there is already a continuing objection on this witness.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, if not, I want a continuing objection."

And further excepts to the admission of subsequent testimony of the same nature received in pursuance of said ruling.

[fol. 325] 129.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6197, 6198, to-wit:

"Q. Do instructors eat in the cafeteria with the other girls?

"A. They eat—

"Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Now, I object to that question for the reason it is immaterial to any issue in this case, and it is not proper rebuttal.

"Mr. Hogsett: If I may supplement by this suggestion, that illustrates the thin character of this Board's case, that they would have to rely on the fact that domination could be shown by an instructor eating in the same cafeteria. Now, that is getting down to pretty thin stuff, I submit, and the subject matter is wholly immaterial.

"Miss Weyand: I don't offer to prove they eat in the same cafeteria. That isn't the purpose of this question.

"Mr. Hogsett: Well, if it is in the same field, the same atmosphere.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer the question.

"Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection, it is not rebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling."

130.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objection to the question asked by counsel for the intervener of the witness Geneva Copenhaver at page 6250 of the record as to what was her husband's occupation.

131.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to testify as to matters which were not proper rebuttal evidence over the objections of the respondent and intervener, which objections appear in the transcript of the record at page 6311 as follows, to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Had you ever seen Mr. Tyler before the meeting at which the union was formed?

"A. No.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, with respect to all of these questions, the intervener objects, with respect to this witness, as not proper rebuttal.

[fol. 326] "Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection."

And respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the Board's counsel and counsel for the I. L. G. W. U. to continue said line of questioning of the witness Bessie Weilert and excepts to each and all the questions asked by Board's counsel and by counsel for the I. L. G. W. U. of said witness as set forth in the record at pages 6308 to 6355 inclusive, 6358 to 6360 inclusive, 6435 to 6458 inclusive, 6496 to 6514 inclusive and 6528, in pursuance of said continuing objection, and excepts to each and all the rulings of the Trial Examiner permitting said evidence to be adduced, for the reasons among others that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does not come within the Trial Examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and for the reason that same relates to matters which respondent and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing, and is contrary to prior rulings of the Trial Examiner and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and denies to respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

132.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in refusing to sustain the objections and motions to strike of the respondent and intervener to the testimony given by the witness Bessie Weilert at pages 6315 to 6317 inclusive, for the reason that said testimony was not proper rebuttal testimony, related to a time prior to November, 1936 to which the Trial Examiner limited respondent in its examinations and related to alleged events occurring prior to the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, and is wholly immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant to the issues herein.

[fol. 327] 133.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to sustain respondent's objections and motion to strike out the answers and testimony of the witness Bessie Weilert given at pages 6327 to 6329 inclusive, for the reason that said testimony was not responsive to the questions asked and was not proper rebuttal testimony.

134.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to strike out the answer of the witness referred to in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 6343, to-wit:

"Q. Do you know Mrs. Gray?

"A. I do.

"Q. Who is she?

"A. She was manager of our outside store.

"Mr. Langsdale: I didn't get the answer.

"A. She was manager of our outside store, to my knowledge.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) How do you know she is the manager?

"A. Well, we always had to see Mrs. Gray if we wanted anything in the store, to see Mrs. Gray, and when it was remnant bundles, she would send i. d. m.'s, and say it was the remnant bundles.

"Mr. Reed: I can't understand the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

"(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)"

"A. And her signature was on the i. d. m.

"Mr. Lane: Now, I move to strike out the answer that Mrs. Gray was manager of the store, for the reason it is a mere conclusion; and the following answer of the witness doesn't state any facts upon which the conclusion can properly be based.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

[fol. 328] 135.

Respondent excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner at pages 6349, 6350, permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to state that she considered the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union a company dominated union or a company union and to state why she thought so, as follows: "A. Because it seems it never done any good when you took grievances up with that committee; I never did get anywhere when I was on the committee, and everything went just as the company seen fit."

136.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner at pages 6444 to 6446 inclusive, in permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to answer the question of counsel for the I. L. G. W. U., to-wit: "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) So then this part of this document, which you signed, is not true?" and the question: "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Or 'That said meeting was convened after the close of working hours at the plant.' That is not true, is it?" and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto.

137.

At page 6497 of the record, counsel for the Board asked the following question and the witness Bessie Weilert made the following answer, to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): Have you ever heard any girl, as a result of complaining in a union meeting or to a committee or anywhere, complain that she had been treated unfairly because she had made the complaint?

"A. I don't know that they put it in those words, that it was merely because of the complaint, but I think it was done, plenty of them."

Respondent and intervener moved to strike out the answer and particularly that part of the answer "but I think it was done, plenty of them" and the Trial Examiner ruled that it should stand, to which ruling and action respondent excepts, for the reason that said answer is a conclusion, not proper rebuttal and prejudicial to respondent.

[fol. 329] 138.

At page 6536 of the record, the following occurred:

"Q. I hand you I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10 which appears at pages 5375 and 5961 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to state when you first heard of that petition.

"A. In the early spring of 1937.

"Q. Where were you when you first heard of it?

"A. In Mrs. Reed's home.

"Q. What was the conversation that took place on that occasion?

"A. Well, I had just come home from New York, and—

"Mr. Lane: Just a moment, if Your Honor please. The intervener objects to this and all similar questions. It is not proper rebuttal testimony.

"Mr. Hogsett. We join in that objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled."

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the foregoing excerpts and further excepts to his action in permitting the Board's counsel and counsel for the I. L. G. W. U. to continue said line of questioning of the witness Marguerite Keyes, and further excepts to each and all the questions of said counsel to said witness, appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6535 to 6552 inclusive, for the reason that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does not come within the limits of the ruling as to rebuttal evidence made by the Trial Examiner, and for the reason that same relates to matters which respondent and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to prior rulings of the Trial Examiner, and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and denies to respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

139.

At pages 6572-6573 of the record appears the following:

"Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Loyalty League?

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener objects; because this is not proper rebuttal.

"Mr. Hogsett: We join in that objection, asking that counsel be restricted to rebuttal.

[fol. 330] "Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Mr. Hogsett: May we have a continuing objection, as in the case of other witnesses?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

"Mr. Tyler: And the intervener also?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes."

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the foregoing excerpts from the record and further excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting Board's counsel and counsel for the I. L. G. W. U. to continue examination of said witness May Stevens, and excepts to each and all the questions asked by Board's counsel and by counsel of the I. L. G. W. U. of said witness as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6573 to 6595 inclusive and 6638 to 6647 inclusive, and excepts to each and all the rulings of the Trial Examiner permitting said evidence to be adduced on behalf of the Board and I. L. G. W. U., for the reasons among others that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does not come within the Trial Examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and for the reason that same relates to matters which respondent and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to prior rulings of the Trial Examiner, and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and denies to respondent a fair trial and due process of law.

140.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6581, 6582, 6584, to-wit:

"Q. What made you feel that way?

"A. Well, the Fern Sigler incident, just previous to that, and by Mrs. Donnelly saying we would never have to have a union, and I decided that they had changed so sudden that it was surely something for the company and I had better join. And when in 1934, when I was in another shop, at Twenty-sixth and Main, I met the Donnelly girls they had sent to that plant that were union girls—

"Mr. Reed: Oh, wait a minute, now. That certainly is not rebuttal.

[fol. 331] "Trial Examiner Batten: Now, let the witness finish, Senator. If there is something you think should be stricken, all right, but don't interrupt the witness.

"Read the answer thus far, please.

"(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Finish your answer.

"A. (Continuing) —and talked to them most every day about the conditions and why they were sent down there, and they were told that they were not making their guarantee, and they knew it was because they were union girls and that they would eventually be laid off.

"Mr. Reed: I move to strike that as incompetent, immaterial, and as not rebuttal, being mere hearsay, and binding on no one. I think the Examiner excluded us from the right to even ask questions about 1934.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, assuming I did, hasn't this witness a right to say why she felt that way? * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten. * * * It may stand."

for the reasons therein stated and because said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and shows the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent.

141.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the witness May Stevens to answer the following question appearing in the record at page 6606, to-wit:

"Q. By the way, what was your husband then, an organizer for the Union?", and in rejecting the following offers of proof made by respondent and intervener appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6608, 6609, to-wit:

"Mr. Hogsett: We offer to prove that the witness on the stand that at the time concerning which she has been testifying, namely, in February, March, and April, 1937, and continuously up to the present time, her husband then was and at all such times has been and is now an organizer for a labor union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll reject the offer on the basis of what I have just said.

"Mr. Hogsett: Yes, Mr. Ingraham says that we desire now to make a similar offer of proof in relation to Geneva Copenhaver. * * *

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener asks to be allowed to join in both offers of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You don't mean Mr. Langsdale's proof.

"Mr. Tyler: No, Mrs. Copenhaver and this one.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Both of the offers made by Mr. Hogsett? Mr. Tyler wants to join in the two offers of proof made by Mr. Hogsett."

[fol. 332] 142.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objection to the following question asked by respondent of the witness May Stevens at page 6662, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Hogsett) Do you remember the taking of an oath in such a way that you would knowingly make a false affidavit?"

and in rejecting respondent's offer of proof (page 6663) that the witness if permitted to answer said question, would answer same in the affirmative.

143.

Respondent excepts to the comment of the Trial Examiner embraced in the words "without all of the flourishes" contained in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record at page 6667, to-wit:

"Q. The fact is, the Sylvia Hull incident occurred some seven weeks after the March 2 paper was signed by the employees, didn't it?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Did the Sylvia Hull incident occur seven weeks after?—without all of the flourishes.

"Mr. Hogsett: Well, I don't know why there is any flourish."

144.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 6702.

Trial Examiner Batten: "Now, you may answer this if you want to, Mr. Ingraham, and if you don't want to you don't need to: Am I to assume you are going to have all of the girls in section 518 here and testify about these specific matters?

Mr. Ingraham: I believe we are going to have a large number of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to tell you now that you are not, so don't plan on it. I would say, not to exceed three witnesses on those matters, out of that section."

[fol. 333] for the reasons among others that said limitations upon Respondent to three witnesses out of said Section 518 was unfair and prejudicial to Respondent, for the reason that said testimony related to highly important issues in view of the former findings of the Board and Trial Examiner and of the contentions of the Board and I.L.G.W.U. in this hearing, and unless the Trial Examiner was satisfied that the testimony of said three witnesses established the facts to which they testified, said limitations was unfair and prejudicial to Respondent, and in any event Respondent was entitled to put on additional witnesses for the consideration of the Board and Court and the limitation denied to Respondent a fair trial and due process of Law.

145.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6704-05-06:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): There has been testimony given that the girls returned to work in that section after attending meetings. What are the facts about that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Ingraham, I do not believe that is proper surrebuttal, because there was testimony by some witnesses concerning that and the Board put on some concerning it. Now, I don't believe that is proper questioning at this stage of the proceedings.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): There has been testimony given that if an operator did not intend to come to work she would notify her instructor. What are the facts about that?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): There has been testimony given that after Mr. Baty took charge of the factory in 1935, and up until July 15, 1939, instructors had the authority to transfer girls from one section to another. What is the fact about that?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebutal. Mr. Baty, in 1939, ran the whole gamut with reference to that particular issue.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

* * * * * *

[fol. 334] "Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question to the effect that, Did girls return to work after attending any of the meetings referred to? she would answer in the negative.

Respondent further offers to prove by this witness—

Mr. Lansdale: Just a moment. I want to make an objection to that offer, for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

Respondent further offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question as to whom the girls would notify if they were not coming to work, she would answer, 'The employment office,' and not 'the instructor.'

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to in the offer for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any others?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offers are rejected."

for the reasons among others that said rulings and action prevented the Respondent from adducing proper and highly material evidence in view of the former findings of the Trial Examiner and Board and the issues as developed in the hearing, and by the denial thereof Respondent has been denied a fair trial and due process of law.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6706-7-8-9, to wit:

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Mrs. Chaney, did you ever know of any instructor directing the girls in her section [—] go with her, the instructor, to any union meeting?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Did you hear Etta Dorsey give any instructions or information about the holding of union meetings to the girls in her section?

[fol. 335]. "Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal, and repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Did you ever see any group of girls being herded together to a meeting of the union by any instructor?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal. Respondent has so characterized it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): You joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you know whether the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company obtained any improved conditions by the contract which the union made with the company in May, 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove that this witness, if allowed to answer the question as to whether she ever saw any group of girls taken to union meetings by the instructor, would answer that she did not.

Mr. Langsdale: That offer is objected to for the reasons offered against the question.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: * * * And I offer to prove that this witness, if asked the question whether there was any evidence of employees being herded to the union meetings, would answer No.

I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to testify as to whether she knew of benefits received by the employees as a result of the contract of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the company of May 27, 1937, would state that she did know of definite benefits received by reason of that contract.

Mr. Langsdale: The offers are objected to for the reasons given against the questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected.

Mr. Tyler: Of course, it is understood that an exception is allowed, without stating—Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you have an automatic exception."

147.

[fol. 336] Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 6716, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): Did you ever work, on a transfer slip, in a section other than your regular section —the transfer slip I have reference to—

Mr. Hogsett (Interrupting): Objected to on the same ground, as not proper cross-examination in surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer."

148.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6731-32-33, to wit:

"Mr. Hogsett: On page 6675 of the record yesterday, while Mrs. Stevens was on the stand, I made a verbal offer of proof in respect to the amount of dues of the International—

* * * * * *

I offer to prove by the witness May Stevens that the amount of regular dues of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the time of her membership was 35c a week, which, for 52 weeks a year would be $18.20 a year, and that in addition to that there were two regular assessments, one of $1 per year as a death benefit assessment, and the second an assessment of $1 a year as a fund in the Work Labor Movement as a whole. That is all.

Mr. Langsdale: The offer is objected to as immaterial, doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. It is certainly immaterial, unless they prove what they got for the 35c a week, and how little the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union got for their 25c a month.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer, because my recollection is that I rejected your tentative offer."

149.

(a) Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record relating to the testimony of witness Mrs. Reece, to wit: (pp. 6742-43-44.)

[fol. 337] "Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Mrs. Reece, did you ever hear any instructor direct the girls or the workers in her section to attend union meetings in a group?

A. No, I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that question with the prior witness. I do not consider it proper.

Mr. Tyler: I expect to ask two more questions on the same line. Shall I make an offer of proof first, or—

Trial Examiner Batten: No. Ask the questions, Mr. Tyler.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly plant gather the girls in her section together and take them to any union meeting?

A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I make the same ruling with respect to that question, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Langsdale: And I ask that the answer be stricken.

Trail Examiner Batten. I will wait until Mr. Tyler makes his offer of proof.

Proceed Mr. Tyler.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): What was the custom in the Donnelly factory as to whether the employees went to union meetings with anybody they pleased or not?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling I made to the other two questions, Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: * * * I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to answer the questions which the Examiner has sustained objections to, she would testify that she never heard any instructor direct the girls in her section to attend any union meeting in a group; that she never saw any instructor gather the girls together and take them to a union meeting; and that the custom of the Donnelly plant was that employees would attend union meetings with whomever they pleased, without obstruction or pressure or limitation.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the offer for all of the reasons given against the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected."

[fol. 338] (b) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers by the witness Mrs. Hutchinson as set forth in the transcript of the Record at pages 6751-52-53.

(c) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Iris Litten as set forth in the transcript of the Record at pages 6789-90-91.

(d) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Lora Fries, as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6811-12-13-14.

(e) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Lillie Reynolds, as set forth in the transcript of the Record at pages 6824-25-26.

(f) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Alvin Reifel, as set forth in the transcript of the Record at page 6941.

(g) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness, Elizabeth Barrett, as set forth in the transcript of the Record at pages 6947-48-49.

[fol. 339] (h) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of Marjorie Green, as set forth in the transcript of the Record at pages 6962-63-64.

150.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6762-63-64-66-67:

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I intended to state before I put this witness on the stand that I understood you to say that you limited respondent to three witnesses in connection with the matters that Etta Dorsey testified about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that the way you understand it?

Mr. Ingraham: I understood you to say that very positively.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think you are correct.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I understand the limitation would be with reference to all matters inquired about this morning in connection with Etta Dorsey's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: My understanding of what I intended to do was limit you to three witnesses from that section with respect to the matters that you asked the witnesses about. Now, is there any difference between that and your understanding?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that is what I understood you to say. Of course, we will prepare an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you have an offer, you make it right now, Mr. Ingraham.

. . . . . .

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by Ruth Strandt, Ida Barton, Leone Sams, Beatrice Face, Goldie Sprague, Nina Gilardi, Grace Pardun, Anne Belan, Lulu Gordon, Ruth Chaney Miller, Ida Mauk, Estel Rothgeb, Ora Dull, Lela Stevens, Hazel Higgins, Violet Hawkins, Anne Elizabeth Stone, and each of them, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were employed during the months of March, April, and May, 1937, by the Donnelly Garment Company, and during said time worked in section 518; that during all of said time, Etta Dorsey was their instructor and they had no other instructor during said time except Etta Dorsey; that Etta Dorsey did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid by the Donnelly Garment Company for the time spent at the meeting of March 18, 1937, where Mrs. Reed spoke; and they were not, in fact, paid for the time spent at said meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting of April 27, 1937, and they, in fact, were not paid [fol. 340] for the time spent at that meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not state to them that they would be paid for time spent at union meetings, and they, in fact, were not paid for time spent at any union meetings; that they did not know of any employee being paid for time spent at any said union meetings; or the meeting of March 18, April 27, or any other meeting; that they did not attend any meetings during said time and return to work.

Mr. Langsdale: Union meetings, you mean?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, any of the aforesaid meetings, and return to work; that in the event they did not intend to come to work they would notify the employment office, and would not notify their instructor; that the employment office would transfer operators in their section and it was not done by the instructor.

* * * * * * *

I want to add to the offer of proof that each of said stated persons will further testify that they never received a pay check with the section number on it that was not the correct section number in which said person worked, and that each of said persons' pay checks had on it section number 518 during the months of March, April, and May of 1937.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, my understanding is that the offer of proof is in line with the testimony of the three witnesses, and taking into consideration the objections offered by the various attorneys representing the parties, and upon that basis I reject the offer."

for the reasons, among others, that said line of testimony was highly important to the issues herein in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and Board, and in view of the contentions of the Board and I. L. G. W. U. in the further hearing and unless the Trial Examiner was satisfied that the three witnesses who had already testified to such matters had established same, it was prejudicial and unfair to Respondent to limit such testimony to three witnesses, and in any event Respondent was entitled to put on further witnesses as to said matters for the consideration of the Board and Court, and the limitation made by the Trial Examiner denied to Respondent a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 341] 151.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comment of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6784-85, to-wit:

"Q. Do you recall ever being paid for any time you spent at any Loyalty League meetings?

A. No.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: —that doesn't change the situation at all, because this morning I had no idea of going into all of these generalities, which I don't think carry a great deal of weight, anyway."

152.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the Transcript of the Record at pages 6834-35-36-37-38, to-wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, does the same ruling apply to section 413 as to section 518?

Trial Examiner Batten: Exactly.

Mr. Ingraham: Then respondent makes an offer of proof that if Marie Richardson, Hazel Hardman, Emilea Raines, Grace Short Kunther, Eva Liberman, Edna Tattershall, Lois Kesinger, Millie Ihle, Katherine Sutulovick, Ruth Putnam, Emma Hansen, Edith Alexander, Lillie Reynolds, Bertha Taylor, Lucille Wilkey, Anna Spahr, Pearl Hall, Nellie Stites, Ruth McBride, Lorene Johnson, Beulah Perkins, Mildred Brooks Ballard, Opal Richardson, Dorothy Dietz Sharp, Gladys Rudd, were permitted to testify, they would testify as follows:

That they were employed at the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March, April, and May, 1937; that their instructor was Lola Skeens during said period; that each attended the meeting of March 18, 1937; that Lola Skeens did not notify them or any of them that said meeting was to be held; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section notifying the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens did not inform the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting; that they were not paid for the time spent at that meeting; that each of said persons attended the meeting of April 27, at which time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed; that Lola Skeens did not notify any of them of said meeting; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting, and that the thread girl did not go up the south side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens [fol. 342] did not tell the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at said meeting; and that none of persons named received any pay for the time spent at said meeting; that they attended union meetings, and were never notified by Lola Skeens that said meetings were to be held and were not informed by Lola Skeens that they would be paid for the time spent at said meetings, or any of them; and they were not, in fact, paid for any time spent at any union meeting; that Lola Skeens did not notify them of any Loyalty League meetings, and they were never paid for any time spent at any Loyalty League meetings; that all the meetings above referred to were held after working hours.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, aren't you including two things there that you haven't asked this witness thus far, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: What are those things?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you just said, 'All the meetings were held after working hours,' and you said they would testify that they were not paid for any Loyalty League meetings. I don't recall that you asked this witness that.

Mr. Ingraham: I think I did, and I think I asked at least one of these witnesses if meetings were held after working hours.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought you were making me an offer now on the basis of those three last witnesses.

Mr. Ingraham: I am, and I thought I asked that question.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: * * * I will ask you if it is your intent that the offer of proof cover the testimony covered by the three prior witnesses?

Now, if that is your intention, then I am willing to accept the offer of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am perfectly willing the offer of proof be just as all-inclusive as the last three witnesses.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: That Lola Skeens did not turn the power off for the purpose of sending the employees in section 413 to any of the meetings referred to.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the offer of proof will be rejected on the same grounds as previously stated, for the same reasons, and I will allow the same objections, if there were any."

[fol. 343] for the reasons, among others, that said line of testimony was highly important to the issues herein in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and Board, and in view of the contentions of the Board and I. L. G. W. U. in the further hearing and unless the Trial Examiner was satisfied that the three witnesses who had already testified to such matters had established same, it was prejudicial and unfair to Respondent to limit such testimony to three witnesses, and in any event Respondent was entitled to put on further witnesses as to said matters for the consideration of the Board and Court, and the limitation made by the Trial Examiner denied to Respondent a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 344] 153.

(a) Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to the examination of the witness Fred Brown as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6915, 6916, to-wit:

"Q. Do you know whether the employees obtained any benefits—additional rights under that contract that they didn't have before?

"A. Yes, they did. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think, Mr. Tyler, I want to open up that matter now, so I will ask you not to. If you have an offer of proof on it that you want to make, all right.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove that this witness, if allowed to answer the question as to whether benefits were derived from the contract in the spring of 1937 and what the benefits were, would—

"Mr. Langsdale: Which contract?

"Mr. Tyler: I think there is only one.

"Mr. Langsdale: Two.

"Mr. Tyler: All right. The contract of May 27, 1937, as supplemented by the wage agreement of June 22, 1937.

"— would testify that he does not remember in detail all of such benefits, but that he is positive that some of the minimum—that the minimum pay before the contract was $15.00 a week and that by reason of the contract the minimum for anyone was raised to $16.50 a week, and that the payments made to certain individuals, regardless of contract rights, were increased by reason of the contract, and that the time allowed for vacations with pay to certain employees was increased over the custom, as well as being established as a legal right which had not existed before, and that there were other benefits, although he may not recall them in detail.

"Mr. Langsdale: The offer is objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection. I don't think it is proper."

(b) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of witness Jack McConaughey as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6921, 6922.

(c) Respondent further excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Mabel Riggs as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6933, 6934.

[fol. 345] 154.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 6928, made with reference to the witness Jack McConaughey, to-wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I do offer to prove by this witness, should he be permitted to testify on this, his answer would be that the union meetings were attended by the employees going to the meeting section by section, for the reason that the elevator service was limited to two elevators, with a capacity of 15 each, and that, therefore, it would be utterly impossible for all of the employees to reach the meeting at the same time.

"Mr. Hogsett: We had no objection to his inquiring of the witness whether that is so or not—whether that is the witness' testimony or Mr. Langsdale's improvisation.

"Mr. Tyler: I object to the offer of proof because, as a matter of fact, the witness' testimony would not be to that effect. The witness is here, and if anybody wants to settle it, the opportunity is apparent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think I am going to start out, at this stage of the proceedings, to test out whether the offers of proof that have been offered so far are justified."

155.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts of the transcript of the record at pages 6967, 6968, 6969, 6970:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I am still more convinced that any more witnesses along this line—it isn't only cumulative but it is repetitious, especially if they testified in the prior hearing, as was indicated this morning. If you have witnesses you want to present who will testify to specific matters or other matters, you may produce them.

"Mr. Tyler: I have one witness who will testify to an entirely separate state of facts. But I except to Your Honor's ruling, and I would like to make an offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by the following witnesses: Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton—

"Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I wish the Examiner would permit him to bring Rose Todd here and put her on the stand.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed.

"Mr. Tyler: (Continuing) —Hobart Atherton, Walter Higgins, Mary McClellan, and Finland Rife, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union between April 27, 1937, and July 15, 1939; and that at some part of that time they were members of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that at no [fol. 346] time and on no occasion during that period were they ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for attending Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or meetings of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that they had no knowledge of and never saw any instructor gather the employees in her section together and take them as a group to any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that the employees were free to attend such meetings with whom and in such manner as they chose, without any interference, dictation or pressure from the employer; and that the women employees in the Donnelly plant frequently attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held after working hours while still wearing their work aprons; and that they were never paid for the time spent at any meetings of either the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer for the reasons I have previously stated.

"Mr. Hogsett: Respondent joins in the offer and respectfully excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, understand, my rejection of the offer, under those circumstances, would be also applicable to you."

for the reasons among others that said line of testimony was highly important to the issues herein involved in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and Board and in view of the contentions of the Board and I.L.G.W.U. in the further hearing and said rulings and actions were unfair and highly prejudicial to respondent and intervener unless the Trial Examiner was convinced that the facts testified to by the witnesses already called sufficiently established such facts so as to require findings in accordance therewith and even in such event, respondent and intervener were entitled to have further witnesses called and testify with reference to said matters, for the consideration of the Board and Court, and the refusal of the Trial Examiner to permit intervener to call further witnesses for such purpose denied to respondent and intervener a fair trial and deprived them of due process of law in contravention to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 347] 156.

Respondent excepts to each and all the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner contained or referred to in the foregoing exceptions numbered 56 to 155 inclusive, for each and all of the reasons therein set forth or referred to and because same show the bias and nonjudicial attitude of the Trial Examiner and his prejudgment of the issues herein against respondent and because same are unfair and prejudicial to respondent and deny to respondent a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In answer to some of the questions objected to, answers favorable to the respondent were given and respondent does not except to said favorable answers but does except to the rulings as showing the bias and non-judicial attitude of the Trial Examiner.

157.

The erroneous rulings, findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner throughout the record and in the Intermediate Report are so numerous as to prevent setting same forth in detail in these exceptions, but respondent by the omission to except to any of the adverse findings or conclusions of the Trial Examiner in his Intermediate Report or the omission to except to many of the numerous rulings of the Trial Examiner throughout the hearing, does not mean that respondent is admitting the truth or correctness of any of said adverse findings or conclusions or that the correctness of said rulings, and respondent here excepts to any and all adverse rulings, findings or conclusions of the Trial Examiner.

158.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner rejecting respondent's offer of proof and protest against the ruling of the Examiner made August 19, 1942, contained in Board's Exhibit No. 1 SSSSS, as appears from page 6981 of the transcript of the record here-[fol. 348] in, for the reasons among others that the testimony therein referred to and offered to be proved was highly important to the issues involved herein in view of the rulings of the Trial Examiner admitting evidence offered by the Board and I.L.G.W.U. relating to the same subject matter as that sought to be proved by said witness Wave Tobin and in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and the Board and in view of the contentions of the Board and I.L.G.W.U. in the further hearing herein, and said ruling and action in rejecting said offer of proof and in refusing to permit respondent to examine said Wave Tobin with reference to said matters and with reference to such other pertinent matters as would have been elicited in the course of such examination, and in denying to respondent the right to place its witnesses on the stand in the order it desired, and denying to respondent the right to continue and complete the examination of said Wave Tobin before proceeding to the introduction of the evidence of other witnesses, were highly unfair and prejudicial to respondent and there was no basis for the exercise of any sound discretion of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive such testimony and the denial thereof and the rejection of said offer of proof deprived respondent of a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 6981 of the transcript of the record herein denying respondent's reoffer of certain offers of proof and respondent's reoffer of Respondent's Exhibit No. 2 (rejected) and Respondent's reoffer of Intervener's Exhibit No. 20 (rejected) and each of same, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in the foregoing exception No. 158. This refers to all the offers of proof made by respondent in the former hearing of this matter before the Trial Examiner, including Board's Exhibit No. 1-OOOO and Board's Exhibits Nos. 1-JJJJ, 1-NNNN, 1-QQQQ, 1-XXXX, and Intervener's offer of proof Board's Exhibit No. 1-RRRR, and each of same.

160.

[fol. 349] Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth on page 6982 of the record herein rejecting and denying respondent's supplemental offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit No. 1-TTTTT, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in respondent's exception No. 158 herein.

161.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 6982 of the record herein, rejecting and denying respondent's offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit No. 1-UUUUU for the reasons among others that the testimony therein referred to and offered to be proved was highly important to the issues involved herein in view of the rulings of the Trial Examiner admitting evidence offered by the Board and I.L.G.W.U. relating to the same subject matters referred to in said offer and in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and the Board and in view of the contentions of the Board and I. L. G. W. U. in the further hearing herein, and the rejection of said offer of proof and the denial to respondent to adduce the evidence therein referred to was unfair and highly prejudicial to respondent and there was no basis for the exercise of any sound discretion on the part of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive said testimony and said rulings deprived respondent of a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

162.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 6982 of the record herein rejecting and denying respondent's offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit No. 5-VVVVV, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in respondent's exception No. 161 herein.

163.

[fol. 350] Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 6982 of the transcript of the record herein, rejecting and denying respondent's offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit 1-WWWWW, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in respondent's exception No. 161 herein.

164.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 6982 of the Transcript of the record herein, rejecting and denying intervener's offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit 1-XXXXX, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in respondent's exception No. 161 herein.

165.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth at page 6983 of the transcript of the record herein, rejecting and denying respondent's offers of proof, and each of same, of witnesses employed or formerly employed in Sections 518 and 413 of the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in respondent's exception No. 161 herein.

166.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6984, 6985, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Yesterday there was a witness, Mary Copowycz, on the stand, and during the cross-examination of Mr. Tyler, which begins at page 6879, the question at line 2, the question at line 6, and the answers thereto, the question at line 4, page 6882, and the answer, and the question at line 8, and the answer—those questions and answers are stricken, in accordance with my prior ruling on those other witnesses. Those are the questions which I find are the same as the others, Mr. Tyler. The answers may stand as an offer of proof."

167.

[fol. 351] Respondent excepts to the findings of the Trial Examiner that check-off cards were distributed by the Respondent to its employees for their signature and to the finding of the Trial Examiner that Rose Todd went to the Respondent's plant at St. Joseph, Missouri to organize the employees in that factory, and was absent from her employment about a half of day without salary deduction therefor, and excepts to the findings of the Trial Examiner that instructors regard themselves as supervisors and that they exercised supervisory and economic control over the operators and are regarded by the operators as supervisory employees, and that they are responsible to Baty for the quantity and quality of work in their respective sections, and that Baty never gave them any instructions or directions or conferred with them about their work, and excepts to the findings of the Trial

Examiner as to what payrolls Rose Todd and other persons were carried on, and to the findings of the Trial Examiner to the effect that business of the I.L.G.W.U. was conducted during business hours, as not being supported by the evidence.

168.

Respondent excepts to the repeated rulings of the Trial Examiner permitting the Board and I.L.G.W.U. to adduce evidence relating to various subjects and relating to various periods of time, and to his ruling refusing to permit Respondent and Intervener to introduce countervailing evidence relating to said subjects and relating to said periods of time.

169.

Respondent excepts to the several rulings of the Trial Examiner whereby he refused to hear further witnesses on the part of Respondent and Intervener as to various issues involved without signifying that the matters con-[fol. 352] tended there by Respondent and testified to by Respondent's and Intervener's witnesses had been sufficiently established and/or without signifying as to what if any controverted issues were not sufficiently established by Respondent's or Intervener's witnesses.

170.

Respondent excepts to the rulings of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive testimony from Respondent or Intervener as to matters occurring after July 15, 1939, irrespective of whether such matters had any bearing upon the issues involved herein, and irrespective of whether same tended to disprove the charges against Respondent.

171.

Respondent excepts to the rulings of the Trial Examiner requiring plaintiff to submit offers of proof as to the testimony of its various witnesses including Wave Tobin, instead of permitting Respondent to call said witnesses to the stand and adduce material testimony from them by oral examination, for the reason that it is well known that the testimony of a witness may be more fully and accurately developed by examination on the stand than by statements in an offer of proof, especially when the witness is an adverse witness, as was Wave Tobin, and counsel had not the opportunity of ascertaining fully the extent of her testimony, and for the further reason that said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to Respondent and demonstrates the bias of the Trial Examiner that he did not require the Board to submit offers of proof as to the testimony of Rose Todd and various other witnesses before calling them to the stand.

[fol. 353] 172.

Respondent excepts to the Trial Examiner's denial of credibility of Respondent's and Intervener's witnesses and to him accepting as to the slightest testimony unfavorable to Respondent or the slightest inferences therefrom, in disregard to the overwhelming evidence offered by Respondent and Intervener to the contrary, and refuting each and all of the charges in the complaint.

173.

Respondent excepts to the Trial Examiner's prejudgment, adverse to Respondent of the issues involved herein by reason of which Respondent has been denied a fair and impartial trial.

174.

Respondent excepts to the Trial Examiner's failure to dismiss each and all of the charges against Respondent and/or to find and recommend that same should be dismissed.

Wherefore Respondent prays that its exceptions be sustained and the Complaint dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

[fol. 354]. Statement of Exceptions of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to the Second Report of the Trial Examiner.

United States of America
Before the National Labor Relations Board

In the Matter of
Donnelly Garment Company, Respondent.
and
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union,
Party to a Contract, Intervener.

Case No. C-1382.

Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union (referred to in the second intermediate report as the DGWU) excepts and objects to the second intermediate report of the trial examiner and to the proceedings, rulings, findings, conclusions appearing therein and other matters appearing in the record of this case in the following particulars and for the following reasons:

(1) To the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner against the intervener as evidenced by

(a) His denial of Intervener's petitions for an election as to bargaining representatives by the employes of the plant made before the beginning of the first hearing and repeated at various times thereafter, and his steadfast refusal to consider, allow or direct any formal ascertaining or regarding of the employes of the plant at any time during five years or to carry on any investigation among the employes of the plant.

(b) His refusal to receive and consider relevant and competent testimony of numerous witnesses offered by the intervener on matters relevant and of great importance to intervener's case and particularly showing such witnesses' [fol. 355] actual desires in the matter of labor representation, their reasons therefor and their freedom from employer domination in making such choice:

(c) His established custom and method of accepting any testimony whatever even though coming from only one to five discredited witnesses as being true, although denied by all other witnesses appearing, and in effect and substance denied by all other employes in the plant, and referring to such accepted evidence as in effect conclusive without any reference to or consideration of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

(d) His continued and wholly unjustified assumption that all witnesses offered by either respondent or intervener were subject to domination by and fear of their employer and that they would uniformly, continuously and without exception give false testimony by reason thereof.

(e) His denial to the intervener of the right to put on any witnesses whatever in the case in chief.

(f) His complete ignoring of the direction of the Circuit Court of Appeals to take and weigh and consider additional evidence as to the choice of the employes as to bargaining representative, their reason therefor and their subjection to or freedom from domination by the employer in such attitude.

(g) His refusal to admit evidence of, or give consideration to, the successful, independent and effective operation of the DGWU as a labor union down to and including the present time.

(h) His numerous findings of facts and drawing of inferences and conclusions unwarranted by, and in disregard of, the evidence.

(i) His unjustified characterization of witnesses of respondent and intervener as unworthy of belief.

[fol. 356] (j) His statements that evidence of the intervener would have no weight with him no matter how numerous or universal the witnesses were in its behalf, and his refusal to change this preconceived attitude following the instruction of the Circuit Court of Appeals that such evidence was to be received and considered without prejudice.

(k) His finding that the petition circulated by three employes on March 2, 1937, was directed by, inspired by, or promoted by respondent or the Donnelly Loyalty League in the face of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

(l) His finding that the meeting of March 18, 1937 was a Donnelly Loyalty League meeting in spite of overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

(m) His finding that the employment of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich and Tyler with a retainer fee of $500.00 was a payment in part for the organization of a plant union in spite of the undenied evidence and his own finding that the only subject discussed or considered at that time was the preparation of an injunction suit.

(n) His finding that the organization meeting of the DGWU was held on Company time in the face of practically universal testimony to the contrary, the finding being based on the testimony of not more than a half dozen discharged employes who admit bias against either the DGWU or the employer or both and who admit that the suggestion as to such time of holding the meeting was not called to their attention until about five years thereafter.

[fol. 357] (2) His refusal to admit evidence of the continued, satisfactory and effective operation of the DGWU through a period of five years down to and including the present day, and his arbitrary ruling that no evidence of any facts, conditions or circumstances occurring since the first hearing in 1939 was or could be admissible evidence.

(3) His finding that the Loyalty League was dominated by, created by or succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or any of its members, although all of the evidence is that the Loyalty League still continues in existence, and all the evidence is that employees of the Company without domination or interference by the management promoted the organization of the DGWU for an entirely different and separate purpose which was wholly legal and proper.

(4) His refusal to hear any further witnesses of the DGWU or to take any reasonable cross section of testimony of the employees in order to arrive at any conclusions based on evidence as to the fact regarding the preference of employees as to labor representation, the reasons for such preference and whether they were or were not dominated or influenced by the employer in such choice in spite of the fact that the sole or predominating reason for the second hearing was to develope such evidence.

(5) His refusal to weigh or consider the evidence as to the choice and wishes of the employees regarding labor representation because such evidence should have been a proper part of the decision.

(6) His assumption as expressed in his opinion that because the DGWU was a plant union maintaining no office outside the factory and that because it did not comply with certain theoretical but not required methods of book-
[fol. 358] keeping or administration, that it was not a valid labor organization, or that such facts were evidence of illegality.

(7) His finding that it was impossible to determine that Rose Todd in 1937, '38 and '39 had any well-defined duties, although in the same paragraph he points out what such well-defined duties were, and although the evidence shows conclusively definite, necessary, important and unchanged duties in her employment by the Company.

(8) His finding that instructors were "supervisory" and therefore represented management, without applying the correct legal test which shows conclusively that their duties were such as not to identify their interests with those of the employer, but on the other hand to mark them clearly as in the position of subordinate employes charged with showing employes methods and keeping work moving to and from operators.

(9) To the finding and conclusion that because the employer recognized the right of an organization, made up of substantially all of its employes below the rank of those representing management to negotiate for the employes, as the employer was required by law to do, and because it made a contract with such organization a month after it was organized, and a wage agreement within two months after organization, that the shortness of those times and the omission of the employer to illegally resist was evidence that there was no expression of the desires of the employes.

(10) To the finding and method pursued by the examiner in ignoring the conclusive evidence of the primary fact of the choice of the employes and placing exaggerated importance on inferences which could only be of importance where the primary fact was in doubt, and in the present case would have such speculative character as to be at least equally persuasive of the validity of the organization as of invalidity.

[fol. 359] (11) To the findings as to respondents contributions of support to the DGWU of delayed payment of rental for use of a room during part of the time leased by respondent, of occasional unauthorized use of respondent's typewriter, filing cabinet, ditto machine, to the use of the Company IDM forms, bulletin boards and similar inconsequential matters, although the uncontradicted evidence is that wherever use of such facilities was allowed such use had always been allowed to any group or any individual in the plant, and the finding that such matters constituted financial support of the union in spite of the fact that every dollar of its expenses during its existence had been raised by the membership of the union itself through dues or profits on entertainment.

(12) To the finding that Hobart Atherton, Florence Strickland, Lena Tyhurst, Martha Gray, Hortense Root, Heath Cowan, Marvin Price, Ted Scholes, Mary Bogart and others were supervisory employes, and the further assumption that such persons were possessed of the degree of authority which would identify their interests with the management rather than the employes, and that the employes looked upon them as representing the management, such findings and the assumptions being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

(13) To the finding and discussion on page 23 that if Mrs. Reed stated at a meeting of the employes to which she was invited that, "Neither Dubinsky nor any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the Company into forcing you to join the International against your will", that such statement constituted an unfair labor practice, although such statement was not only lawful but in direct support of the law, and that in view of the uncontested fact that Mr.

Dubinsky at that time was endeavoring to force the management to put pressure on the employes to join the Int'r-[fol. 360] national against their will, such statement was legally justified and such attitude was legally required.

(14) To the finding that the alleged statement of Rose Todd that, "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way" was a sign of Company domination, whereas if said at all it was a correct and proper statement of the law and the rights of the employes, and in any case was not the act of the employer.

(15) To the finding and conclusion that if Instructor Little pointed out the greatly smaller cost of an independent union over the International that instead of being a fact proper to refer to and consider that it was evidence of domination by the management without any evidence upon which to base said finding and in defiance of any reasonable inference.

(16) To the finding that because no second fee was required by attorneys until seven months after organization and until the treasury of the union could take care of original expenses and accumulate some surplus, that therefore the original fee of $500.00 necessarily included work which it is admitted was not even mentioned when the original fee was paid, as being inference without foundation in the evidence and even contrary to all reasonable inferences therefrom.

(17) To the finding that the original fee in regard to investigating and preparing injunction was paid by the Loyalty League in violation of all the evidence, and to the finding that it would be evidence of domination even if true.

[fol. 361] (18) To the finding that it is axiomatic that a labor organization free from employer domination does not persuade employes to join its ranks so rapidly in spite of the conclusive evidence as to the reasons for employes being universally in favor of prompt action for the purpose of their own physical protection. The conclusion of the master is based on the theory that strong evidence of the intervener should be treated as contrary to its natural import, but that weak evidence is equally unbelievable, which obviously springs from preconceived opinions, as unsupported by the evidence.

(19) To the finding that piecework members of the executive committee were paid by the company for time lost in connection with D.G.W.U. business.

(20) To the findings that employees were not represented on the committee fixing piecework prices in spite of the uncontradicted evidence to the contrary to the effect that they selected a member of the committee who had had experience previously in that line of work and that she continuously represented them, and the further evidence that the employees possessed and used means for obtaining changes in piecework prices even in cases where their own representative on the committee had not arrived at piecework prices satisfactory to the employees.

(21) To the finding and inference that although the committee was authorized by the membership to make contracts with the company on behalf of the employes, yet the fact that the committee did not submit the wage agreement to the membership as a whole is evidence of illegality or of denial of the wishes of the employees, there being no evidence whatever of such fact.

(22) To the finding and statement on page 9 of the report that the D.G.W.U. was given an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected at the prior hearing in spite of the fact that the matter had been directed to take the evidence of the [fol. 362] employees or such part of them as would give a reasonable picture of the entire body as the purpose of this hearing and yet refuse to allow the intervener to produce a single further witness and further gave no consideration or weight whatever to the evidence of their choice of labor representatives, their reason therefor, and their freedom from domination in so doing.

(23) To the finding and inference that unless the instructors had enough authority to make them representatives of the management in the sense of ineligibility for union membership then it would have been impossible to operate the factory, such finding being contrary to all of the evidence and not subject of even reasonable inference.

(24) To the statement and finding on page 19 that Mrs. Strickland told the employes they should sign membership cards in the Loyalty League "to keep their jobs" as being wholly unsupported by the evidence.

(25) To the finding and conclusion that statements of employes that they had received generous and fair treatment from the company and refused to acknowledge any union labor organization at a time when no plant union had been considered and when the International was endeavoring to force membership by violence is evidence not of the truth of the statement made but is evidence in itself of the exact opposite.

(26) To the finding and inference that the statement in the by-laws of the DGWU, although fully supported by the facts, that one of the purposes of organization was self-protection of employes and members of the union from coercion, intimidation, violence or threats of violence in order to force them to join unions organized and dominated by outsiders and not employes of this plant is evidence that the union partially resulting from this reason was invalid and not the actual choice of the employes.

[fol. 363] (27) To the conclusions of law of the examiner and each of said conclusions because there is no evidence of domination or interference of the employer with the DGWU either in its formation or operation, no evidence of the employer contributing financial support to said union or engaging in unfair labor practices in connection therewith either under Section 8 (2) or Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act or of any violations of Section 8 (1) of the act, or that any practices in existence before, during or after the organization of the DGWU are unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the act.

(28) To the recommendations of the examiner and each of them because the evidence and the law do not justify any order requiring the respondent to cease and desist from dominating or interfering with the DGWU or contributing support thereto or from giving effect to the contract of May 27, 1937, and a supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or any extension, renewal, modification or supplement thereof, or from discouraging membership in the International or encouraging membership in DGWU by laying off employees or any other manner, or from dominating, controlling or using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain and coerce its employees or from in any other manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their right of self-organization, or to form, join or assist labor organizations or bargain collectively.

(29) To the recommendation of the examiner that the company cease giving effect to its check-off agreement with the DGWU for the reason that such agreement is legal, valid and the desire of the employees.

(30) To the recommendation that the company be required to take affirmative action in withdrawing recognition from the DGWU on all matters of labor representation because such representation is a valid legal right of the intervener and it has a property right in the contract resulting from such recognition.

[fol. 364] (31) To the recommendation of affirmative action by the company in repaying employes for dues and assessments for the reason that such dues and assessments were voluntarily paid by the employes in a lawful manner and the employes do not desire such repayment.

(32) To the recommendation that the company take affirmative action by posting notices as recommended in the order for the reason that employes have not been dominated or threatened with domination by the employer and that except for the limitations imposed on themselves by themselves in the nature of a closed shop they are free to take any lawful action, and they are fully aware of their rights as to membership in any labor organization.

[fol. 365] (33) To the following statements in paragraph Three of the Intermediate report:

The first six sentences of paragraph Two on page 11.

The last sentence of paragraph Three on page 11.

All of paragraph Two on page 12.

All of paragraph Three on page 12.

Footnote Eighteen on page 12.

All of the last paragraph beginning on page 12 and continuing on page 13.

All of the last paragraph beginning on page 13 and continuing on page 14.

Footnote Nineteen on page 13.

All of the Second paragraph on page 14 except the first three sentences thereof.

Footnote Twenty on page 14.

All of the First full paragraph on page 15.

All of the remainder of sub-paragraph Two.

All of sub-head Three except the first and second sentences.

All of sub-paragraph Four.

for the reasons that such statements, findings and conclusions are not supported by the evidence or any evidence and do not establish or tend to establish that the employes referred to therein were supervisory employes, or represented the management rather than the employes, or were acting for or in behalf of the management in regard to any of the matters mentioned in the report or that the Company held them out to the employes as its representatives, or that the employes regarded them, or any of them, as representatives of the employer in connection with any labor matters whatever.

(34) Under sub-division B, labeled "Events prior to the Effective date of the Act:

The last Three sentences of the First paragraph on page 17.

All of First and Second paragraphs appearing on page 18.

[fol. 366] The First, Second and Fourth sentences of the Third paragraph on page 18.

All of the Fourth paragraph on page 18 except the last sentence.

All of the Fifth paragraph on page 18.

All of page Nineteen except the indented quotation thereon.

All of page Twenty except the First sentence in Second paragraph.

for the reason that such findings and conclusions relate to evidence which is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial because referring to matters before the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, and cannot in any event be properly considered as any ground for depriving the interveners of their right to organization and to contracts with the employer, nor do they amount to any evidence, and in particular not to evidence establishing or tending to establish invalidity of the union.

(35) To the method used by the examiner in the Intermediate report of stating controverted matters or matters unsupported by evidence as established facts without any page reference to the record, and frequently without any statement showing the insignificance of the evidence or circumstances or inference relied on or the overwhelming evidence contrary thereto.

(36) To the finding (p. 26) that the organization meeting of the DGWU was held during working hours, and especially to the fact that such finding is made with no citation of evidence or weighing of evidence. The only possible testimony must have been statements of three or four ex-employes who admitted prejudice or hatred and admitted that the matter had never been called to their attention for about five years after it happened, and a photograph showing many girls wearing aprons at the meeting, no consideration being given to, or mention made of, the fact that hundreds of employes in affidavits made at a [fol. 367] time when the matter was still fresh in their memory, stated that the meeting was held after hours and that many employes, with no contradictory evidence whatever, testified that on frequent occasions they wore their aprons to meetings which were held after hours and did not change to street clothes until after the meetings.

(37) To the First paragraph on page 22 in Subdivision C, the Second paragraph on page 24 in Subdivision C, and the Second paragraph on page 25 in Subdivision C, for the reason that such statements are contrary to the evidence, wholly unjustified by the evidence, and can be at most based on inference and not on evidence. Also as to the Second paragraph on page 25 for the reason that the Board specifically and unequivocally abandons any claim that the company was in any way responsible for the feeling of the employes in the plant in connection with Sylvia Hull (see page 2652 of record of first hearing).

(38) To the First paragraph on page 28 in Subdivision D and the Third paragraph on page 30 in Subdivision D for the reason that such statements, conclusions and findings are not based on evidence, are contrary to all evidence and go beyond the matters occurring before the hearing began, while at the same time the examiner refused to consider on behalf of the intervener evidence of the efficient and successful operation of the plant union for five years and down to the date of the second hearing.

(39) To the last Two paragraphs on page 32 of Subdivision 3 of Subdivision D for the reason that the conclusion that the same persons set rates for the respondent as represented the union in this matter is obviously a distortion of the record, without evidence therein for the reason that all of the evidence shows that Rose Todd represents the union in the matter of fixing prices and does not represent the respondent, and for the reason that the [fol. 368] allegation and finding that the company forced employes to join the DGWU is not supported by the evidence, is contrary to all the evidence, and can rest only upon inference based on inference.

(40) To the statements on pages 33 and 34 on Subdivision 4 of Subdivision D stating that the union never had any intention of paying rent which it afterward paid; that it was the League which borrowed $1,000 at the bank and that the League would have been without right to borrow such money even if if were true that the DGWU was financed by the League; that the employes formed the union under pressure of the employer; that the fact that employes joined it so rapidly proves that it is invalid; that the employer retained complete control of the union through Rose Todd; that the employer in recognizing the rights of the union and entering into a contract and wage agreement within two months with it, although admittedly bound by law to do so, nevertheless thereby provided evidence of violation of the law in so doing, and to the conclusion in the First paragraph on page 37, for the reason that such statements, findings and conclusions are unsupported by any evidence and in violation of all the evidence.

[fol. 369] (41) To the overruling of the motion of intervener and respondent for a new examiner by reason of the bias and prejudice of the examiner assigned for the second hearing, such ruling being by the Board after reference of the motion by the examiner to the Board.

(42) To the overruling of the motion of intervener and respondent for a continuance, such ruling being by the Board and by the examiner.

(43) To the ruling of the examiner that intervener be denied the right to put on any evidence in the case in chief on the second hearing.

(44) To the denial by the examiner of an election by the employees under proper precautions to insure secrecy of voting and fairness of administration from the beginning of the case in 1937 continuously for a period of some five years.

(45) To the refusal of the examiner to take, admit, consider and weigh the evidence of the employees.

[fol. 370] (46) The intervener excepts to each and all of the rulings and actions of the trial examiner in the conduct of the former hearing herein which were made and taken over the objections or exceptions of the intervener made at that time or which are adverse to the intervener, for all of the grounds stated in the record and for the further reason that the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner toward intervener and its evidence colored and affected said rulings and actions and said bias and prejudice affected and became a part of his findings, conclusions, recommendations and rulings, thereby depriving intervener of a fair trial.

(47) Intervener excepts to all of the rulings made by the trial examiner in the second hearing herein over the objection to, or adverse to, the intervener and to which intervener had an automatic exception, and adopts and renews the objections appearing in the record in such second hearing, and for additional grounds to the exceptions herein taken states that such adverse rulings were influenced by the bias and prejudice of the examiner against the intervener and thereby deprived the intervener of a fair trial.

(48) Intervener hereby adopts all of the exceptions taken and filed in the respondent's statement of exceptions, but in order to avoid unnecessary lengthening of the record does not copy or insert them herein, but nevertheless makes and adopts them as fully and completely as though set forth herein in detail and in full.

Wherefore, intervener prays that the Board sustain its exceptions herein, that the intermediate report of the Trial Examiner be disproved and that the complaint be dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK E. TYLER,
LUCIAN LANE,
Attorneys for Intervener,

RAID TIP-OFFS BY POLICE.

New Charge Is Made in San Francisco Graft Probe.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—Edwin Atherton, former federal agent, charged today that sources within the San Francisco police department tipped off the underworld in advance of raids. Atherton recently accused the department of collecting a million dollars annually in graft.

Atherton said he tapped telephone lines into the McDonough Brothers' bail bond concern and learned of the tip-offs. Atherton has been making an investigation for more than a year.

Police said they would investigate the charges.

REAL ESTATE OFFICE THERE.

Mr. Findlay, accompanied by his ttorney, Fred G. Mancuso, presented he board plans for a 1-story building acing the Paseo and set back seventy-five feet from Seventy-fifth. It would contain four store rooms. He explained he had owned the property since 1919 and had erected a small real estate office there in 1921.

Mr. Mancuso said that since the permit for the office building had been issued before the zoning law was enacted in 1923, Mr. Findlay felt the property always could be used for business. He pointed to Mr. Findlay's large property holdings in the district as a proof Mr. Findlay did not believe the business building would damage property values. Seventy-fifth street was a natural business street, he argued, and store buildings were needed to serve the district.

Kenneth I. Fligg, attorney for the R. A. Long estate, which owns the northwest corner; Anthony Pumilia, owner of the southwest corner, and Charles Allen, owner of the southeast corner, favored the rezoning. They said stores were needed in the neighborhood, pointing out the nearest stores were at Seventy-fifth street and Troost avenue, Eightieth street

CHICAGO, March 17.—A shouting mob of 1,200 striking taxi drivers late today made a sudden assault on working drivers in the downtown business district, beat six into unconsciousness, threatened passengers and fought a pitched battle with police, using stones and lead pipes as weapons.

Fighting off mounted policemen as they marched, the strikers toppled a score of cabs in the streets, showered machines with stones and set several afire.

Shots were fired but none found a mark. Six working chauffeurs, two pedestrians and a passenger were injured in the riot.

FIGHT FOR AN HOUR.

Thousands of spectators, gaping from business buildings and hotels, saw police reserves summoned from all stations near the Loop end the battle after officers already on the scene had struggled with the combatants for more than an hour.

The mass demonstration followed a meeting of strikers participating in a 12-day strike for higher commissions. Gathering recruits along the route, the throng trooped into the Loop at La Salle street and Wacker drive. A door was ripped from a Yellow machine there.

The strikers barged on, surrounded a Checker vehicle, slugged the driver and tilted the cab on its side. They loosed a barrage of stones against several operating taxies.

In front of the Sherman hotel, a Checker cab was halted. The chauffeur was pulled from his seat. He ran a gantlet of heavy fists across the street. Staggering under the blows, he pitched to the sidewalk fifteen feet from the entrance to the city hall.

KICKED UNTIL MOTIONLESS.

While municipal employees craned from windows overhead, the fallen victim was kicked until he lay motionless.

A Yellow taxi was up-ended in front of a street car near the Garrick theater in the heart of Chicago's Rialto.

Traffic was snarled as the rioters deployed through the crowded downtown district. Another clash ensued at the Illinois Central railroad station.

A riot call brought scores of patrolmen and firemen. Sirens whining, they sped to the focal battle points. The reinforcements protected the operating chauffeurs and righted the overturned cabs. Others scurried through the throngs on the sidewalks

ST. The festive day began with a solemn pontifical high mass. Postmaster John N. Kirchner was hard at work, stamping by hand 1,300 letters and parcels from Ireland, Spain, England and Germany in addition to those from all over the United States.

Late this afternoon a rural carrier made a special trip to the Carton, Mo., postoffice where final pieces of the record consignment of mail here were mailed.

GENEVA, March 17.—Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl, Nazi leader missing from Berlin under mysterious circumstances, was located tonight at a hotel in Zurich.

"All I want to say is that I am on leave of absence," was his reply to a telephone inquiry as to the purpose of his presence in Switzerland and his plans.

[Hanfstaengl, Harvard-educated former head of the foreign press bureau at Berlin, disappeared from Berlin last month and was reported to have gone on a mission to Spain.]

late yesterday turned its attention to technical and visual evidence of ballot corruption in the fourth vote fraud trial. Randall Wilson, first assistant United States district attorney, said he probably would rest his case before noon today.

Five phantom voters, somewhat rare in the evidence in the earlier trials, went into the records yesterday afternoon as inhabitants of the twenty-sixth precinct of the twelfth ward, where six defendants are accused of having conspired to deprive citizens of the rights of franchise in the November 3 election. After witnesses had asserted, in effect, that the five were ghosts, a series of Republican witnesses took the stand, to learn their ballots had turned into votes for the Democratic candidates.

Far Ahead of Last Trial.

It was in conjunction with those voters the ballots from the precinct made their first appearance. The trial, already far ahead of the case of last week, began to move more briskly. The jurors, who had heard the government's chief witnesses in the morning session, leaned forward with every evidence of close attention.

Mrs. Mary Raines, 2045 Lister avenue, was the first of the Republican voters to take the stand. She had registered for the election, she said. She was a citizen of the United States. She had voted November 3, and she had voted a straight Republican ticket.

Wilson produced the ballot from her precinct on which was inscribed the same number that appeared opposite her name and address in the two poll books. Mrs. Raines, with Judge Albert L. Reeves moving in to peer over her shoulder, stared at the ballot.

Erasure on Her Ballot.

"You observe," Wilson said, "an erasure of the X mark once inscribed in the circle under the Republican column?"

Mrs. Raines said she certainly did.

"Ghosts" at Democrat's Home.

Clifford H. Adams, 4812 East Twenty-fourth street, testified he was a Democrat. Wilson produced the original register and the poll books. Did Mr. Adams, Wilson asked, have three persons named Fay Downs, Louise Downs and Roy Hays, living at his home election day?

"I never heard of them," Adams responded.

Forrest B. Herring, 2333 Lister, likewise was certain one Sam Herring and one Joe Herring, registered and voted from his home, were 'not corporeal beings.' He lived in a 6-unit apartment, he said, and aside from himself and his wife, no other Herring resided there.

To support his testimony, Wilson called T. S. D. Berger, Negro mail carrier in that precinct. Berger had not delivered letters to any Sam or Joe Herring, he said, nor had he heard of any Fay Downs or Louise Downs. There might have been a Roy Hays, he said; but he couldn't remember delivering any letters to

A sit-down strike closed the 6-story Frank & Seder department store in Detroit today as police guarded its doors and numerous detectives stood inside.

Several minutes of excitement and confusion ensued as store officials attempted to prevent the strike by asking for a resumption of negotiations. Union leaders refused.

Lou Miller, one of the organizers for the Retail Clerks' Association, said the strike was called because the management refused to consider the union's demand for a "closed shop."

Striking and nonstriking employees disputed possession of one store today as a strike spread to two units of the F. W. Woolworth Company in New York.

Girl employees of a Brooklyn store of the chain obeyed shrill whistles signalling a strike of the department store workers' union, but in Manhattan one group of workers produced banners reading "We won't strike," and refused to quit work.

SOUGHT PROTECTED HOMES.

Home owners who protested were led by A. W. Roth, 1832 East Seventy-fifth street; Fred I. Worth, 1821 East Seventy-fifth, and John Donnelly, 1829 East Seventy-fifth.

"I bought my home about a year ago, because I believed the district would be protected by the zoning law," Mr. Roth said. "The rezoning of this property for business would damage not only my home but others in the district. It would damage the boulevard. There is no need for business in the district."

Mr. Worth, who would be across the street from the proposed building, has owned his home nine years.

"I paid $9,000 for it," he continued. "We bought it because it was in a residence district. We wanted to get away from business. If this building is built, I'll have to give up my home."

OPENING WEDGE FOR BUSINESS.

Mr. Donnelly said the rezoning would be the opening wedge for business on the other three corners. He said to Mr. Mancuso:

"Would you like to live next to a store building?"

... did not answer. Later

SITTERS STAY IN ON COTS

SIEGE OF GARMENT SHOPS IS CONTINUED AT NIGHT.

Fights Between Women Occur at Quitting Time, With Punching, Hair-Pulling and Handbag Swinging.

Fifty members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union settled down last night on cots inside the entrance of the building at 2617 Grand avenue, making a sit-down strike out of their attempts yesterday to close by strike three garment companies housed in the building.

Miss Wave Tobin, business agent for the union, said the union members had been warned by H. P. McElroy, city manager, that if they left the building they would not be allowed to return. All those who spent the night inside the doorway were employed in the building, she said.

FIGHTS AT CLOSING TIME.

Workers and strikers swung handbags and fists and pulled hair before policemen guided employees from plants at quitting time yesterday.

After a few skirmishes at the rear door of the building, the police moved in and the demonstration was over save for derisive shouting.

For half an hour after the plants closed at 4:30 o'clock fights occurred in an area of two blocks when union members and non-union workers met.

"The strike has just begun," said Miss Tobin.

The companies against which the union is seeking to force a strike are the Missouri Garment Company, occupying the second floor; the Gernes Garment Company, Inc., on the third floor, and the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, fourth and fifth floors.

SAY MOST WOMEN WORK.

Company officials asserted a majority of the 800 women who work in the building went to work yesterday morning through a rear door two hours after union workers had blocked the main entrance by sitting down.

H. Gordon, president of the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company which employs 300 women, said only sixteen union workers and a few employees who were ill did not work and that the plant was operating smoothly. He said that 95 per cent of the women signed petitions opposed to their joining the union.

"There weren't more than fifty girls at work in the Gordon Brothers plant today," Miss Tobin said.

A majority of the women working for the other two plants entered the building through the rear door and spent the day inside, their lunches being taken to them at noon.

such a name at 4812 East Twenty-fourth street.

In Hospital, but Voted.

A woman confined in Research hospital was voted arbitrarily election day. Wilson called Miss Virginia Cook, record librarian of the hospital, to the stand. Miss Cook had the records on Mrs. Sally Darling, 2008 Poplar, who was a patient at the hospital from September 28 to December 24 with a fractured knee cap.

The records showed, Miss Cook said, that Mrs. Darling did not leave the hospital. Hourly reports, written in the book, showed the patient awakening, having breakfast, being bathed, writing letters, listening to the radio and following other routines at the hospital throughout the hours the polls were open. Mrs. Darling was not summoned yesterday.

The fingerprints of Frank Ditsch, jr., the precinct leader for the Democratic rabbit faction and a defendant, were found on four ballots, L. J. Fallon, FBI fingerprint expert, said. Those ballots, and enlarged copies of the prints, were given to the jury for study.

Clerk Called Election Board.

Mrs. Marie Denger, Republican clerk of the precinct who pleaded nolo contendere (no defense) along with Mrs. Maurine Nelson, Republican judge, was recalled to the stand when the afternoon session began. What, Wilson asked, was the first thing she did when she returned home after the polls closed?.

"I telephoned the board of election commissioners," Mrs. Denger said. "I told them who I was and that I was the clerk in the twenty-sixth precinct of the twelfth ward. I said I could not and did not give my count. The person at the board said, 'All right,' and hung up."

"Would you say positively the ballots were not counted?" Ludwick Graves, defense counsel, asked on cross-examination. (Mrs. Denger had testified George Neeper, precinct captain for the Pendergast forces and a defendant, announced the vote totals as 501 for the Democrats and thirty-one for Republicans as soon as the polls closed.)

Expected 141 G. O. P. Votes.

"If they had been," Mrs. Denger returned, "I would have had my 141 votes."

"How do you know the Republicans had 141 votes in your precinct?"

"Because I polled the precinct."

"You were the Republican precinct captain?"

"I was the acting Republican precinct captain."

"Are you still in that capacity?"

Mr. Mancuso did not answer. Later, however, he said many of the property owners had purchased their property knowing the real estate office was on the corner. He contended Mr. Findlay had a moral, if not a legal, right to erect a store building on the property.

Mrs. W. H. Saxton, 1836 East Seventy-fifth street terrace, said she and her husband had owned their home since 1912.

"This is strictly a residence district," she added. "There is no need for stores. We are close enough now to stores. To rezone this property would ruin the Paseo."

Mrs. A. Al Neuman, 1820 East Seventy-fifth street terrace; Mrs. George T. Vance, 1824 East Seventy-fifth street, and George G. Croner, another property owner, also spoke against the rezoning. W. H. Shackelford, who is building four houses in the district, favored it on the ground a shopping center was needed. Opponents contended his opinion was not to be considered, since his property was three blocks away.

The application was the first filed for business zoning on the Paseo, south of Fifty-fifth street, in eleven years.

MONTGALL CHANGE DENIED.

The board also disapproved an application for rezoning of 180 feet of ground on the west side of Montgall avenue in the 3900 block, because of protests from property owners. The rezoning was sought by Mrs. Elsie Conrad to permit use of the property as a parking station for the Oak Park theater. Proponents contended improvement of the ground for the parking station would be a benefit to property values. Opponents argued the parking station would result in additional traffic and that noise from cars would be disturbing at night.

DELAY ON GILLHAM PLAZA.

Action on the application of the Gregg Realty Company for the rezoning of 3316-18-20-22 Gillham plaza, upon which a hearing was held March 3, was continued by the board until its next hearing. Apartment owners in the vicinity protested.

FOR A TRAILER PLANT.

Other cases upon which the board acted:

Rezoning of old Priests of Pallas den at 2100 East Tenth to permit its use in manufacture of bodies for trucks and trailers and to permit use of 40-horsepower motors; approved. No one protested. The property is owned by Miss Ruth M. Mason.

Mrs. Gurthea R. Meister, to permit erection of 1-car garage in front yard at 3840 Olive; disapproved because of protests from property owners in the block.

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—Five of the largest producing units of the 2-billion-dollar United States Steel Corporation signed contracts tonight with union followers of John L. Lewis, setting up machinery designed to insure industrial peace among their 160,000 workers for at least a year.

The contracts supplemented the one of March 2 in which the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation recognized the right of the steel workers organizing committee, an affiliate of the committee for Industrial Organization, to deal with the company for its members.

The contracts provided that differences arising between now and next March 1, date of the expiration, should be taken up without cessation of work, with the final decision, if an agreement was not reached, to rest with an impartial umpire named by the company and union.

The companies agreed to recognize seniority rights in all cases of promotion or increase, or decrease of forces with brief reservations; granted a week's vacation with pay for all employees with five years or more of service and promised to reinstate any union member with full pay where it has been decided an injustice was done the worker.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of Carnegie-Illinois, which employs 31,000, signed first. Others signing were B. F. Harris, National Tube, Pittsburgh; J. L. Perry, Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company,

"Did you complain to them of any irregularities?"

"Did you make any agreement not to count the votes or to miscount them?"

"I did not."

"That's all," Graves said.

"Did you," Wilson resumed, "see a single judge in your poll count a single ballot?"

"I did not."

The trial will resume at 9:30 o'clock this morning. Wilson said C. A. Appel, jr., handwriting expert for the FBI, would be his chief witness, and he would rest after Appel had concluded his testimony.

Beside Neeper, Ditsch and Mrs. Kelley, other defendants in the case are Mrs. Cecilia Ditsch, Democratic judge and wife of Ditsch; Beulah Walton, Republican judge, and Olga Kegin, Democratic clerk.

(By the Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., March 17.—New York juries will be permitted to recommend life imprisonment instead of death in felony murder cases under a law enacted tonight with a stroke of Governor Lehman's pen. It becomes effective immediately.

legal struggle would follow.

Lawyers said Judge Campbell would have to be informed, officially that the sit-down strikers still held the plants, and that Chrysler attorneys probably would be the persons to do it. That strategy would call for the Chrysler counsel to appear before Judge Campbell, establish the fact the strikers still were in the factories and ask that they be cited for contempt of court. Should the strikers be cited, the sheriff then probably would proceed to evict them. Chrysler corporation had no statement immediately on what its lawyers were planning to do. It was believed the legal maneuvering might consume a week.

The compromise was reached in a 5-hour conference Tuesday night of Mayor Frank Cuzens and representatives of the Hotel association and the Waiters and Waitresses' association.

Service at the hotels was restored immediately.

The agreement set up a 3-man arbitration board, to begin deliberation not later than Thursday night, with full power of final judgment.

Gernes company, denied that any of his employes were on strike.

"We have about 200 girls who are being paid good wages and are satisfied," Gernes said. "We have no trouble with the union or anyone. We have not even been approached by the union."

Opens Way for Employes.

About 8:15 a. m. Gernes managed to open the way for his employes to enter the building through the rear entrance. He said virtually all had entered by 8:30 a. m.

Hyman Gordon, president of the Gordon company, denied allegations of the strikers that he was paying "starvation wages."

"The girls are making good money, and I can prove it by our checks," he said. "There are only about 16 of my girls that are responsible for this trouble."

Miss Tobin said, "We are fighting to stop some of these $6 a week checks. The fight is for a 40-hour week and $13 a week minimum."

Meyer Perlstein, regional director of the union, at union headquarters, 1022 Baltimore avenue, said the union was demanding restoration of the NRA hours and wages.

Want NRA Conditions.

"After the NRA code was thrown out," he said, "the three companies lengthened hours and reduced wages. We want contracts with the three companies providing for NRA conditions."

30-DAY JAIL TERM FOR PETTY LARCENY

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., March 17.—(UP)—Lee Beard, 23 years old, of Joplin, Wednesday faced a 30-day sentence in the Clay county jail for petty larceny. He also was fined $22.15 on his plea of guilty.

Two of Beard's companions, Melvyn Lantz, 22, Joplin, and Raymond Dawson, 24, Commerce, Ok., will be given a hearing Saturday on charges of operating a motor vehicle with improper license plates.

The three said they bought the automobile at a St. Joseph junk yard, but it bore Kansas license plates.

'BANZAI' HOLE IN ONE.

SALINAS, CAL.—(UP)—The Japanese language has provided just the right word to express the proper feeling when a golfer makes a hole in one. John Urabe, star Japanese golfer, tried it out when he holed a 225-yard drive here and it was all that was necessary. It is simply "Banzai."

"Symptom of Deeper Condition."

"Sit-downs are a symptom of a deeper condition and not the cause. We ask that those who are interested in law and order use their energies most effectively by helping lengthened hours and reduced wages. We want contracts with the three companies providing for NRA conditions."

Perlstein said the strike was voted Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of union employes of the three companies at union headquarters.

"About two weeks ago," he said. "The Gordon company organized a company union. The girls objected to that and called the meeting at which the strike was voted."

Perlstein said there were about 500 workers employed by the three plants, two-thirds of whom were members of the union. Company officials placed the number of employes at 700 and said union members were greatly in the minority.

While Gernes denied that any of his employes were on strike, several pickets outside the building, including at least one employe of the Gernes plant, bore signs announcing that the strike was by employes in all three plants.

Gordon asked police to remove the strikers who were sitting in the lobby of the building, but police refused, stating it would be necessary for him to obtain a court order to be served by the sheriff. Gordon announced his intention to do so

The police confined themselves to keeping sidewalks as clear as possible and halting disturbances.

GARMENT PLANTS HUM AS POLICE GUARD WORKERS

Crews Escorted Through Lines of Union Pickets Here.

Pictures on Picture Page.

Under protection of police, who escorted them through lines of cat-calling women strikers and strike sympathizers, employes of the three garment companies at 3617 Grand avenue went to work Thursday morning through the rear entrance on Walnut street.

Managements of the Missouri Garment company and Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company said 90 per cent of their 300 employes each were at work while A. B. Gernes, head of the Gernes Garments company, said all of his 200 employes were at their tasks.

Leaders of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, which called a strike beginning Wednesday morning, claimed a much larger percentage of workers on strike, however.

Camp in Front Lobby.

Between 40 and 50 women, all of whom said they were strikers, were camped Thursday morning in the front lobby of the building, where they had spent the night on cots and blankets on the floors and in show windows. They blocked the front entrance of the building.

Many of them red-eyed from lack of sleep, the sit-downers in the lobby said they "got along fine" during the night and that the Motion Picture Operators' union had sent them a lunch and provided funds for a breakfast. Spokesmen for the women in the lobby said it was their intention to remain there until union demands for a minimum of $13 a week, 40-hour week and recognition of the union were met.

Comment on Wages.

On the other hand, managements of the garment factories said their wages except in isolated instances, plant and that none of his workers belonged to the union.

Under direction of D. E. Reddish, detective assigned to labor troubles, and I. A. C. W. Shepard of the Country Club police station, nearly a score of police officers kept approximately 150 strikers and sympathizers on the move on the Walnut street side of the factories Thursday morning as workers went to their tasks.

Singly and in groups, workers were escorted to the rear door leading to the three factories amid jeers and cat-calls from the onlookers.

More Police on Duty.

Half a dozen police under Sgt. Mike Shay of the Nineteenth street police station, who spent the night at the scene, were joined at 7:30 a. m. by those under direction of Lieutenant Shepard, including 10 motorcycle patrolmen under Sgt. George R. Maschin.

Three or four fights between women workers and strikers were broken up by the police, but no arrests were made. Strikers engaging in the fights, however, were placed in a police car to keep them out of the way until all workers reporting had entered the plants.

Police said they had received orders to keep the entrances of the plants clear and strikers and sympathizers on the move.

Those encamped in the front lobby said they were holding their places because Judge H. F. McElroy, city manager, had informed them they would not be permitted to return once they departed. They announced their intention of remaining in the lobby again Thursday night.

NEW LONDON, TEX., March 22.—William C. Shaw, 61-year-old superintendent of the New London school, admitted before a military board of inquiry Monday that the gas which apparently exploded, killing 428 persons last Thursday, was taken without permission from the pipe lines of a private company.

Just before he had completed his testimony, Shaw virtually collapsed. He was assisted from the witness chair to an anteroom while additional witnesses were summoned.

This testimony, given by the oldest educator in Texas in a firm voice, came after a 16-year-old survivor of the explosion stood before the court and showed that his hair had been singed in the blast. From him came the first direct clew to the source of the spark that apparently detonated pockets of gas that had formed from faulty connections or equipment.

Blames Electric Spark.

The youth, John Dow, testified the explosion, accompanied by a flash of flame, came from the sub-basement when a manual training instructor closed an electric switch to a sanding machine.

Shaw went before the board this third day of the inquiry and admitted that the Parade Gas company's natural gas pipe line that passed under the campus of the school was tapped without the company's permission.

He also admitted officials of the United Gas company, from which the school board previously bought its fuel gas supply, had warned him "the board might be using a dangerous gas." He said a United Gas

Would OK "Reasonable" Change.

Wheeler, declaring he spoke for the "vast majority" of foes of the president's plan, said the opposition would support "any reasonable constitutional amendment" as a compromise.

He forecast quick passage of such an amendment if supported by the president, and declared that Roosevelt himself, had he been on the supreme court at the time, would have ruled the NRA and AAA unconstitutional.

"An increase in the number of justices of the supreme court, apart from any question of policy, which I do not discuss, would not promote the efficiency of the court," Hughes' letter said.

Hyman Gordon, head of one of the three garment companies affected, was mauled by women, a score of women workers were assaulted despite police efforts to protect them, and 30 strikers and sympathizers were detained temporarily by police.

The scene on Walnut street at the rear entrance of the building housing the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, the Gernes Garment company and the Missouri Garment company was one of bedlam.

Shout and Jeer.

More than 200 strikers and strike sympathizers stood behind rows of uniformed police shouting and jeering, shoving, kicking and fighting whenever a group of women workers attempted to enter the building.

Dozens of times the strikers and sympathizers broke through the police lines to grab a woman worker and give her a mauling and hair pulling. After each melee from one to several women were loaded aboard a patrol wagon standing near the scene. Several loads were taken to the Nineteenth street station and later released without being booked.

When Gordon, president of the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, left his car and started to enter the rear door between lines of policemen, half a dozen or more women broke through the lines and seized him.

Police had considerable difficulty in freeing Gordon from the pulling hands of the women and got him into the building after a considerable roughing and hair pulling.

But in spite of the violence, it seemed to be a highly good humored

James Dalco, defense attorney, objected to fingerprinting the new defendants. His objection was disregarded by Robert Pulliam, chief deputy, who said department of justice regulations required it. Fingerprints made on arraignment have been used in previous trials for comparison with prints on altered ballots.

The new indictments charge irregularities in the seventh and tenth precincts of the Twelfth ward and the twenty-first precinct of the Fifth ward.

taxicab, only to turn away in fear of attempting to enter. Between 50 and 75 woman workers assembled at Twenty-seventh and Walnut streets, half a block away, fearing to approach closer to the building and run the lines of strikers and sympathizers.

Later, however, when the ranks of strikers and sympathizers had been thinned somewhat by trips of the patrol wagon, A. B. Gernes, head of the Gernes Garment company, and Milton Gordon of the Gordon plant, picked up the girls in groups in their cars and drove them to the entrance.

By mid-morning managements of the three garment plants said virtually all of their workers had entered the plant and were at their tasks.

While officials of the Missouri and Gordon plants say that less than 10 per cent of their employes are on strike and the Gernes plant claims none on strike, officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers union claimed a considerable larger percentage to be out.

TOPEKA, March 23.—The senate and house conference committee working to iron out differences over the bill to regulate beer sales was reported to have reached an agreement Tuesday over the question of giving township officials control over beer dispensers.

The house had provided that no licenses could be issued by county commissioners without approval of the township officials. The senate refused to approve the township provision. The compromise agreement provides that when an individual applies to the county commissioners for a beer permit the county commissioners shall notify the township officials by registered mail of such application and shall fix a hearing date at which the township officials may appear and register a protest.

If the township officials do not appear to protest then the county commissioners may proceed to issue the permit.

It was expected that a report would be made to the two houses on the compromise agreement before the end of the day. A poll indicated a majority of the members of the two houses would accept the compromise plan.

"Nevertheless and notwithstanding, I agree to be present," Lewis' telegram said.

Lansing, the state capital, is in Ingham county—outside the jurisdiction of the Wayne county circuit court, which ordered the arrest of Lewis and the 6,000 Chrysler sit-down strikers because they ignored an injunction commanding them to leave nine plants. Should Sheriff Thomas Wilcox suddenly decide to enforce the court's order, he could arrest Lewis if the labor leader

...day morning joined the strike of members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union, affecting three factories at 2617 Grand avenue. The company has material cut for about a week ahead, according to Hyman Gordon, head of the Gordon plant.

Violence again marked the arrival at the three plants of employes who have not joined the walkout. And again, as Monday, Gordon was mauled by women strikers and strike sympathizers when he sought to enter the plant at the rear entrance on Walnut street.

Despite efforts of police to protect him, Gordon was pulled and shoved around in the street and on the sidewalk in front of the rear entrance and received several scratches on the face.

Jack M. Spry, international organizer for the union, said the signing up in the union Monday of the four Gordon plant cutters meant "a big break for the union" in the strike.

For the first time in the strike, which began last Wednesday, arrests were made Tuesday morning.

of court and liable to fine and imprisonment.

A representative of the sheriff's office was expected to go to the plant Tuesday afternoon to read the order.

The workers, from the time they first started their sit-down strike, have announced they had no intention of relinquishing the property until their demands were met. They ignored a previous demand to leave after it was posted as a bulletin March 18 by their employers. The workers said Monday, a few hours before the first hearings on the application for an injunction was heard, that they would resist eviction.

Favors Property Owner.

In granting the injunction, Judge Wright said the law on the matter clearly favored the property owner, as no one had a right to seize another's property. However, he conceded the fact workers, in many instances, were left at a disadvantage because of the lack of necessary legal machinery to appeal their cause.

"And until the congress or the state legislature establish laws for the workers, existing laws must be enforced," Judge Wright ruled.

Harry S. Davis and William Goodman, attorneys for the strikers, opposed the issuance of an injunction and asked for two or three days more time in which to try to end the differences between the workmen and their employers, who, they said, were "only inches apart."

Gives Workers' Views.

"The workmen," Davis asserted, "are laboring under the theory that what the law gives to one man should be given to others. Their employers are invoking the law against them, still they refuse to recognize the national labor relations act, which gives the worker the right to organize and to bargain collectively."

Davis said the men never had refused to arbitrate, in fact, he declared, they were eager to arbitrate with their employers in an attempt to bring about a peaceful settlement of the whole controversy.

As an example of what he said was the company's unwillingness to deal with the men, Davis cited a notice posted March 18 by company officials in which the men were ordered to vacate the premises they have held since March 12 under threat of dismissal and prosecution for trespassing.

Davis also asserted the Butler company did not enter court with clean hands since it had violated the provision of the national labor relations act by threatening dismissal and prosecution of the workers for their activities in organizing

Twenty-Three Arrested as Strikers, Non-Strikers and Police Stage Daily 'Show' at Garment Plant

Fights and hair-pullings between strikers and strike sympathizers and workers were frequent Tuesday morning at the scene of the strike of union members at three garment plants at 2617 Grand avenue. Twenty-three arrests were made. At the left, two women strikers and a policeman were caught by the camera as they fell to the sidewalk in one of the melees. At the right, a woman striker pulls the hair of a worker seeking to enter the plant while a policeman tries to separate them. Hyman Gordon, head of one of the factories, was given a severe mauling by the strikers in spite of police efforts to protect him. The women arrested were booked at the Nineteenth Street police station on charges of disturbing the peace. They were released on $25 bond.

Those statements can be made with reasonable certainty on the basis of what I was permitted to learn or witness on a trip to Moscow—first stop on my flying survey of Europe's 1937 war machines. The statements are made with a full knowledge of the fact the country's policy of secrecy has had a tendency to result in exaggeration abroad of the military power of the Soviets—a result the Soviets naturally have encouraged.

The soviets in 1937 are devoting one-fourth of their entire budget to military preparations, totaling 26 million roubles, which, at the arbitrary exchange rate of five roubles to the dollar, amount to $5,200,000,000.

Largest in World.

In numbers alone the Soviet standing army is the largest in the world, totaling 1,260,000, which is double what it was four years ago.

The union has a population of 170 million—the largest in the world except for China—to draw upon. At present, the population yields a conscription class of 2 million a year, from which only the best are chosen, to serve from two to four years.

Russia has 2¼ million trained reserves and 1¼ million partly trained. In addition 13 million youths receive rudimentary preliminary training under the volunteer air and chemical defense society.

Furthermore, the Soviets decided to adopt Benito Mussolini's plan for preliminary military training of children from 8 years old and upward in drills, games and sports designed to imbue them with the military spirit.

Vast Pool of Manpower.

An advantageous feature of the Soviet army is that only 37 per cent is composed of non-permanent militia, the remainder being permanent through the conscription period.

Thus the Soviets tower far above other European armies in numbers actually under arms, numbers of immediately available trained reserves and a vast pool of other manpower.

In two vital factors of modern warfare the Soviets undoubtedly are heavily superior, that is, in numbers of airplanes and tanks, regarding which the utmost secrecy is preserved.

Only comparative figures are ever given in official reports. The latest, issued last January, said only that aviation strength had increased in four years by 330 per cent, and [illegible] nourished and excellently disciplined.

NEW DISTURBANCE NETS ARRESTS IN GARMENT STRIKE

Nineteen strikers and strike sympathizers and four workers were booked at the Nineteenth street police station on charges of disturbing the peace. They were released on $25 bond each for appearance in municipal court Wednesday at 9 a. m. Frank Aylward represented the union as attorney.

Previously police merely have taken disturbers to the police station where they were held for a brief time and then released.

Forty policemen, including seven double cruiser crews in charge of Lt. C. W. Shepard of the Country Club station, 10 motorcycle patrolmen in charge of Sgt. George B. Meachim, and D. E. Reddish, detective assigned to labor troubles, ward at the garment plants striving to keep order.

Crowd Annoys Police.

Police were annoyed by a large crowd of men spectators, including many apparent strike sympathizers, which assembled across the street from the Walnut street entrance to the building. Between 300 and 400 [illegible] in the crowd, it was estimated. It was necessary to drive the crowd of spectators back several times.

A. B. Gernes, head of the Gernes Garment company, said virtually all of his women employes had entered the plant by 9 a. m. The Gordon and Missouri Garment plant claimed a large majority of their workers had entered by that hour. A fleet of taxicabs carried Gordon workers to the door, from which the workers entered the building through lines of police holding back struggling strikers and sympathizers.

List Those Booked.

Strikers and strike sympathizers booked by police included:

Mrs. Nellie Mesaeaas, 700 Kensington avenue.
Miss Anna Talperis, 3000 Brooklyn avenue.
Mrs. Josephine Nichols, 2117 East Tenth street.
Miss Mabel Jordan, 1624 Belleview avenue.

The most conservative estimates of foreign observers indicate that the Soviets possess 3,000 military airplanes, including 500 bombers of modern design and efficiency. They agree that the number may be increased rapidly because the manufacturing plants are operating on a mass production basis. An American engineer who visited one large plant said Russia is equipped for the biggest mass production of any European nation.

BATTLE ROYAL IS RESUMED AT DOOR OF PLANT

More Arrests Are Made in Garment Union Melee Here.

Violence flared anew Thursday in the strike of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union, when the strikers and their sympathizers attempted to prevent nonstrikers from entering the plants of the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, the Missouri Garment company and the Gernes Garment company at 2817 Grand avenue.

A number of strikers and nonstrikers were arrested when they engaged in hair pulling and punching melees, and one policeman, James Gildee, assigned to the Nineteenth street police station, was injured when he tried to separate combatants at the Walnut street door of the building. Gildee suffered a sprained ankle.

Treated at General.

Mrs. Frankie Bennett, 27 years old, 1317 Troost avenue, suffered a scratched arm and scratches. She was given emergency treatment at the general hospital.

Approximately 60 policemen were on duty when the workers began arriving at the building to go to work. As each nonstriker appeared, a rush started in her direction and the police were kept busy trying to afford her protection. Many of the nonstrikers were isolated from their companions and subjected to severe maulings.

Increase in Violence.

Lieut. W. C. Shepherd of the Country Club police station, who was in charge of the police at the scene, said it appeared to him that fewer nonstrikers were attempting to enter the building, but that the violence attendant upon such attempts had increased.

Factory Structure to Go Up on Old Wyandotte Courthouse Site.

A new Montgomery Ward & Co. development on the site of the old Wyandotte county courthouse in Kansas City, Kas., at Seventh street and Minnesota avenue, was assured Thursday, when the sale of the site was announced.

R. W. Perry, former Kansas City banker, was announced as the successful bidder for the site. His bid of $180,000, submitted to the Wyandotte county board of commissioners.

Mr. Perry announced immediately that he was under contract to sell the site to Montgomery Ward & Co., for the erection of a retail store.

Mr. Perry submitted the only bid for the property.

Got Bid for Jail Site.

A bid for the old jail site at the northeast corner of Seventh street and State avenue, in which the Security National bank, as trustee for a group of 10 business men, offered $30,000, was not immediately approved.

Mr. Perry's purchase of the courthouse site made effective at once, it was announced, a long-time lease which had been made by Montgomery Ward & Co., contingent upon the sale. The lease contract calls for 20 years, with a provision for two additional 5-year terms.

The company, probably within the next 30 days, will start the construction of a 3-story concrete and brick building, the improvements to cost between $350,000 and $400,000. The building will be used as a retail store, and approximately 100 persons, the majority of them resi-

...W. C. Shepherd of the Country Club police station, who was in charge of the police at the scene, said it appeared to him that fewer strikers were attempting to enter the building, but that the violence attendant upon such attempts had increased.

While the fights were occurring at the garment plants, strikers, nonstrikers and sympathizers of both sides who were arrested Tuesday were preparing for their appearance in the South municipal court today to answer to charges of disturbing the peace.

Hearing on an application for an injunction, sought by the companies to prevent interference by strikers, also was postponed. BOSTON, March 25. — (UP) — Four persons were killed in South Boston Thursday in what police described as a triple murder and suicide.

nonintervention effective.

The French suggestion was advanced as a possible measure to present ban on shipping "volunteers" and war supplies to Spain proves ineffective.

Earlier Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister, outlined the plan to Sir George Clerk, new British ambassador.

Reports Cause Anxiety.

From this conference, and a conference between Delbos and the German ambassador, came the report from Paris that France was ready to ask for coercive action to stop Italian volunteers from Spain. This, coupled with the belief Italy would send such volunteers in view of reported severe defeat of Italians on the Madrid front, caused anxiety here.

But coupled with the semi-official denials from Rome that any Italian volunteers have been sent so far since the international ban on volunteers was imposed February 20, the authoritative disclosure here of the new French plan gave hope of an agreement.

A QUIET DAY IN STRIKE

GARMENT WORKERS AND UNION MEMBERS CLASH ONLY ONCE.

Police Are on Guard as Women Hurry From Factories to Street Cars—Sitters Remain in Lobby.

Only one brief skirmish between striking members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and workers of the three garment companies occupying the building at 2617 Grand avenue marred the order maintained by police late yesterday.

With the entrance to the building closed for the second day by some fifty seated members of the union, workers left by a rear door on Walnut street when the plants closed at 4:30 o'clock. A detail of police escorted the women to the street car stop at Twenty-sixth street and Grand avenue.

Many of the workers who have refused to join the strike hurried from the door with heads lowered, as they passed the two placard-bearing pickets. Others laughed and joked with the pickets. A crowd of strikers on the east side of Walnut street shouted to the departing workers, urging them to join the strike.

STRIKERS PURSUE THREE.

The three companies against which the union is directing the strike are the Missouri Garment Company, occupying the second floor of the building; the Gernes Garment Company, Inc., on the third floor, and the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, on the fourth and fifth floors. The one outbreak between strikers and workers occurred shortly after 5 o'clock when Miss Waneta Armstrong, 908 Benton boulevard, 18-year-old employee of the Gordon Brothers plant, ran across Grand avenue to the northwest corner of the intersection, where there were no police guards. With her ran two companions.

A group of strikers hurried in pursuit. Overtaking Miss Armstrong, they beat her with handbags. One woman slapped the worker's face. She fell to the sidewalk, breaking her wristwatch. Police hurried to the scene and put five strikers in the patrol wagon.

"This makes me kinda mad," said Miss Armstrong.

The arrested strikers were taken to the Nineteenth street police station. They were released after questioning

SECOND NIGHT IN LOBBY.

As the last of the workers departed, the fifty women holding the front entrance to the building prepared for their second night in the drafty vestibule.

"We're really keeping house now," one of them explained. "We have a mop and a broom, plenty of cots and blankets. We're comfortable enough to stay here until the company owners are ready to talk terms."

As on the previous night, the union organization provided the evening meal. Two policemen were stationed near the entrance.

Miss Wave Tobin, business agent for the union, asserted that of 600 women employed by the three plants normally, fewer than 200 reported for work yesterday. The three company owners asserted only a few employees were not at work yesterday. Officers of the Missouri Garment Company said 90 per cent of the 270 employees were on duty. The Gordon plant reported only sixteen of the 300 women employed there were absent. A. B. Gernes said all except four of his 200 employees reported for work yesterday.

"Three of the four are on the sick list," he said. "The fourth one, I suppose, is on strike."

Miss Tobin said the union had little quarrel with the Gernes plant.

"We are interested chiefly in the other two companies," she said.

SERVICES SUNDAY FOR L. S. HAWKES, VICTIM OF SMOKE

Manufacturer of Cabinets Found Suffocated on Floor of Home.

Funeral services for LeGrande S. Hawkes, 42 years old, who died of suffocation from smoke Friday night at his home, 8802 the Paseo, will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday in the Freeman chapel, Forty-second street and Baltimore avenue. Burial will be in Logan, Utah.

Mrs. Hawkes Saturday was at the home of William F. Burgmeier, 6... the Paseo, where she spent the ... following the tragic death of her husband. Mr. Hawkes' relatives are in Boise, Id.

Mr. Hawkes was found unconscious on the floor in the living room of his home about 8 p. m. Friday when firemen arrived in response to an alarm sent in by neighbors who detected smoke seeping through the walls.

Indications in the Hawkes home, after the fire was quenched, were that Mr. Hawkes had fallen asleep in a chair while smoking and that the cigaret had ignited the upholstery of the chair.

The chair was in flames and the fire had eaten through the floor into the basement. Mr. Hawkes was prone on the floor, his face bruised from the fall. He appeared to have been partly aroused by the heat and smoke, but too much choked to fight his way to safety. Mr. Hawkes, 42 years old, was owner of the Hawkes Manufacturing company, 1822 Main street, which made and marketed a special type of filing cabinet. He came to Kansas City in 1934 with his product and located here to manufacture and sell it in the Middle West after several years in the East.

Mr. Hawkes, who was born in Boise, Ida., was in New York City from 1914 to 1917, inclusive, as elder and missionary for the Mormon church, in which he was reared.

After coming to Kansas City he forsook the Mormon faith and affiliated with the Rev. Dr. L. H. Birkhead's Liberal center in 1933.

Also participating in the reorganization are Andres Soriano, Manila capitalist, and a group of his associates. Two of them, Niels Nyborg and Martin H. Ruppel, flew to the United States on the China Clipper a month ago and came to Kansas City to collaborate in the engineering and financial phases of the deal.

Sales Concentration.

It was through Mr. Sund that the Manila interests came into the Kansas City enterprise. During the years of prohibition Mr. Sund was in Manila as general superintendent of a brewery and cold storage plant owned by Mr. Soriano.

According to Mr. Drum, there will be no public offering of securities by the new company. The capital stock, 30,000 shares of no-par value, already has been subscribed by the Muehlebach estate, the Omaha brewery group and the Manila interests.

When the new brewery begins operation it will employ from 175 to 200 men, depending upon the season. Principal sales efforts will be concentrated in the Kansas City area, where the Muehlebach brews formerly were so popular.

tions. Both sides agreed that they accepted those fundamentals.

"Now since we all agree on this," said Judge Brown, "here is the sort of agreement I think both sides should accept."

Then Reads Proposal.

Judge Brown then read his suggested agreement. His second point, however, that providing that the union should represent its members only, brought protests from Aylward, Russell and Perstein.

The union representatives protested that while such agreements were all right in theory, they did not work out in practice and that the closed shop was the only answer.

Judge Brown declined to amend his proposal.

"No court," he said, "can approve a closed shop agreement and be fair to all concerned."

Upon completion of the reading of the proposed agreement, White said all three companies were ready immediately to sign. Aylward and Russell said the matter would have to be submitted to the strikers.

Other points in the proposed agreement included reinstatement of any employes discharged for union activity, no strikes until points of disagreement were fully discussed by employer and union, no violence, intimidation or interfering with business in case of strike and no intimidation of employes by either union or employers.

Action Sets Precedent.

The conference was arranged Friday when Judge Brown set a precedent in labor troubles in refusing to grant an injunction sought by the three companies to prevent interference by strikers and offered to act as arbitrator in the settlement of the differences. Coincident with that hearing Friday 41 strikers and 16 non-strikers were discharged in South municipal court when they were called before Judge James H. Anderson on charges of disturbing the peace in connection with disturbances at the factories.

The scene at the building housing the three factories was far different Saturday morning than in the last 10 days when 60 policemen assigned to the strike were unable to keep order and fights between strikers and nonstrikers were thick and fast. Saturday morning things were peaceful. Only three pickets walked up and down in the swirling snow in front of the doors.

Union Leaders Seek Right to Bargain for All Employes.

Judge Darius A. Brown's efforts to compromise a garment union strike rather than issue an injunction against mass picketing struck a snag Saturday when union leaders objected to his proposal that it be recognized as the sole collective bargaining agency for its members only. The leaders insisted that it be recognized as the bargaining agency for all employes.

Attorneys for the three garment companies said Judge Brown's proposal was satisfactory. Meyer Perlstein, St. Louis, district director for the Ladies' Garment Workers' union, who voiced the objection, said he would submit the proposal to the strikers.

He will report back Monday morning, when Judge Brown is scheduled to take up the companies' application for an injunction.

"No" to Closed Shop.

Judge Brown declined to approve a closed shop agreement, on which the union insisted, on the ground that it would be unfair to employes not members of the union.

At the conference, begining at 11 a. m., were Milton Gordon, president of Gordon Bros. Manufacturing company; A. B. Gernes, president of Gernes Garment company, and Sidney M. NOOSE FOR NEGRO

G. A. Allen Sentenced to Be Hanged April 30.

Granville A. Allen, Negro, 25 years old, Saturday was sentenced by Judge Brown Harris to be hanged April 30 for the murder of Howard Preston, 45, who was killed by Allen in his home at 1010 Chestnut avenue, October 20, 1936.

Judge Harris set the date for the hanging after he had overruled Allen's motion for a new trial. Attorneys for Allen indicated they would appeal to the state supreme court, an action which automatically would stay the hanging until the case has been passed on by the higher court.

Allen was found guilty by a jury in Judge Harris' court March 16.

Testimony was that he had entered the Preston home to rob. Preston heard him in the apartment and engaged in a scuffle with the intruder. In the scuffle, the Negro's gun was discharged, the bullet striking Preston and killing him. As Allen fled from the apart-

Police officers were rushed to duty outside the building. A patrol wagon stood near by ready to house any troublemakers, but no arrests were made.

H. Gordon, president, who with Milton Gordon, vice-president, operates the Gordon Brothers Garment Company, said union officials appeared at that plant yesterday and attempted to organize the workers under the union. Mr. Gordon said the girls circulated a petition which contained signatures of 95 per cent of the 300 workers, expressing a desire not to join the union.

AT ALL THREE COMPANIES.

"Knowing the feeling of the girls expressed in the petition we decided to fight it out," Mr. Gordon said. "The result was the union struck at all three garment companies in the building."

Only the few union members employed in the Gordon plant and a few others who were ill, were absent from their work today, Mr. Gordon reported. The plant was running smoothly but the union agitators were expected to continue to attempt to force a strike, for a few days.

A. B. Gernes, president of the garment company bearing his name, said the attempted strike came as a surprise to him today. There had been no hint of a union threat in his organization. Shortly after the trouble started the 250 women employed in his company entered the building through the east door and went to work.

The hundreds of women and the presence of police attracted the attention of the downtown-bound workers and caused a traffic congestion that required the direction of several of the officers to straighten out.

INJUNCTION STOPS HAIR PULLING IN GARMENT STRIKE

Workers in Taxicabs Find Way to Factories Unmolested.

Workers at three garment factories at 2617 Grand avenue went to work peacefully Wednesday morning under protection of an injunction against violence by striking members of the International Ladies Garment Workers union.

It was the first morning in two weeks those not on strike did not have to dodge through lines of police striving to hold back struggling groups of strikers bent on pulling hair, snatching hats and coats and getting in a blow here and there.

The injunction against violence on the part of the strikers or interference with the operation of the three companies, issued Tuesday by Judge Darius A. Brown in circuit court, was read to more than a score of strike pickets by deputy sheriffs Wednesday morning. The pickets contented themselves with walking up and down in pairs in front of the Walnut street entrance of the building as nonstrikers were taken to the plants in taxicabs.

Compromise Fails.

Judge Brown issued the injunction after his efforts had failed to bring the managements of the three concerns—the Gernes Garment company, Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company and Missouri Garment company—and representatives of the union into agreement. The union rejected Judge Brown's proposed agreement because it provided that the union be recognized as the sole bargaining agency for its own members instead of for all employes as the union demanded.

Floyd Gibson, chief deputy, and Harry Skinner, Matt Schinnick, jr., and John A. Deming, deputy sheriffs, appeared at the plants at 7:20 a. m. and read the injunction [illegible]

Floyd Gibson, chief deputy, and Harry Skinner, Matt Schinnick, jr., and John A. Deming, deputy sheriffs, appeared at the plants at 7:30 a. m. and read the injunction twice at both the rear and front doors. The injunction bore the names of 165 defendants, but it was said there were many duplications of names.

There were but a handful of policemen, compared with previous days, on duty at the plants Wednesday morning and they were getting a rest from the arduous task of holding back the determined groups of strikers who have attempted to prevent employes entering the plants the last three weeks.

To Try Legally.

Miss Wave Tobin, business agent of the International Ladies Garment Workers union, said the pickets would obey the injunction but would continue by peaceful means to try to persuade nonstrikers to join the union and leave work until the three garment companies sign union agreements.

"I have worked on nine successful strikes here," she said, "and in seven of them we have been under injunction."

Throughout the strike managements of the garment strikes have asserted that but few of their employes were members of the union and on strike. On the other hand, union officials have claimed a majority of employes as union members and on strike.

Five other garment manufacturing plants here have signed union agreements recently.

Picket Line Thins at Butler Plant

There was no indication of violence at the Butler Manufacturing company, 7400 East Thirteenth street, Wednesday. The picket lines of the strikers were considerably thinner and there were fewer police around the plant.

Only a few executives and department heads were permitted to enter the plant.

Delegates of the CIO and the American Federation of Labor, who formed committees to aid the strikers, announced Tuesday night that a weekly contribution of $1,000 has been pledged to aid the strikers.

Officials of the company did not comment Wednesday concerning the possibility of early negotiations for a settlement.

The strikers' attorney asked police to remove operating cabs from the streets to forestall fresh outbreaks. Two hundred officers were held at the central station and seventy-five at the city hall as a precaution against disorder.

Governor A. B. Chandler of Kentucky and Mayor Neville Miller of Louisville joined the opposition to sit-down tactics. In a joint statement they termed sit-down strikes unlawful and urged workers to refrain from taking part in them.

In Chicago the state's attorney's office and the municipal court joined police in an attempt to discourage sit-down demonstrations. A 78-year-old statute was revived to protect property of employers and under it warrants were issued for the arrest of strike leaders.

INJUNCTION AGAINST GARMENT UNION ASKED BY 3 COMPANIES.

Fists Still Fly at 2617 Grand, and Women Locked in Patrol Wagon Cheer Others; are Released After Workers Depart.

Three garment companies occupying the Shukert building at 2617 Grand avenue yesterday afternoon applied for an injunction against the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and forty-five members who are conducting a strike against them.

Judge Emory H. Wright set a hearing at 2 o'clock tomorrow. The application asked that the court order prohibit the women from occupying the premises or interfering with the companies' operations.

The injunction was sought by the Gernes Garment Company, the Missouri Garment Company and the Gordon Brothers' Manufacturing Company after a skirmish yesterday morning, in which Hyman Gordon, head of the Gordon Brothers' plant, was struck by the women strikers as he entered the building.

RUSH POLICE LINES.

The demonstrators yesterday afternoon attempted to surge through the police lines every time a group of workers was let out a rear door of the building. Grinning police shoved them back, but there were flurries of fists and hair-pulling.

After each attack, Sergt. W. D. Tays shoved one or two women into a patrol wagon standing by the door. Those in the patrol wagon cheered the demonstrators. After the plant had closed Sergeant Tays released the women.

Twice in the demonstration paper bags full of water were dropped from upper floors of the besieged building, striking no one.

AGAINST THREE COMPANIES.

Miss Wave Tobin, manager of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union No. 118, said that a statement attributed to her yesterday that the union was not attempting to keep employees of the Gernes Garment Company from working was not true. The strike is against all three companies in the building, she said.

Cheers rose from the forty-five strikers as Miss Tobin announced that four men pattern cutters in the Gordon company had joined the union earlier yesterday. They cheered also when taxicab drivers were dissuaded by union members from waiting to transport non-union workers to their homes.

SITTERS BLOCK A DOOR

UNION WOMEN FAIL, HOWEVER, IN EFFORT TO STOP WORKERS.

Small Group Fills Building Entrance Through Which 800 Garment Employees Pass—Another Doorway Used.

A threatened strike at the three garment companies occupying four floors of the Shubert 3617 Grand building today turned the 3600 block on Grand avenue into a seething mass of more than 800 women workers as union members blocked the entrance to the building by sitting down on the floor just inside the entrance.

The workers are employed by the Missouri Garment Company, occupying the second floor; the Gernes Garment Company, Inc., third floor, and the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, occupying the fourth and fifth floors of the building.

THROUGH ANOTHER DOOR.

One young woman paraded in front of the building bearing a sign calling for a strike in the three garment plants, demanding an end to "starvation wages," and bearing the name of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, No. 118. Less than two hours after the workers were blocked from their work, they entered the building through an east door, while union members continued to sit in the hallway of the main entrance, and others loitered on the sidewalk.

Police officers were rushed to duty outside the building. A patrol wagon stood near by ready to house any troublemakers, but no arrests were made.

Anniversary Finds Them Far Apart—Exchange Greetings.

(By the Associated Press.)

WARM SPRINGS, GA., March 17.—The thirty-second anniversary of their wedding found President and Mrs. Roosevelt 1,000 miles apart today, but an exchange of greetings recalled to them that memorable St. Patrick's Day in New York City when Uncle "Teddy" gave Anna Eleanor Roosevelt away to her sixth cousin.

Instead of a family dinner at the White House in Washington, the customary celebration since he became chief executive; the President arranged another day of relaxation at his vacation cottage here. Mrs. Roosevelt was in Oklahoma on a lecture tour. She may join the President here after speaking at Birmingham March 23.

Members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union attempted to force a strike today for the employees of three garment companies in the Shukert 2617 Grand building and proceeded to sit down on the floor just inside the entrance to block the workers from their jobs. Some of the union members are shown above carrying on their sit-down blockade. Wave Tobin, business agent for the union, is shown standing at the left reading a newspaper. The three companies delayed by the threatening strike were the Missouri Garment Company, the Gernes Garment Company and the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, all in the building at 2617 Grand avenue.

FAIL TO STOP WORKERS

UNION PICKETS AT GARMENT COMPANY DOORS IN SKIRMISHES.

Police Escort Employees to Entrance and Lose Several Buttons Off Their Coats—A Woman Injured.

A recurrence of skirmishes involving hat grabbing and button tearing marked today's strike activities at the garment companies in the Shukert building at 2017 Grand avenue, as workers attempted to enter the rear entrance of the building on Walnut street.

Shortly after 7 o'clock the rear entrance was crowded with a group of about seventy-five pickets who attempted to dissuade workers in the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company and the Missouri Garment Company from entering the building.

POLICE TRY FOR CALM.

Under orders from Robert J. Coffey, chief of police, a squad of about twenty patrolmen under the direction of D. E. Reddish, detective, endeavored to maintain order as the workers entered the building.

About fifty workers assembled on Walnut street a half block from the door, afraid to run the gauntlet to enter the building. They later were escorted to the door in a motor car by officials of the Gordon plant, where about half of the workers' machines were idle today. Included in the waiting group were several employees of the Gernes Garment Company, Inc., on the third floor. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union No. 118, which is calling the strike, is not attempting to keep the Gernes employees from working, according to Miss Wave Tobin, manager of the striking union.

Today when Hyman Gordon, president of the company bearing his name, attempted to enter the plant the pickets surged forward and broke the line formed by police. They seized his hat and pulled at his clothes, until he reached the safety of the door. Police recovered his hat.

Gordon said he would close down the Gordon plant rather than sign an agreement with the union.

CRUMB OF TWO SIDES.

When recruits to the union ranks appeared shouts of cheer would break from those already on picket duty.

NEW CAP FOR BANDIT'S FOE.

Officer Williams to Be Honored by South Central Group.

Glenn E. Williams will have a new police cap tomorrow, to replace the one blasted off his head last Friday by bandit bullets.

The presentation will be made by the South Central Business Association at its luncheon tomorrow, at which Officer Williams will be a special guest.

Williams, who shot it out with a bandit attempting to rob a loan office at 3119 Troost avenue Friday, has been in the Thirty-first street dis-the line formed by police. They seized his hat and pulled at his clothes, until he reached the safety of the door. Police recovered his hat.

Gordon said he would close down the Gordon plant rather than sign an agreement with the union.

CRUMB OF TWO KINDS.

When recruits to the union ranks appeared shouts of cheer would break from those already on picket duty, while derisive cheers would greet workers as they arrived in taxicabs or private cars.

Police directed motor car drivers with worker passengers to drive as closely to the curb as possible and would assist them to run the gauntlet, but did not offer to help them from the motor cars. Miss Tobin, manager and organizer of the union, watched the proceedings from the sidelines.

Several women were placed in a police wagon after skirmishing with the police and when the capacity had been reached they were taken to a police station and released. As they waited in the wagon they were given cigarettes by Miss Tobin.

The east side of Walnut street was lined with a crowd of over 100 spectators watching the proceedings.

Several of the police lost gold plated buttons on their uniforms. Shortly after 8 o'clock a number of pickets believed to be from other garment companies left the scene and considerably thinned the ranks of the strikers.

Miss Mary Brown, 38 years old, 3410 Troost avenue, was taken to General hospital with a broken arm she said she suffered when she fell at the entrance to the building, when she was pushed back by persons in front of her.

Well, I'll Tell You—

By Boe Burns.

As long as we are contented, we should turn a deaf ear to all wild stories that make us dissatisfied with our lot. Nine times out of ten, if you git to the bottom of these wild tales, you'll find out that there's a catch in 'em. We had a married men's club down home that used to meet every Thursday night. You couldn't find a more happily married bunch of men anywhere. They never kicked about breakin' up early because they just took it for granted that they had to be home with their wives by 10 o'clock.

Finally a new family moved to town and the man joined this club. Right away, he started braggin' about bein' boss in his home. He bragged that he could stay out as late as he wanted to and go home whenever he pleased and he showed 'em a latch key to prove it. Pretty soon, all the other husbands started complainin' to their wives about not havin' any freedom, and they told their wives about this new man carryin' the latch key.

A committee of wives called on this new lady and told her that her husband was settin' a bad example for their husbands. They said "We even hear that you let your husband carry a latch key." The man's wife said, "Well, yes I do let him carry a key, jest to humor him—he likes to show it to the boys to show how independent he is, but the key don't fit the door!"

THE HAIR PULLING GROWS

POLICE UNABLE TO STOP STRIFE AT GARMENT FACTORIES.

Women Scuffle and Scream at Each Other as Garment Union Pickets Attempt to Keep Workers From Jobs.

For two hours today women pickets and employees of three garment firms at 3617 Grand avenue scuffled and screamed at each other as the pickets attempted to prevent the workers from entering the building. About thirty-five police officers tried to keep order. The officers said it was the "worst day so far."

James Gildea, a patrolman, suffered a sprained right ankle at the scene and went to his home. Mrs. Frankie Bennett, 23 years old, 1317 Troost avenue, a picket, received a badly wrenched left wrist and severe lip bruises. She was treated at the General hospital and then arrested and charged with disturbing the peace. Eleven other pickets and two workers also were arrested today.

The fourteen women arrested today, twenty-one arrested yesterday and twenty-three arrested Tuesday are scheduled to appear at 9 o'clock tomorrow in the South Side court. Some of the women have been arrested each day.

As motor cars containing workers pulled to the curbing at the building today, the officers formed a double line leading from the curb to the entrance of the building at 3617 Grand avenue. The workers then dashed through the police lanes. Often, however, the pickets broke through the police cordon and then clothes were torn, hair pulled, faces scratched and shins kicked. Several times workers' lunches were scattered on the sidewalk and purses were ripped open.

The pickets are members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and are attempting to enlist workers at the Missouri Garment Company, the Garnes Garment Company and the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, which co-mistaken for Queen Mother Mary, died Wednesday at the age of 71. Sentries often saluted Mrs. Lee as she walked from her home at Windsor and scores of visitors photographed her in the belief she was Queen Mary.

Twenty Men Return to Work, Unmolested by Pickets.

About twenty men returned to their jobs at the Butler Manufacturing Company, 7400 East Thirteenth street, today, according to E. E. Norquist, president of the company. It was the first work since March 12, when a sit-down strike started.

The building was surrounded by pickets today, but the men appearing for work were not molested. Mr. Norquist said a few men would be added each day. Eight plant employees engaged in unloading a car of coal at Twelfth street and Crystal avenue, near the plant, were the target of rock throwing strikers until police arrived. No arrests were made and the men continued their work.

The sit-down strikers abandoned the plant yesterday morning on a circuit court order.

After another fruitless effort today to establish peace between workers and the three garment companies at 2617 Grand avenue, Judge Darius A. Brown issued a temporary restraining order, enjoining the workers from further violence.

In the meantime, while lawyers were arguing for and against the injunction another of the almost daily battles was in progress in front of the plants.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 30.—The bill proposing permanent registration for Kansas City is doomed unless the Democratic organization of that city gives the word to revive it.

That is the situation today. The pending proposal is destined to take its place alongside similar bills which Kansas City has sought enacted into law starting in 1920.

It was all but a knockout blow that was delivered the bill last night when Shannon C. Douglass, who told the house committee he was authorized to speak for the Kansas City Democratic organization, said the pending proposal was "mechanically unworkable."

The organization favors a workable permanent registration law and he is willing to submit a substitute for the pending bill, Douglass related. The substitute, he said, would be forwarded to the committee shortly. The understanding here is that the substitute represents the Kansas City bill which failed in the house in the 1921 session after it was loaded down with amendments.

There is an outside chance yet that new life may be pumped into the proposal, but time is short, the assembly is tackling some of its biggest statewide problems, and efforts must come fast.

Los Angeles, March 30.—Police disclosed today that after arresting two Japanese following a knife fight they broke into a locked chamber of an Alameda street rooming house and found a radio set, maps of Hawaiian fortifications and plans of the Los Angeles water system.

One of the Japanese, wounded in the stomach, was taken to the county hospital. Officers said he was in such a condition that he was unable to talk, beyond giving his name as T. Onishi. The other Japanese identified himself as Buichiri Abe.

"We are convinced that Abe is connected with a foreign spy organization and was in the business of soliciting and forwarding of military information," said Detective Capt. Bert Wallis.

"We believe his fight with Onishi was the result of espionage activities in which the two men must have engaged. It will be up to the government to investigate this, however."

Before deciding upon issuance of the restraining order, Judge Brown conferred again with lawyers for the workers and the union. It was to no avail. Lawyers for the union asserted there would be no settlement until the companies recognized the union as the sole bargaining agency for the employees.

Judge Brown ordered that the temporary restraining order against the pickets and the union they represent be drawn immediately. He said it would be served individually upon the union representatives late today. Lawyers for the union said they would file a motion immediately for the dissolving of the injunction.

First reports of violence in the strike of milk wagon drivers of the Meyer Sanitary Milk company were received by Kansas City, Kas., police Monday as R. O. Jackson, business agent of the teamsters' union, prepared to go before the federal labor relations board to discuss possible charges against the dairy owners.

William E. White, commissioner of conciliation, United States department of labor, was in Kansas City Monday, reportedly to attempt to settle the strike. Jackson conferred with him concerning working conditions at the plant.

Mayor Don C. McCombs asked a committee from the strikers to meet with him to discuss plans for preserving order. He said that the Kansas mob law made the city liable for injuries received by persons.

Craft Lost Saturday May Be in Desolate Arizona Area.

By United Press.

SPRINGERVILLE, ARIZ., April 5.—Posses of lumberjacks patroled desolate mountain sides in this area Monday in search of a Douglas transport plane carrying eight passengers which an 11-year-old boy contended he saw crash.

The child, a son of Henry McDaniel, ranger atop Escudilla peak in the White mountains, told his parents he watched the plane spiral to the ground as he was playing in the yard of his isolated home.

The child's story at first was discounted, but later reports of persons seeing the plane flying dangerously low and its motors missing fire convinced officers a search should be made.

Mrs. Inez Booth, manager of the Springerville telephone office, said residents in Greer and Alpine, both tiny mountain hamlet in this area, had heard the plane about 3 p. m. Saturday.

Judge Brown Sets Garment Case Hearing for Wednesday.

Twenty-one citations for contempt of court against 20 women members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union, involved in a strike at three garment plants at 2617 Grand avenue, were issued Monday afternoon by Judge Darius A. Brown.

One of the citations was against Miss Wave Tobin, business agent of the union. Two of them named Rosalie Poole.

Those named were ordered to appear before Judge Brown at 9 a. m. Wednesday to show why they should not be held in contempt for alleged violation of the injunction he issued last week prohibiting violence and interference with nonstrikers.

The issuance of the citations followed a conference between Paul T. White and Harry L. Thomas, attorneys for the garment companies.

The child's story at first was discounted, but later reports of persons seeing the plane flying dangerously low and its motors missing fire convinced officers a search should be made.

Mrs. Inez Booth, manager of the Springerville telephone office, said residents in Greer and Alpine, both tiny mountain hamlet in this area, had heard the plane about 3 p. m. Saturday.

These reports checked with the boy's assertion he saw the plane fall at 3:30 p. m.

Approximately 200 marching, singing, shouting strikers and strike sympathizers Monday morning prevented entrance of nonstrikers to the three garment plants. The few workers who did try to run the gauntlet of the picket line were severely mauled despite efforts of 44 police to maintain order.

Up to noon only three or four nonstriking employes had entered the three plants and they did not go unscathed.

At that hour there still were approximately 80 pickets on duty, half of them taking turns patrolling the sidewalk in front of the door while the other half kept warm in a restaurant on Walnut street.

DETROIT, April 5.—(UP)—Gov. Frank Murphy, confident he can restore peaceful relations between capital and labor in this strike-ridden industrial area, planned a series of conferences with automobile manufacturers Monday in an effort to settle controversies affecting 73,400 workers.

The red-haired executive, successful mediator in the 44-day nationwide strike of General Motors corporation employes, resumed at 10 a. m. his conference with Walter P. Chrysler and John L. Lewis on plans to end a strike that has made 60,000 Chrysler workers idle.

Indicating he believed a Chrysler settlement was near, Murphy announced that "some time later this week" he would turn his mediation attempts to the Hudson and Reo motor car company strikes. Approximately 11,000 Hudson employes and 3,400 Reo workers are idle.

mage. Lieutenant Shepard said, at the request of the managements of the three plants, the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, the Missouri Garment company.

It was there the police and picket line forces were established. Many workers arrived in taxicabs and by street car to take one look at the imposing line of pickets, including many women from other garment factories and other unionized industries, and depart hurriedly.

Those who chose to brave the circling line of marching pickets found themselves in the midst of a scrambling mass of hair-pulling, kicking, scratching women. Meanwhile, police were trying to keep order against impossible odds.

Advised Not to Risk It.

Soon F. Parsons, mechanic of the Missouri Garment company, on instructions of the plant superintendent, stood in the street and turned away all workers who arrived at the plants in motor cars and taxicabs.

"Don't risk it," he told them. "You will get hurt."

Each group of nonstrikers that turned away brought cheers from the strikers and sympathizers, who continued their slow march past the door.

Entering Fourth Week.

Police said the situation Monday morning at the plants was by far the worst they had encountered in the strike, which is entering its fourth week.

A large group of men sympathizers assembled across the street from the factories, watching the picketing. One of the office workers in the Gernes plant, Yale Wolf, tried to run the picket line and was repulsed. He went across the street and immediately was struck in the mouth and knocked down by a man sympathizer. Wolf was unable to point out his assailant to police.

A large group of nonstriker women also assembled across the street. Several strikers went over to talk with them and try to persuade them to join the union. That resulted in a fight and the arrest of three women.

One traffic accident was due indirectly to the picketing. Almost in front of the entrance to the plant, a beer truck halted and a following motorist crashed into the rear of it. The car was badly damaged.

The Georgia Power company had asked the court to stay an injunction which it held prevented it from an action originating in the Tennessee federal courts against the TVA.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Recent visitors to the White House report President Roosevelt's opinion on sit-down strikes to be that the technique is illegal and that public opinion will cause labor to abandon or alter it.

The administration attitude is that there is no authority for federal intervention in these strikes, especially under existing interpretations of the constitution. It appears Roosevelt does not consider the sit-downers to be un-American elements bent on subversive objectives, as do some adverse critics of current labor methods.

Roosevelt already is on record, however, in favor of making labor unions responsible for the actions of their membership—a policy which would discourage the socalled "unauthorized strike."

There is no immediate prospect, however, of a presidential statement on the sit-down technique unless there is some fundamental change in the situation. The White House policy of silence is in contrast with the alarm of some notable congressional Democrats and their eagerness to obtain a repudiation of sit-downs either from the president or in the form of an expression of senate sentiment.

STRIKERS AGAIN BAR 3 GARMENT PLANTS' CREWS

But Scene Is Much Less Riotous Than One of Preceding Day.

Striking members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union and sympathizers again kept production workers from going to their tasks in three garment factories at 2617 Grand avenue Tuesday morning.

Only three or four non-strikers of the dozen or so who appeared at the scene attempted to run the picket line, established again at the rear entrance on Walnut street, but they were repulsed. Several of the office force of the Gernes Garment company, however, gained entrance at the front door on Grand avenue.

The strike situation was considerably less acute Tuesday morning than on Monday because fewer non-strikers tried to enter the plant and because the number of pickets marching up and down in front of the doors had been limited by the union to a scant 20 or 25 on orders from Otto P. Higgins, director of police. A hundred or more others, however, stood across the street or occupied a nearby restaurant.

Meyer Perlstein, St. Louis, district director of the union, arrived here Tuesday morning. He said he expected "some important telephone calls" and might have something to announce later in the day.

Miss Wave Tobin, business agent of the union, who was among 20 women cited Monday for contempt of court for alleged violation of the injunction against violence issued by Judge Darius A. Brown, said none of the pickets on duty Tuesday was named in the injunction.

HIGGINS CLEARS NON-STRIKERS' WAY TO PLANTS

Police Director Tires of Violence by Women in Garment Mixup.

Picture on Picture Page.

For the first time since a strike was called several weeks ago by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union at the plants of the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, the Gernes Garment company and the Missouri Garment company, the day opened without violence Wednesday when non-strikers reported for work at 3017 Grand avenue. As a result more workers entered the building.

Otto P. Higgins, director of police, had taken personal charge of police activities at the scene.

Director Higgins cleared the block from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-seventh street on Walnut, made all spectators and strike sympathizers move on and permitted only five peaceful pickets to remain within the territory adjacent to the rear entrance of the plants.

Use Elevators.

He also established a system of [illegible] the use of the elevator of a freight elevator, which was used by non-strikers in reaching

He also established a system of police from the rear to the entrance of a freight elevator, which was used by non-strikers in reaching their places of employment on the upper floors of the building.

Two groups of non-strikers, approximately 100 in all, were taken up on the elevator.

Prior to establishing the police cordon, Director Higgins said:

"This rough stuff is becoming a public nuisance. It is interfering with business in the block and there have been many protests from business men not involved in the strike and from their customers who have feared to approach the places of business. Police officers have been bruised and mauled and their clothes torn. One officer was thrown to the sidewalk and sat

"Moreover the work of the police department has been hampered because of the necessity of sending from 60 to 80 men to the garment plants every day. A majority of the pickets have been hired to perform their duties at $1 a day and carfare.

"On Monday I called the business agent of the union to my office and told her there must be no more rough stuff. It did no good. I warned the strikers again on Tuesday, and again my warning went unheeded. Now, I'm prepared to act. Any more trouble occurring here will be dealt with severely."

While the police were guarding the nonstrikers from any attack, Matt Shifnick and Harry Skinner, deputy sheriffs, were endeavoring to serve 21 contempt of court citations on 20 women, named Monday by Judge Darius A. Brown to appear in his court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court.

Difficult Search.

Issuance of citations followed reports of violation of an injunction prohibiting violence or interference with nonunion workers in the three plants.

Shinnick and Skinner experienced difficulty in finding the women named in the writs, which demanded that they appear before Judge Brown at 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Then Miss Wave Tobin, business agent of the union, one of the women named, was pressed into service by the deputies and aided them in identifying the women

Douglass said Wednesday that he had been assured the substitute bill would be given consideration at Jefferson City and that organization leaders here had told him it was acceptable to them. He expressed the fear, however, that lack of any zealous support in an organization way was the real stumbling block. He said there was danger the bill would be permitted to die in committee as has happened time and again in the last 10 years that Kansas City has been trying to get permanent registration.

Douglass, a former Democratic member of the election board, is well informed on registration and election laws and has been the co-author of several proposed permanent registration bills for Kansas City.

The bill he submitted last week was offered as a substitute for house bill No. 450, which was drafted by a city council committee headed by A. N. Gossett. The latter bill had the approval of Mayor Bryce B. Smith and other administration leaders.

Then Miss Wava Tobin, business agent of the union, one of the women named, was pressed into service by the deputies and aided them in identifying the women sought.

Hearing on the contempt of court citations were continued to Monday at 9 a. m. by Judge Brown. Seven women served with the writs at the garment plants Wednesday morning, Miss Tobin, Par Wilburn, Clara Seeton, Ella Frye, Anna Zupke and Rosalie Poole, who was served with two, appeared in Judge Brown's court. Twenty-one citations had been issued but the deputy sheriffs were unable to serve the others.

At the conference with Judge Brown Paul T. White and Harry L. Thomas, attorneys for the three garment companies, filed a motion to amend the motion to eliminate all picketing at the plants. Judge Brown set hearing on the motion for 9 a. m. Saturday.

Ralph Russell and Frank W. Aylward, attorneys for the union, filed a motion to dissolve the injunction.

"We made the motion on the ground that the companies are coming into a court of equity with unclean hands," said Russell. "We allege that they are operating sweat shops; that they have tried to break up the union organization, and that they have imported a St. Louis strike breaking organization to incite trouble. We charge that the garment companies themselves have been responsible for the trouble at

DONNELLY WORKER WILL BE SENT TO UNION CONVENTION

Garment Organization Seeking Support for Strike at Plant.

Sylvia Hull, an employe of the Donnelly Garment company, has been named a delegate from Kansas City to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union biennial convention May 3 at Atlantic City. Meyer Perlstein, regional director, announced Thursday.

The Donnelly worker, according to Perlstein, was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention.

Perlstein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and ask the international body to indorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions. The Kansas City joint committee, Perlstein asserted, agreed to pay all expenses of the Donnelly delegate.

Other delegates from Kansas City are

Cinderella Robinson and Grace Ballard, members of local No. 710 and employed by the Brand & Puritz company; Louise Smith, local No. 114, employed by the Laverne Coat shop; Anna Koval, local No. 114, employed by the Fashionbuilt Garment company; Arlean Gaither, local No. 118 employed by the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company; Ora Thornton and Annis Vaughan, local No. 250, employes of the Western-Bingman-Prins company, and Mary Wave Tobin, business representative of the Kansas City locals.

Perlstein said the executive committee of the various local unions in Kansas City would meet Thursday afternoon to consider a resolution calling on the national organization to appropriate funds to carry on a strike at the Donnely plant.

The delegates from this section will meet April 30 in St. Louis to go to Atlantic City by special train. Perlstein will be a delegate from St

Trailer company of Detroit, the Friedman-Harry Marks Clothing company, Inc., of Richmond, and the Associated Press, were 5 to 4 decisions.

One Opinion Is Unanimous.

The court was unanimous in the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach company case.

Justice Roberts, who has held the balance of power in some 5 to 4 decisions, delivered the 5 to 4 opinion holding the Wagner act did not violate freedom of the press and could be applied to the Associated Press. He also delivered the unanimous decision in the Coach company case.

Chief Justice Hughes, who was 75 years old yesterday, delivered the opinions in the other three cases. Mrs. Hughes, from a front row seat, listened intently.

The four dissenting justices—McReynolds, Sutherland, Van Devanter and Butler—in an opinion read by McReynolds, contended the court's rulings in the Wagner cases reversed the view of interstate commerce expressed in decisions outlawing NRA and the Guffey coal act.

In these two decisions, the court had said:

"The local character of mining, of manufacturing and of crop growing is a fact, and remains a fact, whatever may be done with the products."

"Employees," Hughes asserted in the Jones & Laughlin decision, "have as clear a right to organize and select their representatives for lawful purposes as the respondent (steel corporation) has to organize its business and select its own officers and agents."

Issue in Sit-Down Strikes.

The question of collective bargaining, upheld by the court in businesses engaged in interstate commerce, has been the major point of dispute in the recent series of sit-down strikes.

Under the decision, the legislation is applicable to all businesses held to be in interstate commerce.

The ruling, holding that a steel company, a trailer company and a clothing manufacturing concern were engaged in interstate commerce, broadened the applicability of the statute far beyond what its opponents contended were the proper boundaries.

The coach company admitted its activities were in interstate commerce.

In each of the five separate decisions, the tribunal sustained orders of the national labor relations board directing the reinstatement of employees who had been discharged for what the government contended were "unfair labor practices."

The Minority Is Unchanged.

Justice McReynolds delivered the dissenting opinion in the steel, coach company (trailer) and clothing company cases, with Justices Van Devanter, Sutherland and Butler concurring. Justice Sutherland read the dissent in the Associated Press case. The same justices were in the minority in each 5 to 4 decision.

Reading rapidly from the steel opinion and frequently glancing about the packed courtroom, Hughes asserted that "the steel industry is one of the great basic industries of the United States, with ramifying activities affecting interstate commerce at every point."

"The government," he continued, "aptly refers to the steel strike of 1919-1920 with its far-reaching consequences. The fact that there appears to have been no major disturbance in that industry in the more recent period did not dispose of the possibilities of future and like dangers to interstate commerce which Congress was entitled to foresee and to exercise its protective power to forestall.

Congress Within Rights.

respect to the free and appropriate exercise of the right of selection and discharge."

The chief justice said the Wagner law in its present application "goes no further than to safeguard the rights of employees to self-organization and to select representatives of their own choosing for collective bargaining or other mutual protection without restraint or coercion by their employer."

"That is a fundamental right," Hughes continued. "Employees have as clear a right to organize and select their representatives for lawful purposes as the respondent has to organize its business and select its own officers and agents."

week:

The court also ordered the property restored to the trustees. The apartments were valued at about $400,000 each in the application for the writ.

The writ was made returnable in thirty days in the supreme court for argument on the merits. The petitions listed Barnet L. Rosset, Charles J. Young and Rhodes as trustees for the Riviera and the same group, with Clark, as trustees for the Villa Locarno.

The receivership application was filed before Judge Bird April 7 by Fred L. Bellemere, Kansas City lawyer, representing Mrs. H. V. Carson, a bondholder.

The application for the writ of prohibition said the receivership was granted by Judge Bird without any notice to the trustees or without giving them an opportunity to be heard. The trustees also alleged the granting of the receivership was a "palpable abuse of discretion" on the part of Judge Bird.

Rhodes and Clark were here to appear before the court today to urge the prohibition and Bellemere appeared to oppose the writ. The court considered the matter in conference after hearing the arguments of the lawyers.

It also was alleged that Werby took possession of the apartments immediately after the receivership was granted by Judge Bird. The order of the supreme court will restore the management of the two apartments to the trustees pending a final determination of the writ by the supreme court.

No Chance for Reconciliation With Mate, She Says.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—Mrs. Nan Pierson Brill, whose wealthy husband, William Hunsaker Brill, is seeking an annulment of their marriage, said yesterday she planned to leave this week for Japan, "to get away from it all."

Mrs. Brill, accompanied by two bodyguards, who so far have succeeded in keeping her from being served with official notice of the suit, spent the day at the beach.

"There isn't a chance for a reconciliation now," she said. "I've lost five pounds this week from worry over the embarrassment Bill has caused me."

POLICE DIRECTOR TAKES CHARGE AT 2017 GRAND.

Garment Workers Enter Peacefully Between Lines of Officers—Seven Contempt Citations Are Served.

Police put a stop to the violence today at the three garment companies at 2017 Grand avenue where beatings, clothes tearing, and hair pulling have resulted between workers and union pickets. At the same time deputy sheriffs served seven of the twenty-one contempt citations issued by Judge Dustin A. Brown.

Otto P. Higgins, director of police, took charge of the police contingent this morning, and workers were insured peaceful entrance to the plants.

THROUGH LINES OF POLICE.

Under Higgins's direction a line of uniformed officers was formed on each side of the freight elevator at the rear entrance of the building.

Yesterday, despite citations of contempt of court, and fifty-two policemen, there were skirmishes between union pickets and women workers, and many of the latter were kept from their jobs.

Today Director Higgins stood on the rear of a police patrol bus parked just opposite the freight elevator, and issued orders to his men to preserve order. The block on Walnut street was kept clear of motor cars, except those taking workers to the plants of the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company, the Gerbes Garment company, and the Missouri Garment company, whose employees the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union of America has been attempting to organize.

From the rear of the patrol bus Higgins said:

"The workers are going in—and going peacefully. I told Miss Tobin (Wave Tobin, representative of the union) Monday afternoon that the fights were going to stop, and the pickets no longer were going to make fools out of constituted authorities, and beat these women workers up.

"I told her it would stop, and that if it didn't, she would be the first to go to jail.

"Peaceful picketing is all right, but when they bring in outsiders and paid agitators, that's different.

"And it's going to stay stopped," he declared emphatically. "We can't keep all these officers tied up here forever and risk endangering the rest of the city by lack of protection."

Higgins said a majority of the women pickets were hired by the union at $1 a day and a street car pass.

The seven women appeared later before Judge Brown and, at the suggestion of the court, the hearing was continued until 9 o'clock Monday morning. The two deputy sheriffs told the court they believed they would be able to serve the citation orders on the remainder of the women by Monday. The women who appeared were Miss Tobin, Clara Seaton, Pat Wilbourne, Anna Eupka, Mary Johnson, Ellen Frye and Rosalie Poole.

When they left Zagreb, the Lindberghs were reported to have only enough gasoline to carry them to Austria, about two hours from Zagreb by air.

Friends of the Lindberghs in England were not worried, indicating they believed the Lindberghs were safe whether they landed secretly at some scheduled spot or had come down at some remote landing field.

OFFER THEIR CAUSE OF ALARM.

When they left England in February, at the start of a tour that was to take them all the way to India, the Lindberghs were "lost" for twenty-four hours after their departure.

It was learned eventually they had landed at Pisa because of fog and stormy conditions and embarked upon a sightseeing tour of the famous city without advising anyone of their unscheduled stop.

Later they were out of touch with the world for several days while in India, and at that time there was keen anxiety.

Pilots at the Zagreb airport still were waiting for the telegrams they said Lindbergh promised to send them "upon landing any place."

FHA EYES BUILDING BOOM.

Control Measures Will Be Used to Fight Inflation.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Federal housing administration officials said today they were ready to use several instruments of control against any runaway boom in residential construction.

Inflationary evils in real estate, they said, would impair the building program.

The average of all home building costs, including real estate, housing authorities estimated, advanced about 20 per cent in the last six months. Most of the increase came since the first of the year.

The FHA could combat inflation, officials said, by holding property appraisal for insurance to long-range values, which may be substantially below temporary boom values, they said.

A BREAK IN LABOR ROW

GERNES PLANT AT 2617 GRAND AVENUE IS UNIONIZED.

Agreement Signed Today Provides for Separate Bargaining Group —No Settlement in Two Other Disputes.

The labor troubles of the Gernes Garment company on the third floor of the building at 2617 Grand avenue, scene of many battles between women, were terminated today with the signing of a contract by Meyer Perlstein, regional director of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union, and A. B. Gernes, president of the garment concern.

There was, however, no indication that two other garment manufacturing concerns, tenants in the same building, would make peace with the union organizers.

The Gernes agreement was formulated in conferences in Perlstein's room at the Hotel Muehlebach. It provides for the formation of a separate local organization of the union exclusively for employees of the Gernes plant. That local union will be the sole bargaining agency of the workers in that plant in the future. A 3-year contract was signed, it was said.

The Gernes employees' organization will be an affiliate of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union.

Under the contract, women employees will receive a minimum of $13 a week, with a higher basic rate for more productive workers. A minimum of $10.40 a week will be paid to women apprentices for the first six weeks of employment. The settlement does not affect the dispute in the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company and the Missouri Garment company, also operating in the same building.

Since the labor trouble began at 2617 Grand avenue March 17, employees of all three concerns have been using a freight elevator on the Walnut street side of the building. No provision was made in today's settlement for special identification of

(By the Associated Press.)

Washington, April 12.—The Supreme court gave the government a major victory today by upholding constitutionality of the Wagner labor relations act as applied to all business engaged in interstate commerce.

Four of the Supreme court's decisions, involving the Jones and Laughlin Steel corporation of Pittsburgh, the Fruehauf Trailer company of Detroit, the Friedman-Harry Marks Clothing company, Inc., of Richmond, and the Associated Press, were 5 to 4 decisions.

Court Divides 5 to 4 in Support of Wagner Act.

Washington, April 12.—The Supreme court today upheld the constitutionality of the national labor relations act in five separate opinions which dealt with news transmission, interstate bus traffic and the manufacture of steel.

The court divided, 5 to 4, with Justices Sutherland, McReynolds, Van Devanter and Butler in the minority, in upholding constitutionality of the Wagner act in the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation case; the Fruehauf Trailer company of Detroit; the Friedman-Harry Marks Clothing company, Inc., of Richmond and the Associated Press.

It was unanimous in only one decision: that involving the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach company.

rsons who went to the supreme court building in Washington today were ey the Wagner labor relations act was upheld. Here is the vanguard of the or and hoping to be admitted.

Congress Within Rights.

"It is not necessary again to detail the facts as to respondent's (Jones & Laughlin) enterprise. Instead of being beyond the pale, we think that it presents in a most striking way the close and intimate relation which a manufacturing industry may have to interstate commerce and we have no doubt that Congress had constitutional authority to safeguard the right of respondent's employees to self organization and freedom in the choice of representatives for collective bargaining."

(The legislation guaranteed collective bargaining to workmen and set up the national labor relations board to aid in settling industrial disputes. It was termed "labor's magna charta" by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.)

"Employees," Hughes continued, "have correlative right to organize for the purpose of securing the redress of grievances and to promote agreements with employers relating to rates of pay and conditions of work. Restraint for the purpose of preventing an unjust interference with that right cannot be considered arbitrary or capricious. . . .

A Right to Hire and Fire.

"The act does not interfere with the normal exercise of the right of the employer to select its employees or to discharge them. The employer may not, under cover of that right, intimidate or coerce its employees with respect to their self-organization and representation, and, on the other hand, the board is not entitled to make its authority a pretext for interference with the right of discharge when that right is exercised for other [illegible] labor relations board directing the company to reinstate seven discharged employees.

"We have examined respondent's (trailer company) contentions," Hughes asserted, "and we are of the opinion that the findings of the board, with respect to the nature of the respondent's business and the circumstances of the discharges complained of are supported by the evidence."

The chief justice said "the questions relating to the construction and validity of the act have been fully discussed" in the court's opinion, just delivered, upholding the act, as applied to the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation.

"We hold that the principles there stated are applicable here," he concluded.

Bus Decision by Roberts.

In the bus company decision, Justice Roberts said:

"The act limits the jurisdiction of the board to instances which fall within the commerce power and if the board should exceed the jurisdiction conferred upon it, any party aggrieved is at liberty to challenge its action."

"The right to contract," McReynolds asserted in his dissent to the steel ruling, "is fundamental and includes the privilege of selecting those with whom one is willing to assume contractural relations. This right is unduly abridged by the act now upheld.

"A private owner is deprived of power to manage his own property by freely selecting those to whom his manufacturing operations are to be other circumstance which aroused suspicion, he pointed out, was the fact the vote on a constitutional amend-entrusted. We think this cannot lawfully be done in circumstances like those here disclosed.

"It seems clear to us that Congress has transcended the powers granted."

Although Justice Sutherland read his dissent to the Associated Press decision immediately after it was delivered, Justice McReynolds did not announce his dissent to the other three cases until after all had been decided.

Sutherland Is Brief.

Looking over the audience, he said: "I have written our joint views and I will not stop to read it. I think I can give you some understanding of what these opinions mean."

He then read provisions of the act and said it did not "prohibit strikes."

"This act is leveled at employers," he continued. "The character of employment has nothing to do with it. We are told the act is intended to prevent employers from discharging employees who belong to a labor organization. . . .

"It has been held by this court for fifty years, and especially for the last two, that manufacture is only incidentally related to interstate commerce and Congress has no power to regulate it."

The court, in a 5 to 4 decision delivered by Justice Roberts, held the Wagner act was constitutional in its application to the Associated Press.

The majority decision held that the statute did not "abridge the freedom of speech, or of the press, safeguarded by the first amendment" to the Constitution.

A dissenting opinion was written by Justice Sutherland in which Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds and Butler concurred.

They asserted "the application of the act here has resulted in an unconstitutional abridgement of the freedom of the press."

Opinion by Justice Roberts.

Justice Roberts, who frequently has held the balance of power on the court in 5 to 4 decisions, said in his opinion:

"It is insisted that the Associated Press is in substance the press itself, that the [illegible] speaks solely providence of God, favored, as they sometimes boast, above all others in the plenitude of their liberties—desire to preserve these so carefully protected by the first amendment: liberty of religious worship, freedom of speech and of the press, and the right as freemen peaceably to assemble and petition their government for a redress of grievances.

"If so, let them withstand all beginnings of encroachment. For the saddest epitaph which can be carved in memory of a vanished liberty is that it was lost because its possessors failed to stretch forth a saving hand while yet there was time."

Roberts, speaking for the majority, said "the business of the Associated Press is not immune from regulation because it is an 'agency of the press.'"

Press Rights Not Restricted.

"The publisher of a newspaper," he continued, "has no special immunity from the application of general laws. He has no special privilege to invade the rights and liberties of others. He must answer for libel. He may be punished for contempt of court. He is subject to the anti-trust laws. Like others he must pay equitable and nondiscriminatory taxes on his business.

"The regulation here in question has no relation whatever to the impartial distribution of news. The order of the board in no wise circumscribes the full freedom and liberty of the petitioner to publish the news as it desires it published, or to enforce policies of its own choosing with respect to the editing and rewriting of news for publication, and the petitioner is free at any time to discharge Watson, or any editorial employee who fails to comply with the policies it may adopt."

WAGNER ACT IN OUTLINE.

Rights of Employee and Employer Are Clear.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Wagner national labor relations act, on which the Supreme court ruled today, states this public policy:

"Employees shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activity, for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection."

The act also states that it shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer:

To interfere with, restrain or coerce employees in the exercise of the Above the music of the radio William J. Schmittner last night heard the cries of his wife from her upstairs bedroom in their home at 391 Central street.

He ran upstairs and found his wife lying on the floor in a corner of the room. Her nightgown had been burned entirely away, and her body was burned severely. She was taken to St. Mary's hospital, where she died today.

Mr. Schmittner, deputy public administrator for Jackson County, said he was not certain how his wife's garment caught fire. She may have struck a match to light a cigarette, he said.

Mr. Schmittner's hands were burned slightly when he used a pair of his pajamas, hanging conveniently near, to extinguish the flames.

The Schmittners had no children. She was 66 years old, and was the daughter of the late George Etchingham, active in Democratic politics here. She leaves a half-brother, Emmett Etchingham of Cheyenne, Wyo., and two half-sisters, Mrs. Michael J. O'Hearn, 3 East Fifty-sixth street, and Mrs. J. E. other circumstance which aroused suspicion, he pointed out, was the fact the vote on a constitutional amendment was identical, 342 for and 8 against.

When Phelps finished the first part of the arguments, court recessed until 1:30 o'clock.

"Case Not Made."

Madden, for the defense, made the closing statement, asserting the government had not proved a case against the five defendants.

"This is the first time in my career," he said, "that I have appeared in a criminal case in the federal court. It seems to me that the government has proved by its own witnesses and their testimony that these defendants are innocent. The government has said that 'someone' erased 'X' marks and made substitutions, but it has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that any of the defendants changed them.

"The government must prove a conspiracy before this jury can convict these defendants. It never has been proved that any of the defendants entered into a conspiracy. To convict in this case in the federal court it must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that defendants conspired.

"The important evidence is that erasures of 'X' marks were made. This case has no connection with any vote case which has gone before or may follow after. The circumstantial evidence the government has shown to the jury must be received with caution.

Benefit of Any Doubt.

"Of course, all the defendants are presumed to be innocent until they are found guilty beyond any reasonable doubt. If there is any doubt in your minds you must give the defendants the benefit.

"I am not so blind as not to recognize the fact there has been a crusade for honesty in elections. Whenever a crusade of this nature, when the public is aroused, there is danger to the safeguard thrown around defendants in a criminal case.

"An innocent man may be convicted in the effort to convict the guilty. I say the government spent nearly three days and has proved no more than I admitted in the first thirty minutes. I admitted ballots were changed. The government proved it. There is no dispute.

"The issue here now is whether any of the defendants changed the ballots. I say the government has not established that fact beyond a reasonable doubt.

"The jury should return a verdict of 'not guilty.'" court in 5 to 4 decisions, said in his opinion:

"It is insisted that the Associated Press is in substance the press itself, that the membership consists solely of persons who own and operate newspapers, that the news is gathered solely for publication in the newspapers of members.

"Stress is laid upon the fact that this membership consists of persons of every conceivable political, economic, and religious view, that the one thing upon which the members are united is that the Associated Press shall be wholly free from partisan activity or the expression of opinions, that it shall limit its function to reporting events without bias in order that the citizens of our country, if given the facts may be able to form their own opinions respecting them.

On Freedom of the Press.

"The conclusion which the petitioner draws is that whatever may be the case with respect to employees in its mechanical departments it must have absolute and unrestricted freedom to employ and to discharge those who, like Watson, edit the news, that there must not be the slightest opportunity for any bias of prejudice personally entertained by an editorial employee to color or to distort what he writes and that the Associated Press cannot be free to furnish unbiased and impartial news reports unless it is equally free to determine for itself the partiality or bias of editorial employees. So it is said that any regulation protective of union activities, or the right collectively to bargain on the part of such employees, is necessarily an invalid invasion of the freedom of the press.

"We think the contention not only has no relevance to the circumtances of the instant case but is an unsound generalization. The ostensible reason for Watson's discharge as embodied in the records of the petitioner, is solely on the grounds of his work not being on a basis for which he has shown capability."

Discharged for Guild Activity.

"The petitioner did not assert and does not now claim that he had shown bias in the past. It does not claim that by reason of his connection with the union he will be likely, as the petitioner honestly believes, to show bias in the future. The actual reason for his discharge, as shown by the unattacked finding of the board, was his guild activity and his agitation for collective bargaining.

"The statute does not preclude a discharge on the ostensible grounds for the petitioner's action; it forbids discharge for what has been found to be the real motive of the petitioner.

"These considerations answer the suggestion that if the petitioner believed its policy of impartiality was likely to be subverted by Watson's continued service, Congress was without power to interdict his discharge.

an unfair labor practice for an employer:

To interfere with, restrain or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in the declaration of policy.

To dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it.

By discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment of any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization.

To discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given testimony under the act.

To refuse to bargain collectively with the representative of his employee.

The act also sets up a labor relations board of three members to enforce the act's provisions and to conduct elections among employees when a dispute arises as to which of two or more labor organizations represent a majority of the employees for collective bargaining. The act provides that the majority unit shall speak for all employees in collective bargaining.

SIT ON G. E. PAY DEMAND.

Electrical Union Asks Increase for $1,000 Employees.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 13.—Demands for wage increases totaling 13 million dollars annually were discussed in a conference today between representatives of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America and William R. Burrows, General Electric company's vice-president in charge of manufacturing.

The union delegates, headed by James B. Carey, president, are demanding a flat 10 cents per hour increase for 61,000 employees.

The increase asked by the union, Burrows said at the conclusion of this morning's discussions, would mean an annual wage increase of 13 million dollars over and above the recent general increase of 7 million dollars granted by the company.

SEVEN ARE ARRAIGNED.

Judge Otis Proceeds After Collet Steps Out of Case.

Following Judge John Caskie Collet's statement disqualifying himself to sit in any of the vote fraud cases, Judge Merrill E. Otis arraigned seven defendants indicted for vote irregularities in the ninth precinct of the twelfth ward.

Only five were present, two having sent certificates of illness. The two not present were:

COUNT B. WELLS, Republican judge.

AMY FERGUS, Republican judge.

Those arraigned were:

WILMER HENDERSON, 37 years old, 1200 College avenue, Democratic judge.

GLEN BARNARD, 40 years old, 1230 College avenue, Democratic judge.

ABRAHAM B. LEVY, 37 years old, 1422 Benton boulevard, Democratic clerk.

MAUDE SPAINE, 45 years old, 1218 College avenue, Republican clerk.

FRANK P. DIXON, 43 years old, 1311 Benton boulevard, Democratic precinct captain.

The defendants appearing were represented by William G. Boatright and James Dalco, lawyers who have appeared for defendants in several of the vote fraud cases. Judge Otis allowed the defendants to continue their freedom under their original bonds of $2,000 for the men and $1,000 for the women, made when they were indicted.

Dalco asked when the defendants arraigned could expect to go to trial. Judge Otis said the case probably would be called the first week in June. He explained that there was only the one courtroom in the building large enough for all of the activities involved in a vote fraud trial and that it would be in use through May by Judge Albert L. Reeves and Judge Collet.

discharge for what has been found to be the real motive of the petitioner.

"These considerations answer the suggestion that if the petitioner believed its policy of impartiality was likely to be subverted by Watson's continued service, Congress was without power to interdict his discharge. No such question is here for decision. Neither before the board (National Labor Relations board) nor in the court below, nor here has the petitioner professed such belief. It seeks to bar all regulation by contending that regulation in a situation not presented would be invalid. Courts deal with cases upon the basis of the facts disclosed, never with nonexistent and assumed circumstances.

"The act does not compel the petitioner to employ anyone; it does not require that the petitioner retain in its employ an incompetent editor or one who fails faithfully to edit the news to reflect the facts without bias or prejudice.

"The act permits a discharge for any reason other than union activity or agitation for collective bargaining with employees.

Position Not Guaranteed.

"The restoration of Watson to his former position in no sense guarantees his continuance in petitioner's employ.

"The petitioner is at liberty, whenever occasion may arise, to exercise its undoubted right to sever his relationship for any cause that seems to it proper, save only as a punishment for, or discouragement of, such activities as the act declares permissible."

The national labor relations board had directed the Associated Press to reinstate Morris Watson, a New York editorial employee. Watson contended he had been dismissed because of activities in connection with the American Newspaper Guild. The Associated Press said he was discharged because his work was not up to his proven capability.

On the subject of freedom of the press, Justice Sutherland's minority opinion said:

"Do the people of this land—in the crease for 61,000 employees.

The increase asked by the union, Burrows said at the conclusion of this morning's discussions, would mean an annual wage increase of 13 million dollars over and above the recent general increase of 7 million dollars granted by the company.

Carey said his impression was that the 7-million-dollar increase would be considered as part of the total sum demanded.

DATE 8-24-42 WITNESS Wahrt

DANIEL W. ROSS, OFFICIAL REPORTER

March 9, 1937

Donnelly Garment Company,
1828 Walnut Street,
Kansas City, Missouri.

Gentlemen:

The Kansas City members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union feel compelled to place before you the following grievances that should be adjusted immediately.

Fifteen members of our Union were discharged by your firm because of their affiliations with our organization. Their case was up before the National Labor Relations Board. During the period the hearings took place the NRA was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States and the Government could proceed no further. The discharged workers have not as yet been returned to work by your firm.

The Dress Industry, in which your firm is engaged, is highly unionized throughout the country. Every producer of dresses is in contractual relations with our Union. The 150,000 workers employed in this industry are enjoying a 5-day, 35-hour working week and a $22.05 per week minimum wage scale for operators and reasonable, fair minimum scales for finishers, pressers, cutters, et cetera. Piece workers, who compose the majority of workers in your shop as well as in the industry, are enjoying the right, through committees selected by them, of having an equal voice with the management in each shop in determining the piece rates for each garment or operation of a garment.

The workers in the industry enjoy the freedom and right of organization. Collective bargaining has been established as a permanent institution. These are the conditions and wage scales in the industry.

In your shop the minimum wage scale for operators is between $12.50 and $15.00 per week.

The wage scales for finishers, pressers and cutters are at least 30% lower than those that exist in the industry.

The hours of work in your shop are from 40 to 50 per week.

Your workers are denied the right of joining a labor organization, and those who do, are immediately discharged. Your workers are denied the privileges of genuine collective bargain-the piece rates should be as they are set exclusively by representatives of your firm.

The conditions and wages under which your employees are working not only deprives them of the privileges and opportunities enjoyed by the workers in this industry, but endangers their general work standards and wage scales. Your firm has undue and unjustified advantages over your competitors. The Union believes in "Fair Competition," but it does not consider competition fair when it is gained solely at the expense of the workers.

Under your system of production workers are compelled to invest extraordinary effort, but the reward that follows is very meager in proportion to the efforts invested. Under modern methods of production such treatment of workers is not only wrong from the humane point of view, but also destructive from the economical point of view. In comparison with other shops in the industry which produce the same type of garment the production in your shop is about 30% higher while the earnings of the workers are about 30% lower.

We, therefore, believe that a conference between our Union and your firm, for an adjustment of these grievances, should take place immediately. The Union has named a committee which stands ready to meet a similar committee named by your firm.

May we respectfully request that you advise us before the end of this week as to when and where it would be convenient for you to meet our Conference Committee.

Our aim is industrial peace. We believe in intelligent co-operation between employer and employee. Such co-operation is essential to the welfare of all factors in industry, including the consuming public and community at large. Peace and harmony prevails in the major part of the Dress Industry and we are eager to extend this co-operation to include your firm. Let us join hands to avoid industrial conflict.

Respectfully yours,

Kansas City Joint Board

GARMENT WORKERS' DRIVE.

Funds Set Aside for Unionization of Entire Industry.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—An immediate nation-wide drive to unionize an estimated 90,000 unorganised clothing workers was ordered today by the executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

In deciding on a vigorous effort to extend its influence into new fields, the board voted an appropriation of ¼ million dollars and pledged "all its material resources." David Dubinsky, president of the union, was authorized to utilize his entire present staff in the drive and to employ fifty additional organizers.

Deferred until tomorrow was consideration by the board of its future relationship with John L. Lewis's committee for industrial organization.

Dubinsky said the ladies' garment workers now has a membership of 220,000 and about 4 million dollars in its treasury. About $150,000 was spent in helping finance President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election.

He said the organization drive would open with establishment of offices in St. Louis, Kansas City, Pennsylvania and Upper New York.

Dubinsky asserted the St. Louis office would have sufficed for Missouri except that the union "wants to give Jim Reed a break." He explained that the wife of James A. Reed, former Democratic senator from Missouri who supported Governor Landon in the campaign this year, is the founder and principal stockholder of a factory in Kansas City.

The Kansas City office of the drive will concentrate on unionizing employees in the Donnelly Garment Company, which Dubinsky says is largely owned by Mrs. Reed.

Judgment

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

In the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri.

Donnelly Garment Company, a Corporation, and Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a Corporation, Plaintiffs, vs.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Defendants,

Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Interveners.

Reed & Ingraham, Hogsett, Murray, Trippe and Depping for plaintiffs.

Mr. Frank P. Walsh, Mr. Roy W. Rucker and Mr. Jerome Walsh for defendants.

Gossett, Ellis Dietrich and Tyler for Interveners.

[fol. 7064a] Judgment.

Now on this 27th day of April, 1939, again come all of the parties in this suit, by their attorneys of record, and this cause having heretofore come on for trial before the court upon plaintiffs' amended complaint, defendants' answer thereto, interveners' petition of intervention, and defendants' answer thereto; and the court having heard the evidence of the parties in the form of the testimony of witnesses in open court (with opportunity for cross-examination) in support of the allegations of plaintiffs' verified amended complaint and interveners' verified petition of intervention; and now the court, being fully advised in the premises, doth now find that unlawful acts have been threatened and will be committed by defendants unless restrained, and have been committed and will be continued by defendants unless restrained; that substantial and irreparable injury to the property of plaintiffs and to the property of interveners will follow; that as to each item of relief prayed for by plaintiffs and interveners respectively, and as to each item of relief granted, said parties respectively, greater injury will be inflicted upon plaintiffs and interveners, respectively, by the denial of relief than will be inflicted upon defendants by the granting of relief; and that plaintiffs and interveners respectively have no adequate remedy at law; and that the public officers charged with the duty to protect the property of plaintiffs and interveners respectively are unable and unwilling to furnish adequate protection; and that due and personal notice of this hearing has been duly given to all known persons against whom relief is sought, and also to the chief of those public officials of the county and city within which the unlawful acts have been threatened or committed, who are charged with the duty to protect the property of plaintiffs and interveners respectively; and that the plaintiffs and interveners respectively, have not failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law which is involved in the labor dispute in question, and have not failed to make every reasonable effort to settle such dispute, either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or voluntary arbitration; and that there has been clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, the acts hereinafter enjoined, by the defendants, or of ratification of such acts by the defendants after actual knowledge thereof; and that issuance of a permanent injunction as prayed by plaintiffs and interveners respectively and as hereinafter granted, [fol. 7064b] is necessary to prevent immediate and irreparable injury to plaintiffs and interveners, respectively, by reason of threatened loss and damage to plaintiffs and interveners and each of them, from violation by defendants of the Anti-Trust Laws of the United States, and from unlawful acts and threatened attempts by defendants to destroy the rights of plaintiffs and interveners respectively;

And as the basis of this decree, the court makes and files in the record of this cause, prior to the issuance of the injunction hereinafter granted, findings of fact and conclusions of law, which constitute the grounds of the court's action herein;

And the court further finds that the injunction hereinafter granted includes only a prohibition of such specific acts as are expressly complained of in plaintiffs' amended bill of complaint and in interveners' intervening petition, respectively, and as are expressly included in said findings of fact made and filed by the court as aforesaid.

Wherefore, It Is Now By The Court Considered, Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that the defendants International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, David Dubinsky, president, secretary and treasurer of said association, and members of the general executive board, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director of said association, Wave Tobin, manager of Kansas City Joint Board of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and all other members of said union (who are too numerous to mention), and each of them, and their officers, agents, servants, employees and representatives, and each of them, and all persons acting under the authority, direction or control of defendants or any of them, be and they are now by the court permanently and perpetually enjoined:

1. From engaging in any act of fraud or violence, or in any threat thereof, at or near the premises of plaintiff's place of business at 1828 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, or at any other place or places whatsoever, in anywise calculated or tending to interfere with, disturb or injure any officer, agent, employee or customer of plaintiffs, or the business of plaintiffs or any of plaintiffs' customers.

2. From doing any act or acts of fraud or violence or making any threats thereof, calculated or tending to injure or interfere with the businesses of plaintiffs, or to injure or interfere with the businesses of plaintiffs' customers [fol. 7064c] on account of said customers dealing in or handling plaintiffs' products, or calculated or tending to interfere in any way with trade or commerce between plaintiffs and their customers, or to interfere with or molest any employee of plaintiffs or any person or persons making delivery of goods or parcels to or from plaintiffs' place of business or to or from plaintiffs' customers.

3. From interfering in any way, involving fraud or violence or threats thereof, with the contracts existing between the plaintiffs and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or with any contracts which plaintiffs and said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union may hereafter negotiate or make, or with the due performance of said contracts by any party thereto.

4. From attempting, by fraud or violence or threats thereof, to compel or induce any of the employees of plaintiffs to withdraw or resign from the voluntary association of employees designated as Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and from attempting, by fraud or violence or threats thereof, to compel or induce any of said employees, to join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any subdivision or local unit thereof.

5. From announcing, charging, publishing, circulating or causing to be announced, charged, published or circulated, any knowingly false and fraudulent statements regarding wages, hours of labor, or working conditions in plaintiffs' plant, or regarding their labor policies, or the ability of plaintiffs to fill orders for merchandise.

6. From conducting, threatening, instigating, or causing or attempting to conduct, threaten or instigate a secondary boycott or picketing of any of plaintiffs' customers or of any of the places of business of plaintiffs' customers.

7. From notifying or requesting plaintiffs' customers or members of the public, by or on the strength of knowingly false and fraudulent statements, or by or with violence or threats thereof, not to patronize plaintiffs', or purchase plaintiffs' products or merchandise; and from interfering or attempting to interfere in any manner, involving fraud or violence or threats thereof, with the business of the customers of plaintiffs, wheresoever situated; and from boycotting any of said customers or picketing their places of business because of their buying, selling, handling or dealing in plaintiffs' products; and from issuing or distributing circulars [fol. 7064d] or written or printed matter, and from making or uttering verbal statements, containing any knowingly false and fraudulent statements calculated or tending to injuriously affect the business of plaintiffs or their said customers; and from issuing any knowingly false and fraudulent written or verbal statements calculated or tending to prevent any person or persons from purchasing the goods produced or sold by plaintiffs; and from doing any other act or thing whatsoever, involving fraud or violence or threats thereof, calculated or tending to interfere with the business dealings of plaintiffs or their customers.

And now it is by the court further considered, ordered, adjudged and decreed that all injunction bonds given by plaintiffs or interveners in this cause be and the same are now released and discharged, and that all liability thereon be and the same is now ended.

And now it is by the court further considered, ordered, adjudged and decreed that the plaintiffs and interveners respectively have and recover of and from the defendants their costs herein.

ANDREW MILLER,
United States District Judge.

[fol. 7064e] Findings of Fact.

The court makes and files in the record of this cause the following findings of fact:

1. Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Missouri, is engaged in the manufacture and sale of ladies' house dresses and wash frocks under the trade name of "Nelly Don." Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Missouri, is engaged exclusively in the sale and distribution of ladies' house dresses and wash frocks manufactured by the Donnelly Garment Company under its trade name "Nelly Don." Plaintiffs are and were, during the times complained of, engaged in interstate trade and commerce, bringing raw materials from outside the state of Missouri and manufacturing the same in the state of Missouri, and selling over 80 per cent of the finished product outside the state of Missouri.

2. The defendant, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (hereinafter referred to as International), is an unincorporated association composed of members, many of whom reside in the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri; and the individual defendants are officers, members of the Executive Board, members, agents or servants of said International.

3. The interveners are members of the Executive Committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, formed and administered by all of the employees of plaintiffs, exclusive of officers, executives and persons with authority to employ or discharge.

4. On March 2, 1937, about three or four days after the International had publicly announced in the Kansas City press its intention to organize the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company, 1,185 of plaintiff's employees (being all but three of the then employees, excluding those with authority to hire or discharge) in a writing delivered to plaintiffs refused to acknowledge or accept the International as their representative.

5. On March 9, 1937, the International mailed to the Donnelly Garment Company a letter asserting certain alleged "grievances" pertaining to wages, hours and working conditions in the Donnelly Garment Company plant. [fol. 7064f] The statements of fact in said letter, upon which the alleged "grievances" were based, were false and fraudulent statements, known by the writers of the letter to be false when the letter was written; and the purported "grievances" therein were not stated in good faith, but were stated fraudulently for the purpose of making it ostensibly appear to plaintiffs' customers, the consuming public and the courts that there was some basis for said "grievances", when in fact there was no basis therefor. Said letter did not represent a bona fide attempt by the International to negotiate or adjust a labor dispute, but was merely part of a scheme by the International to organize the plaintiffs' employees as members of the International. No bona fide demand concerning "terms and conditions of employment" or concerning "the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment," was being made by any of the defendants upon plaintiffs in said letter, or at the time this suit was filed.

6. Shortly after the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the validity of the National Labor Relations Act, and on April 27, 1937, one hundred per cent of plaintiffs' employees (other than officers, executives and those with authority to hire or discharge) voluntarily formed and became members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and unanimously designated and selected the nine members of the Executive Committee of said union as their sole representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining with plaintiffs in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment and all other conditions of employment, and all matters for their mutual aid and protection. Said employees have at all times freely administered and maintained said union. At the time of the formation of said union and at all times since, none of said employees have been or are members of the defendant International.

7. On May 27, 1937, after negotiations between plaintiffs and the Executive Committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, a written contract was made and entered into between Plaintiffs and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, which was supplemented thereafter on June 22, 1937, by a supplemental contract between the same parties, which contracts provided for wages, rates of pay, hours of employment and all other conditions of employment. Said contracts provided that plaintiffs were bound to and did recognize the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the sole bargaining agency on behalf of all of their said employees. Said contracts were and are satisfactory to all parties thereto, and the same have been at all times since and are now recognized by the parties as [fol. 7064g] in full force and effect. By the aforesaid negotiations and contracts all matters of agreement between plaintiffs and their employees concerning terms and conditions of employment, and concerning the association and representation of plaintiffs' employees in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing and seeking to arrange terms and conditions of employment, were fully fixed, established, settled and determined; and at all times since the making of said contracts there has been and is now no controversy or dispute of any kind between plaintiffs and any of their employees concerning any of those matters. At all said times, and up to the time this suit was filed, and ever since, complete harmony has prevailed between plaintiffs and their employees, and all parties to the contracts were and are satisfied therewith. The terms and conditions of said contracts are more favorable to the employees than the terms and conditions contained in any contract between the International and any manufacturer of house dresses and wash frocks introduced in evidence in this cause.

8. Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company is and has been continuously since its incorporation a manufacturer of house dresses and wash frocks (so-called "cotton garments") and is classified in the industry as such and is not classified as a "ready-to-wear" manufacturer (so-called "silk dress" manufacturer). According to the established custom in the industry the rates of pay of piece work operators in the "ready-to-wear" industry (so-called "silk dress" industry) do not apply to the rates of pay of piece work operators in the "house dress and wash frock" industry (so-called "cotton garment" industry).

9. At all times which are material in this case the wages actually paid by plaintiffs to their employees for various kinds of work were, and are now, in excess of wages paid to similar employees for the same or similar kinds of work by other manufacturers of ladies' garments operating under any of the contracts with the International which are in evidence, whether said manufacturers were engaged in the ready-to-wear industry or in the house dress and wash frock industry.

10. Notwithstanding the entirely harmonious relations between plaintiffs and their employees, the International, its officers, the General Executive Board, and its Southwest Regional Director, Meyer Perlstein, several months prior to the institution of this suit, entered into a combination and conspiracy for the sole and only purpose of compelling plaintiff's employees to join the International and accept [fol. 7064h] the International as their exclusive bargaining agent for the purposes of collective bargaining.

11. Pursuant to said combination and conspiracy, and in carrying forward the same, the International, its officers, General Executive Board, agents and members have threatened to and have in fact caused to be published and circulated among plaintiff's customers and the consuming public false statements regarding wages, rates of pay, hours of labor and working conditions in plaintiff's plant, and have attempted to induce said customers and the consuming public to boycott plaintiff's goods, and have threatened plaintiff's customers with a secondary boycott of their places of business and with picketing of the same upon refusal by such customers to discontinue purchasing or selling plaintiff's merchandise.

12. Pursuant to said combination and conspiracy and in carrying forward the same, the International, its officers, General Executive Board, agents and members have threatened or caused to be threatened the use of physical violence against plaintiff's employees for the purpose of intimidation of plaintiffs and their employees.

13. The International, its chief officers and General Executive Board, and its Southwest Regional Director, Meyer Perlstein, have authorized, ratified and confirmed or approved the use of assaults, physical violence and threats thereof, and publication of false statements, and the use and threats of a secondary boycott, as means of destroying the business of garment manufacturers, including plaintiffs, unless they recognize the International as the exclusive bargaining agent for their employees, and compel their employees to join the International.

14. The acts and threats of defendants, by this court found to have been established by the evidence, and by this court found to be unlawful, were acts and threats in pursuance of a combination and conspiracy on the part of the International, its chief executive officers, its General Executive Board, its Southwest Regional Director (Meyer Perlstein), its Kansas City Manager (Wave Tobin), and its agents, Jane Palmer, Esther Smith, Grace Bullard, Mary Jane Miller and others, the object and purpose of which combination and conspiracy was to injure and destroy plaintiff's business (and thereby to restrain, burden, obstruct, interrupt and destroy plaintiff's interstate trade and commerce), as a means of coercing plaintiff's to require their employees to join the International and to accept the International as their sole bargaining representa-[fol. 7064i] tive in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment and other conditions of employment.

15. The acts and threats of defendants which are found by this court to have been established by the evidence, and which are by this court declared to be unlawful, will, unless enjoined, materially burden, obstruct, interrupt and destroy plaintiff's interstate trade and commerce, causing immediate and irreparable loss and damage to each of the plaintiffs far in excess of $3,000.00.

16. The defendants' unlawful acts hereinabove described have been threatened and will be committed unless restrained, and have been committed and will be continued unless restrained; and substantial and irreparable injury to plaintiffs' property will follow; and as to each item of relief prayed for and granted, greater injury will be inflicted upon plaintiffs and interveners by the denial of relief than will be inflicted upon defendants by the granting of relief; and plaintiffs and interveners have no adequate remedy at law; and the public officers charged with the duty to protect plaintiffs' property are unable and unwilling to furnish adequate protection.

17. After plaintiffs received from 1,183 of their employees on March 2, 1937, the employees' protest against any acknowledgment or dealing with the International as the representative of said employees, and after the aforesaid negotiations and the making of the aforesaid contracts with their employees, and before the time this suit was begun, plaintiffs definitely determined that they could not attempt to compel or influence any of their employees against their will and free choice to become members of or to be represented by the International, and could not negotiate, mediate or arbitrate any demand by defendants for the abrogation of plaintiffs' contracts with their employees, or for the nullification of their employees' rights of self-organization and collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing.

18. At no time after the plaintiffs on March 2, 1937, were notified by their employees of their refusal to accept the defendant union as a bargaining agent, was there any thing which the plaintiffs or interveners could reasonably have offered to the defendants by way of compromise or settlement of the dispute which had arisen; and any settlement between plaintiffs or interveners and defendants of any alleged controversy or alleged dispute between plaintiffs or interveners and defendants, or of any demand by defendants upon plaintiffs, was at all times after March 2, 1937, utterly impossible; and any attempt at such a settlement by plaintiffs, or interveners, either by negotiation or [fol. 7064j] with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or by voluntary arbitration, would have been and was at all said times, entirely and obviously useless and unreasonable.

19. In conferences which occurred on January 20, 1939, February 4, 1939, and April 1, 1939, between duly authorized representatives of the plaintiffs, defendants and interveners, and in the letters which passed between the parties shortly following each of said conferences, plaintiffs and interveners did in fact make every reasonable effort to settle the dispute with defendants by negotiation, and with the aid of available governmental machinery of mediation (that is, through representatives of the National Labor Relations Board) and through voluntary arbitration; and the failure to settle such dispute was not due to any fault or unreasonable attitude or position taken by plaintiffs or interveners.

20. Plaintiffs and interveners have not failed to make every reasonable effort to settle the dispute with defendants either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or by voluntary arbitration.

21. Due and personal notice of this hearing has been duly given by plaintiffs and interveners (although this court has not directed or required the giving of any such notice) to all known persons against whom relief is sought, and also to the chief of those public officials of the county and city within which the unlawful acts have been threatened or committed, charged with the duty to protect plaintiffs' property.

22. There has been clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, the acts to be enjoined, or ratification of such acts, by the defendants after actual knowledge thereof.

23. Plaintiffs did not at any time discriminate against their employees on account of affiliations with defendant International; and at and long before the time this suit was filed the plaintiffs' employees unanimously were protesting against any interference in their affairs by the International, and the International was not the representative of any of said employees for the purposes of collective bargaining or otherwise.

[fol. 7064k] Conclusions of Law

The court now files in the record of this cause the following conclusions of law:

1. This court has jurisdiction of this suit because it is a suit of a civil nature in equity wherein the matter in controversy exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum and value of $3,000.00, and which arises under the Anti-trust Laws of the United States (15 U. S. Code, Secs. 1, 26).

2. The fact that on August 8, 1938, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union filed charges against the plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company with the National Labor Relations Board, and that on April 7, 1939, a complaint was filed against said company by said Board, does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of this court in this suit.

3. Section 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act (29 U. S. Code, Sec. 108) is not to be construed so as to require of plaintiffs or interveners a mere idle ceremony; and the court having found as a fact that any settlement between plaintiffs and defendants or between interveners and defendants of the controversies between them was impossible, and that any attempt at such a setlement, by negotiation, mediation or arbitration, would have been useless, such an attempt was not required of plaintiffs or interveners as a condition precedent to the plaintiffs' or interveners' right to injunctive relief.

4. Section 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act (29 U. S. Code, Sec. 108) did not require any effort on plaintiffs' or interveners' part to settle the dispute with defendants where such an effort would have been unreasonable; and the court having found as a fact that any attempt by plaintiffs or interveners to settle the controversy with defendants by negotiation, governmental mediation or arbitration, would have been unreasonable, such an attempt was not required of plaintiffs or interveners as a condition percedent to plaintiffs' or interveners' right to injunctive relief herein.

5. The plaintiffs and interveners have not in any respect failed to comply with any obligation imposed upon them by any law involved in the labor dispute in question. This suit involves or grows out of a labor dispute.

6. The publication and circulation by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of false statements of fact regarding plaintiffs' treatment of their employees, [fol. 7064] for the purpose of injuring plaintiffs' business, was unlawful, and constituted a fraud upon plaintiffs.

7. The International's threat to cause secondary boycotts of plaintiff's customers and to picket such customers' places of business, unless such customers would cease buying plaintiff's products, was unlawful.

8. The International's threats to use physical violence and acts of terrorism and intimidation against plaintiff's employees, as a means of coercing plaintiffs to require their employees to join the International and accept the International as the representative of such employees for purposes of collective bargaining, was unlawful.

9. The wrongful acts and threats of the defendants, found to have been established by the evidence, constitute a restraint upon plaintiffs' interstate trade and commerce, in violation of the Anti-trust Laws (15 U. S. Code, Sec. 1).

10. Plaintiffs and interveners respectively have no adequate remedy at law; and are respectively entitled to a permanent injunction against the defendants, their officers, agents, servants, employees, representatives and members, and all persons acting under the authority, direction, or control of defendants, or any of them, permanently enjoining them from any and all acts of fraud or violence or threats thereof complained of in the complaint and petition of intervention; and from conducting, threatening, instigating, or causing or attempting to conduct, threaten or instigate a secondary boycott or picketing of any of plaintiffs' customers, or of any of the places of business of plaintiffs' customers.

DONNELLY GARMENT COMPANY, A CORPORATION, PETITIONER

vs.

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, RESPONDENT
DONNELLY GARMENT WORKERS' UNION, INTERVENER-PETITIONER
INTERNATIONAL LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION, INTERVENER

Application for leave to adduce additional evidence

1. Comes now the above named petitioner, Donnelly Garment Company, and respectfully shows to the Court that one of the grounds upon which petitioner is asking that the Board's order herein be set aside is that the trial examiner and the board refused to permit petitioner to adduce competent and ma-

4330 terial evidence; that section 10 (e) of the National Labor Relations Act (29 U. S. C. A. 160 (e)) provides that upon application to the Court the Court may order such additional evidence to be received; that petitioner in its brief filed herein asked the Court for leave to adduce additional evidence and the petition for review; in effect, seeks such relief, but in view of the decision in N. L. R. B. v. Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, (C. C. A. 4) 145 F. 2d 214, that such an application to the Court is prerequisite, petitioner is filing this application.

2. Petitioner sought to introduce evidence before the Board as to the character of the violence and unlawful methods used by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in its strikes and activities and of threats made by said ILGWU to use similar violence and methods against petitioner and its employees; that such evidence was competent and material for the purpose of showing that the formation by petitioner's employees of their own union (Donnelly Garment Workers' Union) was due to such violence, unlawful methods and threats of the ILGWU, and to their desire to protect themselves against such threatened violence, and not due to any domination, coercion or interference on the part of petitioner; that such evidence was also competent and material as bearing on the good faith of the employees in testifying to their reasons for preferring an association of their own to the ILGWU and on the effect to be given to the testimony of witnesses, and as bearing on the finality to be given to the Board's findings of fact, and for the purpose of explaining acts of alleged domination, interference or discrimination (See N. L. R. B. v. Indiana & Mich. Elec. Co., 318 U. S. 9, 23-29). The Trial Examiner and the Board refused to receive such evidence.

3. The Board, in both its first and second decisions, based its findings that petitioner dominated, coerced and interfered with its employees in their selection of a bargaining representative, in large part, upon the mere fact of membership in the DGWU of certain of petitioner's employees, to wit: instructors, thread girls, inspectors, cutters, pattern maker, maintenance clerk, and other employees alleged to be "leaders." Petitioner sought to adduce evidence showing that employees doing similar work and having similar status were eligible to membership in labor unions including the ILGWU and were not classed as supervisory empl. . . by such unions or by the trade generally. The trial examiner and board refused to receive such evidence (see petitioner's offers of proof, Exhibits 1-SSSSS, 1-TTTTT, 1-UUUUU, R. X. 3787-3792).

4. The trial examiner limited petitioner's testimony on the remand to eleven employee witnesses, ruling that further 4331 employee testimony would be cumulative. However, the trial examiner then permitted the board to introduce as "rebuttal" much testimony which was a part of the Board's case in chief and having done so limited Petitioner's rebuttal or surrebuttal thereof to three witnesses from each of the three sections or departments in petitioner's factory in which the board's rebuttal witnesses had been employed, although the testimony given by the board's witnesses related in part to general conditions in the plant and was rebuttable by witnesses from various sections of the plant as well as by other testimony. The trial examiner denied petitioner's offers of testimony by other employees, or any and all matters, and refused to permit petitioner to adduce any testimony other than employee testimony.

5. The trial examiner made a ruling in the second hearing that petitioner could not offer testimony relating to a period prior to November, 1936 (i. e., six months prior to the formation of the DGWU on April 27, 1937), but permitted the board to adduce testimony relating to periods long prior to November, 1936. Petitioner was entitled to adduce testimony relating to periods as far back as the board was permitted to go.

6. The board and ILGWU devoted much time in the trial in attempting to show that the provisions of the contract between petitioner and the DGWU were not proper provisions but showed the DGWU to be a sham union. Petitioner sought to disprove this by showing that similar provisions were contained in the contracts made by the ILGWU with other garment companies in Kansas City. The trial examiner refused to receive these contracts in evidence (Petitioner's Exhibit 2, rejected, R. VI, 1653–1676). These contracts were also competent and material as bearing on the issue of why the employees formed their own union in preference to the ILGWU.

7. The board, in its order, directs petitioner to reimburse its employees for all amounts deducted from the pay of its employees and paid to the DGWU as their dues. There was no charge concerning this matter in the complaint; petitioner did not know that the board challenged the bona fides of the individual authorizations which each employee gave in writing to petitioner to deduct the amount of his dues from his pay check and pay same to the DGWU, or the voluntary character of such authorizations, and did not know that the Board had in mind making an order of reimbursement thereof. Although petitioner thinks that under the evidence adduced the board's order of reimbursement should be set aside, yet petitioner would have offered additional evidence bearing upon said matter had it been apprised of the board's purpose.

4332 Wherefore, petitioner respectfully asks the court for leave to adduce the additional evidence hereinabove referred to upon each and all said matters and issues.

Respectfully submitted.

Application of Intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for leave to adduce additional evidence

1. Comes now the above named Intervener-Petitioner, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and shows to the Court that one of the grounds upon which Intervener-Petitioner is asking that the Board's order herein be set aside is that the Trial Examiner and the Board refused to permit Intervener-Petitioner to adduce competent and material evidence; that Intervener-Petitioner's exception to such rulings and exclusion of evidence was taken at the proper time in the hearing and preserved in the record and set forth with arguments on the law involved in the brief of Intervener-Petitioner filed herein and in the exceptions taken to the intermediate report and the finding of the Board, but that in view of the decision in N. L. R. B. v. Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corporation (C. C. A. 4) 145 Fed. (2d) 214, this application to the court is hereby made for the purpose of fully protecting the rights of Movant to have the exclusion of such important evidence considered as grounds for reversal by this honorable court or that this court may order such evidence received or such other relief afforded as may be just and proper.

2. Intervener-Petitioner sought to present on the witness stand, as its own witnesses and in support of its pleadings, a reasonable number of the approximately twelve hundred employees, all of whom, below the rank of supervisor or anyone having the authority or right to employ, discharge, or reprimand employees, are members of the intervening plant union, but the Trial Examiner refused to permit Intervener-Petitioner to put on any witnesses whatever in its case in chief, and only six witnesses in surrebuttal as to limited and specified points.

3. Intervener-Petitioner was refused and denied the right and opportunity to introduce evidence showing that the employees were impelled to form their own union as a means of protection against the threatened violence and fraud of the International, and not because of any inducement, threat, domination, or control of the employer.

4. Intervener-Petitioner was denied the right to show by evidence the successful continuance and effective operation of the plant union after the date of the first hearing in 1939 and down to and including the present.

5. The Examiner and the Board refused to receive, admit, and consider the direct, competent, and material testimony of the employees as to the reasons for their joining and supporting the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, although this court had specifically directed that the second hearing of this case was held for that express purpose (Donnelly Garment Company, et al. vs. N. L. R. B., 123 Fed. (2d) 215, l. c. 225).

6. Wherefore Intervener-Petitioner respectfully asks the court for leave to adduce such evidence excluded from the hearing as above referred to.

Respectfully submitted.

DONNELLY GARMENT COMPANY, A CORPORATION, PETITIONER

vs.

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, RESPONDENT

DONNELLY GARMENT WORKERS' UNION, INTERVENER

INTERNATIONAL LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION, INTERVENER

On Petition for Review of Order of National Labor Relations Board

October 29, 1945.

Mr. Robert J. Ingraham (Mr. Burr S. Stottle was with him on the brief) for Petitioner.

Mr. Frank E. Tyler (Messrs. Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich & Tyler were with him on the brief) for Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

4335 Miss Ruth Weyand, Attorney, National Labor Relations Board (Mr. Alvin J. Rockwell, General Counsel, National Labor Relations Board, and Mr. Malcolm F. Halliday, Associate General Counsel, National Labor Relations Board, were with her on the brief) for Respondent.

Mr. Clif Langsdale for Intervener, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Before SANBORN, WOODROUGH, and RIDDICK, Circuit Judges.

SANBORN, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the Court.

This is a petition of the Donnelly Garment Company to review and set aside an order of the National Labor Relations Board, entered June 9, 1943 (50 N. L. R. B. 241), requiring the disestablishment of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the abrogation of its contracts with the petitioner. The Board, in its answer, has requested this Court to enforce the order.

The National Labor Relations Board, on April 27, 1939, upon charges filed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (hereinafter referred to as "the International"), issued a complaint, subsequently amended, against the Donnelly Garment Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, a manufacturer of women's garments, doing a nationwide business, charging it with having engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3) and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the National Labor Relations Act, 49 Stat. 449, 29 U. S. C. A. § 151 et seq.

Briefly stated, the charges were that the Company had fostered, dominated and supported the Donnelly Garment
4336 Workers' Union, an independent union of the Company's employees (which, for convenience, will be called the "plant union"), and its alleged predecessor, the "Nelly Don Loyalty League"; that the Company had entered into a closed-shop agreement with the plant union for the purpose of assisting it; that the Company, in April 1937, discriminatorily discharged, and had refused to reinstate, two employees, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, for joining and assisting the International.

In its answer, the Company denied that it had engaged in any unfair labor practices, and asserted the existence, on the part of the International, of a conspiracy to force the Company, by fraud, violence and secondary boycott, to compel its employees, against their will, to join the International, and that the Board, its agents and representatives were furthering this unlawful conspiracy.

The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union (the plant union) was permitted to intervene. It admitted in its answer that the Company and the plant union had entered into a closed-shop agreement, but denied all of the other allegations of the complaint.

The International was also permitted to intervene, in support of the charges against the Company.

Upon the issues made by the pleadings, a hearing was had in 1939 before a Trial Examiner appointed by the Board. He excluded evidence which the Company, and the plant union deemed to be relevant and material, including proffered testimony of employees tending to show that the plant union was not dominated and supported by the Company, and evidence that the International was engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to force the Company to compel its employees to join the Interna-
4337 tional against their will. The Trial Examiner, in his intermediate report, found the facts in favor of the Board, except as to the alleged discriminatory discharge of May Fike and as to the alleged discriminatory discharge and refusal to reinstate Sylvia Hull. He found that May Fike had not been discriminatorily discharged; and found that Sylvia Hull had been excluded from the plant of the Company because of union membership and activities, but was not discriminatorily discharged.

The Board's decision of March 6, 1940, sustained the rulings and adopted the recommendations of the Trial Examiner, except that the Board determined that May Fike had been discrimin-torily discharged and was entitled to be compensated for her loss of wages. The Board ordered the Company to cease and desist from engaging in the unfair labor practices found to exist; to disestablish the plant union as the representative of its employees for purposes of collective bargaining; to cease and desist from giving effect to its contracts with the plant union, except "the substantive features * * * relating to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment"; to reimburse the employees for amounts deducted from their wages as dues for the plant union; to reinstate May Fike and to reimburse her for any loss in wages.

The Company filed in this Court its petition for a review of the order of the Board. The Board answered the petition and asked that its order be enforced. The validity of the order was challenged by the Company upon two grounds: (1) lack of due process, and (2) lack of an adequate evidentiary basis for the order. This Court thought that the Board, by refusing to receive and to consider the proffered evidence of the employees of the Company indicating that their freedom of choice of a bar-
4338 gaining representative had been in no way interfered with and that the plant union was uninfluenced, undominated and unsupported by the Company, had clearly denied the Company and the plant union due process of law. See Donnelly Garment Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 8 Cir., 123 F. 2d 215. We expressed the opinion that bias and prejudice on the part of the Trial Examiner and the Board was not shown by the record; that the Trial Examiner had not erred in confining the issues to those tendered by the complaint; and that the Board was not required to try the International for an alleged conspiracy, nor to try the charge that the Board had conspired or colluded with the International. We concluded that there was a lack of due process in the proceedings before the Board in that competent and relevant evidence offered by the Company had been excluded. We said, in that connection (p. 224 of 123 F. 2d):

"The truth is that a controversy tried before a court or before an administrative agency is not ripe for decision until all competent and material evidence proffered by the parties has been received and considered."

We also said (p. 225 of 123 F. 2d):

"Our conclusion is that the petition of the Board for enforcement of the order under review must be denied. We think that the least that the Board can do in order to cure the defects in its procedure caused by the failure of the Trial Examiner to receive admissible evidence, is to vacate the order and the findings and conclusions upon which it is based; to accord to the petitioners [the Company and the plant union] an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected by the Trial Examiner; and to receive and consider such evidence together with all other competent and material evidence in the record before making new findings and a new order."

4339 The final paragraph of our opinion reads as follows (p. 225 of 123 F. 2d):

"The petition of the Board for the enforcement of its order is denied, and the case is remanded to the Board for further proceedings."

The mandate of this Court provided that the case be "remanded to said Labor Board for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of this Court." It is, we think, apparent that what this Court, in effect, ruled was that the Company and the plant union were entitled to a new trial upon the evidence already taken and such competent and material evidence as might be proffered upon a further hearing. We were advising the Board that, in our opinion, it had not complied with the minimal constitutional requirements of due process. Under the order of this Court, the Board was at liberty to do whatever was necessary in order to give to the parties the full and fair hearing to which they were constitutionally entitled. If the Board thought that this Court was wrong in its conclusion that the proceedings which preceded the Board's order were lacking in due process, the Board was, of course, at liberty to apply to the Supreme Court for certiorari. The Board entered an order setting aside its decision and order of March 6, 1940, and reopened the record for a further hearing "for the purpose of taking additional evidence in accordance with said opinion and decree" of this Court.

The Board designated as the Trial Examiner to conduct the further hearing the same Trial Examiner who had presided at the original hearing and who, during that hearing, had expressed the opinion that evidence of employees of the Company which this Court ruled to be competent and material was immaterial and valueless. The Company presented to the Board a request

4340 that it designate another Trial Examiner to conduct the hearing. The basis for the request was that the examiner designated was biased and prejudiced. Attached to the request was an affidavit of prejudice signed by the Secretary of the Company, stating that he believed that the examiner had prejudged the evidence which this Court had held must be received and considered. The basis for the affiant's belief was stated in detail. It consisted of rulings and remarks of the examiner, made during the original hearing, relative to the admissibility and worth of evidence proffered by the Company and rejected. The intervener plant union concurred in the request for the designation of another Trial Examiner. The Board refused the request. It stated that this Court had decided "that the Trial Examiner and the Board had been free of any bias or prejudice."[1]

The further hearing was conducted by the Trial Examiner during the summer of 1942. He permitted Mrs. James A. Reed (Nell Quinlan Reed), the President of the Company (who had by reason of illness been unable to appear at the original hearing), to testify. He admitted the evidence of eleven of the employees of the Company tending to show that the employees voluntarily formed the plant union and that the union had at all times been free from employer influence, domination, and support.
4341 He then ruled that other similar employee testimony would be cumulative and refused to admit it. He rejected other offers of proof made by the Company and the plant union. He struck out so much of Mrs. Reed's testimony as related to events subsequent to July 15, 1939, the date of the termination of the first hearing. He received, as rebuttal; testimony offered by the Board tending to strengthen its case in chief, and allowed the Company and the plant union a limited surrebuttal.

The intermediate report of the Trial Examiner was filed November 27, 1942. It recites that he had accorded the Company and the plant union an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected at the prior hearing, and that the report was based upon the entire record.

The findings of the Trial Examiner, insofar as they relate to controversial matters, are, in substance, as follows (50 N. L. R. B. 244):

Under the heading, "Respondent's [the Company's] Responsibility for the Activities of Various Employees," the Trial Examiner found: That instructors and thread girls (members of the plant union), of whom there were some 44, were supervisory employees and representatives of the Company; that Rose Todd, who was active in the formation and administration of the plant union, was in fact a supervisor and was regarded by the other employees "as a person in whom the management had confidence and whose views reflected those of the management"; that Hobart Atherton,

[1] This statement is based upon the following language in the opinion of this Court (123 F. 2d 215, 219):

"We think that it cannot be said that it appears from the record of the proceedings before the Examiner and before the Board that there was a denial of due process because of bias and prejudice or collusion. If, as petitioners [the Company and the plant union] contend, the Trial Examiner and the Board ruled erroneously with respect to the issues to be tried or in the exclusion of evidence and drew unwarranted inferences from the evidence adduced, that would not justify a conclusion that either the Examiner or the Board was prejudiced or deliberately unfair. That the Examiner made comments which might better have been omitted, with respect to the attitude of the petitioner's witnesses or the character of their testimony, is not enough to show a denial of due process. Compare Cupples Co. Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board, 8 Cir., 106 F. 2d 100, 113; Goldstein v. United States, 8 Cir., 63 F. 2d 609, 612-614."

who was employed in the maintenance department of the Company, and who was active in the formation of the plant union, was a supervisory employee in charge of that department; that Florence Strickland, of the pattern department, Lena Ty-4342 hurst, of the inspection department, Martha Gray, of the outlet store, Ortense Root, of the sample department, Heath Cowan, of the receiving department, Marvin Price, of building maintenance, Ted Scholes, of the cutting department, and Mary Bogert, of the dividing department [all of whom had been active in the organization known as the Loyalty League], were supervisory employees.

The Trial Examiner, under the heading, "Events Prior to the Effective Date of the Act [National Labor Relations Act]," found: That prior to 1934 no effort had been made to organize the employees of the Company; that in 1934, the International established an office in Kansas City, Missouri, and announced in the papers that an attempt would be made to organize the garment workers of Kansas City; that on March 15, 1934, and December 4, 1934, the International held open meetings, to which the employees of the Company were invited; that supervisory employees of the Company, including Mrs. Reeves, then production manager, and Mrs. Hyde, personnel manager, attended the meetings in a group; that at least a dozen of the employees joined the International and that several became active in its behalf; that employees were called to the office of Mrs. Reeves, questioned about their interest in the International, and warned against joining it; that Mrs. Gray, "in charge of respondent's [the Company's] outlet store," said that it was a "shame" that an employee had joined the International; that a substantial number of employees were laid off or discharged shortly after they joined the International; that about 12 employees, in June 1934, discussed joining the International at the home of Glynn Brooks Yarnell, an employee of the Company and a member of the International; that Yarnell was discharged in July 1934, although she had worked for 4343 the Company since 1924; that, within a few months, all except one of the employees who had met at her home were either laid off or discharged; that the International, on December 6, 1934, filed a charge against the Company under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, asserting that eight employees had been laid off because of their having joined the International; that testimony in that proceeding was completed, but before it was decided, the Act was declare unconstitutional; that in the latter part of 1934 and the first part of 1935, all of the other employees who were known to have joined the International were transferred from the main factory of the Company to a temporary branch factory which was used during the busy season; that when the use of the temporary building was discontinued, the employees, most of whom had several years' service, were laid off, while employees working in the main factory were retained; that, as a result of these events, employees became hesitant about joining the International, and those who joined denied having done so, and employees who had not joined were careful not to talk with those suspected of having joined, for fear of discriminatory treatment with respect to their jobs; that in February, 1935, Martha Gray, "in charge of the * * * outlet store," and Florence Strickland, "in charge of the pattern department," formed an organization among the employees, known as the "Nelly Don Loyalty League"; that it was initiated at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Gray, attended by about 50 employees representing the various sections of the factory; that, within a few days, substantially all employees had joined; that Florence Strickland, in circulating membership cards, stated that Mrs. Donnelly (Mrs. Reed) would close her doors before she would have a union shop, and that employees should sign the cards to keep their jobs; that a statement was circulated along with the membership cards 4344 to the effect that the employees protested against and would resist outside interference with the business of the Company or with their relations to the Company, and that they recognized that they had had generous and fair treatment from Nelly Don (Mrs. Reed), President of the Company, and reposed confidence in her rather than in "professional agitators who are sent here to create discontent among employees of the company." The Trial Examiner found that Florence Strickland refused to allow Virginia Stroup, an employee who was president of the International Local, to become a member of the Loyalty League, because Stroup belonged to "another organization"; that Lena Allison, an instructor, refused membership to Frances Reidell on the ground that she was a member of the International; that on February 8, 1935, a mass meeting of the employees was held during working hours, on the second floor of the building occupied by the Company, presided over by Martha Gray, who explained the meaning of the word "loyalty"; that meetings of the Loyalty League were regularly held on the second floor of the building, upon notices transmitted by Mrs. Wherry, factory manager, or by the switchboard operator of the Company, and transmitted to the employees in each section by their instructor; that each section had a representative in the League, elected by the employees in the section; that virtually all of the Company's supervisory employees, including Mrs. Reeves, Mrs. Hyde, Dewey Atchison, Martha Gray, and Florence Strickland, were members of the Loyalty League; that "the League had songs of loyalty and sponsored the wearing of pins bearing the initial 'L' as a demonstration of loyalty to Nell Quinlan Reed"; that, by means of the League, the Company fostered an organized employee resistance to outside union; that evidence of these events, which preceded 4345 July 5, 1935, the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act, is competent because the League continued to exist after the Act went into effect, and for the purpose of evaluating what afterwards transpired; that the League was dominated and controlled by the Company and was used by it to prevent its employees from joining the International or any other outside labor organization.

Under the heading, "Events Prior to April 27, 1937; Interference, Restraint, and Coercion," the Trial Examiner found: That from the time that the Supreme Court decided that the National Industrial Recovery Act was invalid until March 1937, the International made no further effort to organize the employees; that during this time the League continued in existence and new employees were solicited to join; that on February 26, 1937, there appeared in the Kansas City Star an article stating that the International had announced a campaign to organize the Company's employees and had appropriated a large sum to be spent in a drive for recognition of the International as the collective bargaining agent for the Company's employees; that on March 2, 1937; Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren, shipping clerks, during working hours went through the factory and secured the signatures of approximately 800 factory employees to a pledge reading as follows:

"We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with the organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed;"

that, with six exceptions, the instructors and thread girls did not sign the petition initially; that three employees, Sylvia Hull, 4346 Mamie Carlson and Elsie Greenhaw, at first refused to sign; that two of them subsequently signed for fear of losing their jobs, their names being later erased; that in the afternoon of the day the pledge was signed, Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren took it to Mrs. Reed at her home and presented it to her; that, as the result of arrangements made between Mrs. Reed and the representative of the Kansas City Star, a picture of these employees presenting the pledge to her appeared on the front page of the paper, accompanied by the statement that Mrs. Reed was going to place the pledge in the cornerstone of the new building she was planning to erect. The Trial Examiner found that Mrs. Reed, shortly thereafter, expressed to her office manager, Mrs. Keyes, a wish that all the employees would sign the pledge; that Mrs. Keyes requested an employee, Pauline Shartzer, to circulate the pledge among those who had not signed it; that the signatures of all employees, including supervisors, excepting the three employees who had refused to sign, were obtained and presented to Mrs. Reed; that, by permitting Mary Sprofera, Inez Warren and Pauline Shartzer to circulate the pledges in the factory during working hours, under the circumstances outlined, the Company interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in the free choice of a collective bargaining agent.

The Trial Examiner found that on March 6, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post carried an article stating that David Dubinsky, President of the International, at a meeting of 700 union members in Kansas City, had launched a movement to organize the employees of the Donnelly Company; that this announcement was followed by a letter to the Company from the International, under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a conference between the International and the Company; that the Company did not reply
4347 to the letter; that a meeting of all the employees of the Company took place during working hours on the afternoon of March 18, 1937, on the second floor of the building occupied by the factory; that employees were notified orally by their instructors that they were to attend; that the instructors had been notified by Mrs. Wherry or over the Company's telephone system; that most of the supervisory employees attended the meeting, including Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Reeves, and the instructors and the thread girls; that Rose Todd, with the assistance of Hobart Atherton, "both of whom were officials of the League and supervisory employees," called the meeting; that Rose Todd presided; that chairs for the meeting were rented by the League; that the meeting was sponsored by the League and its officials; that Mrs. Reed was invited to address the meeting; that she brought with her the letter which the Company had received from the International "requesting a conference"; that the letter was read to the employees; that Mrs. Reed then expressed her pleasure at having received the "loyalty" pledge which had been presented to her on March 2, stated that the Company was an institution to be proud of, that it had taken care of its employees by keeping the factory in operation during the depression, and that she intended to continue to run the business; that she spoke of threats of violence that the International was alleged to have made against employees of the Company, and promised protection against such violence. The Trial Examiner found that the Board's witnesses testified that Mrs. Reed said that she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized, and would not allow "Dubinsky or any other 'sky' to tell her how to run her business"; that the Company's witnesses testified that Mrs. Reed stated that "Neither Dubinsky or any other but-tinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you [the employees] to join the International against your will." The 4348 Trial Examiner found that it was unnecessary to resolve the conflict in this testimony, and that Mrs. Reed's own version of her speech constituted an unfair labor practice. The Trial Examiner found that the meeting was sponsored by the League; that supervisors were present; that the employees must have been aware of the antiunion character of the meeting; that, while many of them may have feared the alleged threats of the International, the Company, instead of permitting them to decide what attitude they would adopt toward the International, "seized upon such fears as may have existed to build up and strengthen a militant employee opposition toward that labor organization"; that Mrs. Reed's remarks indicated that the International was the common enemy of both the Company and its employees, and promised protection against it; that she labelled David Dubinsky a "but-tinsky" who was seeking to force the employees to join the International; that, while Mrs. Reed "sought to appear as a disinterested defender of the * * * employees in the exercise of their right to join or not to join a labor organization," her remarks made it plain that the Company's attitude toward unionization had not changed and that membership of any of the employees in the International was not to be tolerated. The Trial Examiner found that the Company, by its sponsorship and domination of the March 18, 1937, meeting of its employees and by Mrs. Reed's talk at that meeting, interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

The Trial Examiner found that on April 22, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post carried an announcement by the International that Sylvia Hull, one of the Company's operators, had been named as a delegate to a convention of the International; that the

and pointed Sylvia Hull out to some of the demonstrators; that Mrs. Hyde, employment manager, appeared and told the demonstrators to go back to work; that the demonstrators stated they would not work while Sylvia Hull was there; that Mrs. Hyde took Sylvia Hull down to the office; that a number of the demonstrators followed, shouting that they would not return to work until they heard Sylvia Hull say she would go home; that she then said, "I will go home, I didn't know the girls felt this way about it or I wouldn't have done it"; that Mrs. Hyde told Sylvia Hull that she would have to go home; that she replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day; that she gave to Mrs. Hyde a telephone number through which she might be reached; that on the same morning a similar demonstration took place near the machine operated by Fern Sigler, who was wearing an International pin; that this demonstration subsided when Mr. Baty, the factory manager, accompanied by Rose Todd, ordered Fern Sigler from her machine to the office; that, as she left the floor, the operators shouted, "we are not going to work as long as she remains here"; that when Baty insisted on sending Fern Sigler home, she argued with him that she had a right to join the International and that it was the duty of the Company to control its employees; that Baty replied, "We don't go in for the Wagner Act, we are just running our business here not a law office"; that Rose 4350 Todd then stated, "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way"; that the conference was participated in by Baty, Mrs. Hyde, Rose Todd, and Fern Sigler; that Fern Sigler was sent home; and that Baty promised to talk to the operators and quiet them down and to recall Fern Sigler when the unrest had subsided, but that, despite his promise, Baty did nothing to allay antagonism toward the International. The Trial Examiner found that the Company approved of and encouraged the demonstrations and took advantage of them to show its hostility to the International and its support of anti-International activities, and thereby interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in violation of the rights guaranteed them under Section 7 of the Act. He also found that the Company, by using the League and its officers for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of the Company's employees by the International, interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

Under the heading, "Domination and interference with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. [the plant union] and contribution of support; interference, restraint, and coercion," the Trial Examiner made the following findings: That shortly after the March 18, 1937, meeting, a committee composed of Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton, and Sally Ormsby, employed Frank E. Tyler, an attorney; that when Tyler asked for a retainer [of $500], Rose Todd borrowed $1,000 from the First National Bank of Kansas City, upon the unsecured note of the Loyalty League, deposited the money in the Loyalty League checking account, and gave to Tyler a League check signed by Todd as president and Hartman as treasurer; that, while the first conference with Tyler related to the possibility of obtaining an 4351 an injunction against the International, Tyler, after the National Labor Relations Act was held constitutional, on April 12, 1937, suggested the formation of an independent union; that on April 27, 1937, a mass meeting of all the Company's employees was held during working hours, on the second floor of the building in which the Company's plant was located, upon notice given by the instructors, who had been notified by Mrs. Wherry or over the telephone system; that instructors and thread girls attended the meeting along with the operators in their section; that chairs for the meeting were rented and paid for by the Loyalty League; that Rose Todd, who was still the President of the League, presided at the meeting; that she stated that Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler, whom she had consulted, advised forming a plant union; that she further stated that the Loyalty League, being a purely social organization, would not take care of the situation; that another organization was necessary to represent them; that she pointed out that a union would have to be formed if they were to successfully resist organization by an outside union; that she told the employees that the new organization would be called the "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union," and that, although she was as distressed as they were at having to use the word "union", it seemed to be necessary; that Mr. Tyler was then introduced by Rose Todd; that Tyler stated, in substance, that, some weeks before, several of the employees came to his office and employed Mr. Gossett and himself as legal advisers of the employees; that he was acting as such; that, whether they believed in unions or not, he and Mr. Gossett believed that it was to the employees' best interests to organize their own individual unaffiliated plant union; that Tyler stated that one of the reasons for the organization was the fact that the International had sent a representative to its national convention and "in order to stop this and make it clear that you are speaking for yourselves 4352 through your own representatives whom you choose, we think your own union is desirable"; that he also stated: "I do not think this action can or will be considered as an act of unfriendliness to your employer. I believe they recognize your right to take this step and it isn't an unfriendly act to them. In fact, it is much better for them and yourselves for you to have your own union with your own representatives rather than having a group trying to represent outsiders from New York"; that Rose Todd then said: "Well, we are together as an entire group of employees. Let's form this organization"; that it was decided by a unanimous vote, without discussion, by the approximately 1,300 employees to form such a union; that a nominating committee of five was appointed by Rose Todd to select a General Chairman and eight Group Chairmen to serve as representatives and officers of the new organization; that membership cards, previously prepared, were distributed; that Tyler then read the by-laws, which he had prepared, which were unanimously adopted without alteration; that the officers named by the nominating committee were unanimously elected; that the 1,300 membership cards were collected, and the meeting declared adjourned. The Trial Examiner found "that the concept of an independent union originated with respondent's [the Company's] supervisory employees and further, that the respondent [Company] through the activities of its supervisory employees gave approval, and lent assistance and encouragement to the D. G. W. U. [the plant union]."

Under the heading, "Membership and participation by other supervisors in the D. G. W. U. [the plant union]," the Trial Examiner made findings that Dewey Atchison, production engineer, joined the plant union at the April 27, 1937, meeting, but resigned on July 14, 1937; that instructors and thread girls regularly 4350 attended the meetings of the union; that other supervisory employees, named by the examiner, attended and took part in meetings; that at the meeting where officers were elected, there were few, if any, contests; that Rose Todd continued on as chairman; that at various times the question as to whether department heads and instructors should have the right to membership was raised; that Rose Todd took the position that, aside from the executives of the Company, Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty, and Mrs. Hyde, all employees were eligible; that employees at various times expressed the view that the presence of instructors and department heads at meetings prevented other employees from speaking freely of their complaints; that, through its supervisory employees, the Company continued its control and direction of the plant union.

Under the heading, "The contracts; closed-shop, check-off and piece-work rates," The Trial Examiner made the following findings: That on April 28, 1937, the day following the organization of the plant union, Rose Todd presented the membership cards to Mrs. Reed, stating that the plant union had been organized by the unanimous vote of the employees and represented a majority; that

Mrs. Reed assured her that the Company would consider the matter; that on May 6, 1937, the Group Chairmen of the plant union met with Mrs. Reed, and told her that they would want a contract covering hours, wages, and working conditions, "which up to now have been satisfactory," and that they desired a closed shop; that Mrs. Reed at once replied, "I understand that is very essential to industrial peace"; that the representatives of the plant union told Mrs. Reed they wished to pay part of Rose Todd's salary, and that Mrs. Reed, in agreeing, stated, "I do not feel at the present time that you [Todd] need give all of your 4354 time to the union"; that Tyler thereafter prepared a proposed agreement containing a closed-shop provision, which was approved by the Group Chairmen of the plant union on the morning of May 27, 1937; that it was presented to Mrs. Reed, who stated, in effect, that the spirit of the agreement was satisfactory, but that changes in phraseology might be needed; that Mrs. Reed and other representatives of the Company met with Tyler and Rose Todd at three o'clock that same afternoon, and that Tyler, after the conference, reported to the Group Chairman that the Company had suggested a few modifications of the proposed contract, which he recommended should be accepted; that on June 22, 1937, a supplemental agreement covering minimum wages for time workers and minimum weekly guarantees to piece workers, who entered into; that the terms of this contract were not submitted to the membership of the plant union for approval before or after its execution, although it fixed wages for a year and had a provision for an automatic extension; that the plant union demanded a minimum wage of $16.50 a week for the lowest paid piece workers; that Rose Todd stated that the International had announced that it was seeking a $16 weekly minimum in the garment industry, and that she thought it would be a good idea to improve on that to defeat efforts of the International to organize the Company's employees. The Trial Examiner found that, by its terms, the original agreement of May 27, 1937, was to remain in effect for a period of two years, while the supplemental wage agreement was to expire July 1, 1938, subject to the provision for automatic extension from year to year unless either party notified the other in writing of a desire to terminate it; and that the two contracts have continued in effect without change.

The Trial Examiner found that in August or September
4355 1937, the Company agreed, at the request of the plant union to a check-off of the monthly dues of its members (except the salesmen); that employees signed cards, prepared and distributed by the Company agreeing to permit the dues to be checked off; that the plant union kept no records of individual dues paid, and issued no receipts to members; that the checks for dues checked off, which were turned over each month to the plant union, range from $250 to $325 a month.

The Trial Examiner found, with respect to the committee consisting of Lulu Nichols, Josephine Spalito, and Rose Todd, appointed by the Group Chairman to adjust piecework rates, that Nichols was a supervisory employee of the Company and that Spalito was her assistant; that it was their duty to fix piecework rates for the Company; that the same persons, therefore, represented the Company and the employees in negotiations in regard to piecework rates, and that the employees were forced to become "members of an impotent collective bargaining agency * * *."

Under the heading, "Respondent's [the Company's] contribution of support to the D. G. W. U. [the plant union]" the Trial Examiner found: That the meeting at which the plant union was formed and the succeeding three or four membership meetings were held during working hours; that the meetings were held in the building where the factory was located; that prior to May 10, 1937, the Company did not lease the second floor, on which the meetings were held, and the plant union was permitted to use it as a meeting place without charge; that on May 10, 1937, the Company leased the second floor, and the plant union continued to use it as a meeting place until April 1938, when the Company remodeled a portion of the first floor to serve as an auditorium; that thereafter the plant union used the auditorium for its meetings; that not until November, 1937, was the question of 4356 paying rent raised; that the first rental payment to the Company was made in April 1938, and was at the rate of $3.00 for each meeting held during the preceding twelve months; that this payment of rent was an afterthought; that Rose Todd had announced in meetings that the use of the Company's facilities was entirely proper; that meetings of the Group Chairmen, who composed the executive committee of the plant union, were, prior to May 1938, held in the office of Beulah Spilsbury, who was in charge of the designing department, and thereafter in the auditorium, and that no rental was paid for the use of Company property by the Group Chairmen; that notices of meetings of the plant union and of the meetings of Group Chairmen were given through the means of communication furnished by the Company; that Rose Todd, in giving notice of meetings, collecting assessments and giving instructions, used the messenger service of the Company; that piecework operators who served as Group Chairmen or officers were paid for time lost in attending to the business of the plant union; that Rose Todd continued to receive her full salary as an employee of the Company and, in addition, was paid $65 a month by the plant union; that she was permitted by the Company to devote as much time as she desired to the business of the plant union without deduction in pay; that she carried on such business during working hours; and that in organizing the employees at the Company's St. Joseph plant she lost half a day without a salary deduction; that at a meeting of May 11, 1937, Rose Todd stated that union work would be conducted at a desk on the ninth floor of the plant and that she could be reached at any time necessary; that her desk was the plant union's only office; that the business of the union was transacted there; that the records of the union were kept in a file case belonging to the Company: that Rose Todd collected money for the union on 4357 Company time; that when she took her vacation in December 1937, she told the Group Chairman that a Miss Riddle would be at the desk from 11 A. M. to 12:45 each day to transact union business; that the membership cards of the plant union were mimeographed after working hours by employees on a machine belonging to the Company; that copies of the plant union's bylaws were made on a ditto machine of the Company; that the plant union had no typewriter, and a Company machine was used for typing minutes of meetings of the union and its Group Chairmen.

Under the heading, "The Alleged Discharges," the findings of the Trial Examiner are: That Sylvia Hull, whose employment with the Company terminated April 23, 1937, had worked for the Company for nearly eight years; that she joined the International on March 23, 1937; that on April 22, 1937, it was publicly announced in a Kansas City newspaper that she had been selected by the International to represent the Company's employees at the International's convention; that, after the demonstration to which Sylvia Hull was subjected the following day at the plant, she went home with the understanding that she would be recalled; that she did not voluntarily quit her employment, and acquiesced, under pressure, in a one-day lay-off; that she was temporarily laid off by the Company because of her union activities and affiliations; that the Company thereby discriminated against her in regard to her tenure of employment, and thereby discouraged membership in the International, and restrained and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act; but that the Company, through the efforts of Mrs. Hyde, attempted to recall Sylvia Hull to work and had not discriminatorily refused to reinstate her. The Trial Examiner, in dealing with the issue of the 4358 alleged discriminatory discharge of May Fike, found that she was not discharged because of her union affiliations or activities.

In conclusion the Trial Examiner found that the activities of the Company set forth in his findings "tend to lead to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce." He recommended to the Board the form of order which he thought should be entered by it.

The Board, after hearing exceptions to the report of the Trial Examiner, entered its decision and order, on June 9, 1943, affirming his rulings and adopting, with certain unimportant exceptions, his findings, conclusions, and recommendations. The Board's order of June 9, 1943, which is the order now under review, directed the Company to disestablish the plant union as the representative of the Company's employees; to cease giving effect to the contracts with the plant union; and to reimburse the employees for dues and assessments deducted from their wages by the Company on behalf of the plant union.

In its decision, the Board said:

"In remanding the case to the Board for further hearing, the Circuit Court directed that the respondent [the Company] and the D. G. W. U. [the plant union] be permitted to adduce the previously proffered testimony of respondent's [the Company's] employees to show, in substance, that they formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and that they were not influenced, interfered with, or coerced by the respondent in choosing that organization as their bargaining representative. In compliance with the Court's mandate and pursuant to the respective offers of proof submitted by the respondent and the D. G. W. U. at the original hearing, the Board permitted the introduction of such testimony. We have carefully considered all such evidence adduced by the respondent and the D. G. W. U. We find, 4359 however, that the testimony in question does not overcome more positive evidence in the record that the respondent committed acts of interference and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which subjected that organization to the respondent's domination and which removed from the employees' selection of the D. G. W. U. the complete freedom of choice which the Act contemplates. Since we find the testimony here adduced totally unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U., we are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case. A consideration of all the evidence convinces us, and we find, that the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contributed support thereto; and that the respondent thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act."

We have set forth in detail the findings of the Trial Examiner because they state the facts which the Board contends are established by the evidence. Briefly stated, the determination of the Board that the plant union was sponsored, interfered with and dominated by the Company, is based upon the following conclusions: (1) That the Company, prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act, was hostile to the International and to outside unions; (2) that the Loyalty League was organized by supervisory employees of the Company for the purpose of resisting organization by the International; (3) that the plant union was an offshoot or successor of the Loyalty League; (4) that supervisory employees participated in the organization and in the administration of the plant union; (5) that the plant union did not function as a true bargaining representative of the employees, and that the Company, in effect, bargained with 4360 itself as to wages, hours, and working conditions; (6) that the Company made substantial contributions of its facilities to the plant union; and (7) that Mrs. Reed's speech to the employees at the March 18, 1937, meeting was coercive. In other words, the position of the Board is that the organization of the plant union was solely attributable to efforts of the Company and its representatives to prevent its employees from joining the International.

The Company and the plant union contend that the determination of the Board is based upon a distortion and disregard of the competent and relevant evidence introduced and proffered by them during the hearings. They contend that this evidence shows conclusively that the formation of the plant union was solely attributable to the fraudulent and violent methods which they assert were, at the time, being employed by the International to compel employers engaged in the garment industry in Kansas City and the Southwest to force their employees to join the International on penalty of having the business of the employers destroyed.

The Company and the plant union contend that the circumstances surrounding the organization of the plant union were, in general, as follows:

That the International, in the year 1937, was engaged in a campaign to organize the garment industry in Kansas City, including the Company, which was the largest local employer engaged in that industry; that on February 26, 1937, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director of the International, publicly announced in the press that the plan was to send a letter to the Company within a week, suggesting a conference to establish collective bargaining on the question of wages and working hours, and stating:

4361 "* * * If the firm refuses, we'll go to the consuming public of the country and advise buyers of the wages and hours prevailing there now.

* * * * * *

"Part of the union's [the International's] campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Company will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold 'advising retailers and labor organizations.' * * *

"The union [the International] claims only twenty-five members among the Donnelly workers, but officials said 'hundreds of others are related to union members.'

"'Within a year, we'll have it completely organized.' Mr. Perlstein said, 'As soon as we have enough members, we'll call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers.'"

The Company and the plant union assert that this threat of a secondary boycott and a strike caused resentment and fear among the employees, and that they voluntarily, and without suggestion of any officer of the Company, circulated what has been referred to as the "loyalty petition," stating that they were contented, refused to acknowledge any outside interference, and were thankful for the humanitarian interest extended to them by Mrs. Reed; that on March 6, 1937, David Dubinsky, President of the International, in the course of a speech made in Kansas City, said: "Reed [the husband of Mrs. Reed, President of the Company] will receive a polite letter within a few days inviting him to confer with Kansas City labor leaders about signing a union contract. If he refuses to meet with us, we shall start our campaign"; that

4362 on March 9, 1937, Perlstein prepared a letter which was mailed to the Company concerning alleged grievances;[2] that the Company did not reply to the letter because it regarded the letter as a mass of falsehoods; that the International was

"DONNELLY GARMENT COMPANY,
1825 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri.

"GENTLEMEN: The Kansas City members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union feel compelled to place before you the following grievances that should be adjusted immediately.

"Fifteen members of our Union were discharged by your firm because of their affiliations with our organization. Their case was up before the National Labor Relations Board. During the period the hearings took place the NRA was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States and the Government could proceed no further. The discharged workers have not as yet been returned to work by your firm.

"The Dress Industry, in which your firm is engaged, is highly unionized throughout the country. Nearly every producer of dresses is in contractual relations with our Union. The 150,000 Union workers employed in this industry are enjoying a 5-day, 35 hour working week and a $22.05 per week minimum wage scale for operators, and reasonable, fair minimum scales for finishers, pressers, cutters, et cetera. Piece workers, who compose the majority of workers in your shop as well as in the industry, without authority to represent the employees, and they were protesting against being represented by it; that as a preliminary to the planned campaign against the Company, the International, about March 15, 1937, called strikes against three smaller garment manufacturers in Kansas City, which were located not far 4363 from the plant of the Company; that the pickets of the International took possession of the buildings or building which housed these factories; that pickets, imported by the International, carried on a program of terrorism and violence; that employees of those factories who were trying to go to their work were beaten and kicked, and their clothing was torn or stripped off; that the Kansas City newspapers were filled with articles and pictures descriptive of what was taking place in these plants; that 4364 the plants were closed; that the employees of the Donnelly Company were fully aware of what was going on at these plants, and knew that the same tactics were to be employed to force the Company to compel its employees to join the International, in entire disregard of their rights and wishes; that it was the intention of the International to use the same methods to procure the organization of the Donnelly plant that had been used are enjoying the right, through committees selected by them, of having an equal voice with the management in each shop in determining the piece rates for each garment or operation on a garment.

"The workers in most of the industry enjoy the freedom and rights of organization. Collective bargaining has been established as a permanent institution. These are the conditions and wage scales in the organized industry.

"However, in your shop the minimum wage scale for operators is between $12.50 and $15.00 per week.

"The wage scales for finishers, pressers and cutters are at least 30 per cent lower than those that exist in the industry.

"The hours of work in your shop are 46 and more per week.

"Your workers are denied the right of joining a labor organization, and those who do, are immediately discharged. Your workers are denied the privileges of genuine collective bargaining. The piece workers in your shop have no voice as to what the piece rates should be as they are set exclusively by representatives of your firm.

"The conditions and wages under which your employees are working not only deprive them of the privileges and opportunities enjoyed by the workers in this industry, but endanger their general work standards and wage scales. Your firm has undue and unjustified advantages over your competitors. The Union believes in 'Fair Competition,' but it does not consider competition fair when it is gained solely at the expense of the workers.

"Under your system of production, workers are compelled to invest extraordinary effort, but the reward that follows is very meager in proportion to the efforts invested. Under modern methods of production such treatment of workers is not only wrong from the humane point of view, but also destructive from the economical point of view. In comparison with other shops in the industry which produce the same type of garment the production in your shop is about 30 per cent higher while the earnings of the workers are about 30 per cent lower.

"We, therefore, believe that a conference between our Union and your firm, for an adjustment of these grievances, should take place immediately. The Union has named a committee which stands ready to meet a similar committee named by your firm.

"May we respectively request that you advise us before the end of this week as to when and where it would be convenient for you to meet our Conference Committee.

"Our aim is industrial peace. We believe in intelligent cooperation between employer and employee. Such cooperation is essential for the welfare of all factors in industry, including the consuming public and community at large. Peace and harmony prevail in the major part of the Dress Industry and we are eager to extend this cooperation to include your firm. Let us join hands to avoid industrial conflict.

"Respectfully yours,

"KANSAS CITY JOINT BOARD.

Mrs. REED:

"I want to say that I am awfully happy to have this opportunity to tell you how proud I was when these girls wrote the petition out, and—well, I have had lots of nice things happen to me in my lifetime, but I have never had anything that made me so proud and so happy as that list of names that came to my house. Many of those girls I had worked with—and who had really helped to build this business into what it is now.

"Over a period of twenty-one years we have built up an institution which anybody can be proud of, anybody connected with it. I had a letter from one of the girls last night telling me that she had worked for the Donnelly Garment Company, but she wasn't ashamed to tell anyone that she had worked for a garment company. When Mr. Dubinsky put Mr. Reed into the garment business—he didn't know he was in it before—he said he would not be ashamed to belong to the Donnelly Garment Company.

"We have an institution we can be proud of. You folks are just beginning to be initiated into the knowledge of just what kind of a business we are in, and some of the people that are in it.

"A great many years ago when I first started, a man in St. Louis said, 'You know you have to have two fires and a failure to stay in that business.' We have not had any fires or any failures yet. We are twenty-one years old and we are pretty well grown up, and I think we know how to run our own business.

"Just from a practical standpoint, let me say that this business has grown up around the policy of year-around work. Up until the time of the depression we practically kept that up. I increased my business in the fall of the year and I increased my machines, and then we always had plenty of business the next spring. In the spring when the depression came on I put new machines in with the idea that I had the business and that I could give a certain amount of work to a certain number of women for a few months. A number of you will remember that the old girls agreed that they would share their work with the new ones that fall if they had to. They did not have to very much, but they did a little. By the time the next spring came along the new ones were the old ones, and they wanted to work too, so we have made every effort in the world to keep the plant going.

"We have built up a Nelly Don garment, and we have built up a Nelly Don trade, and each time we get up a line we try to make something that enough women will buy to keep our plant running. There has been so much talk 'Mrs. Reed isn't interested any more; Mrs. Reed doesn't care anything about it any more, etc.' Mrs. Reed may not work as many hours as she used to, but the burdens on her are bigger now than ever. No matter what anybody else may say, I'll be right here running this business.'

"I know you are thinking about the threats of violence that the Union is making against you and the company. I want to say that the Company and I intend to do everything possible to protect you in case of any violence. We are now trying to make arrangements with the street car company for its buses to go to certain points and pick you people up and bring you to the plant. We will let you know about this as soon as arrangements can be made.

"Many of you have been here for a number of years and you know that you have never been asked whether or not you belong to a union. The company has not discriminated against anyone on that account and Mr. Dubinsky is not going to make me discriminate against employees because they would not belong to his Union. If you want to belong that is your own business and it is up to you to decide. I will say that neither Dubinsky or any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the Company into forcing you to join the International Union against your will.

"I can't say at this time what will be done to protect you against violence, but the company's attorneys will consider what legal steps might be advisable. In any event, you can understand that the company will not submit to any unlawful attacks lying down."

4366 protection against the anticipated attack of the International; that Mr. Tyler advised the possibility of obtaining an injunction, and asked for a retainer fee of $500; that the committee took the liberty of borrowing money from the First National Bank of Kansas City, and paid this retainer; that the money was later repaid through voluntary contributions of fifty cents each by the employees; that on April 1, 1937, Meyer Perlstein publicly stated, with respect to the campaign to organize the employees at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants: "These three firms will soon have union shops. If not, they will never again manufacture dresses;" that after the Supreme Court, on April 12, 1937, had sustained the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Act, Mr. Tyler suggested to Rose Todd, Sally Ormsby, and Hobart Atherton the advisability of the employees organizing an independent union as a matter of self-protection; that on or about April 22, 1937, an article appeared in the Kansas City press, stating, in effect, that Sylvia Hull, an employee of the Company, had been named a delegate to the International's Convention at Atlantic City, to be held on May 3, to ask the International to indorse and support a strike against the Company "for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours, and 4367 improved conditions"; that Sylvia Hull had not been authorized by any of the employees of the Company to represent them; that the article was given to the press by Perlstein; that the publication of this article caused other employees to hold

"Garment Organization Seeking Support for Strike at Plant

"Sylvia Hull, an employe of the Donnelly Garment Company, has been named a delegate from Kansas City to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union biennial convention May 3 at Atlantic City, Meyer Perlstein, regional director, announced Thursday.

"The Donnelly worker, according to Perlstein, was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention.

"Perlstein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and ask the international body to indorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours, and improved conditions. The Kansas City joint committee, Perlstein asserted, agreed to pay all expenses of the Donnelly delegate.

"Other delegates from Kansas City are:

"Cinderella Robinson and Grace Bullard, members of local No. 270 and employed by the Brand and Furlitz company; Louise Smith, local No. 114, employed by the Laverne Coat shop; Anna Koval, local No. 114, employed by the Fashionbuilt Garment Company; Arlean Gaither, local No. 118, employed by the Gordon Brothers Manufacturing company; Ora Thornton and Annis Vaughn, local No. 250, employes of the Stern-Stegman-Prins company, and Miss Wave Tobin, business representative of the Kansas City locals.

"Perlstein said the executive committee of the various local unions in Kansas City would meet Thursday afternoon to consider a resolution calling on the national organization to appropriate funds to carry on a strike at the Donnelly plant.

"The delegates from this section will meet April 30 in St. Louis to go to Atlantic City by special train. Perlstein will be a delegate from St. Louis. The convention will last two weeks."

a demonstration against Sylvia Hull when she came to work the following day; that she was not physically molested and voluntarily went home; that she later attended the convention of the International at Atlantic City, where she delivered a speech, which had been prepared for her, containing false statements concerning the Company, and asking that the convention vote funds to support a strike at the Donnelly plant; that she never sought to return to her work at the plant but became a paid worker for the International; that on April 27, 1937, all of the Company's employees, with the exception of those having authority to hire, discipline or discharge, voluntarily attended a meeting held after working hours on premises not leased or controlled by the Company, and, upon the advice of Mr. Tyler, their counsel, and for their own self-protection, by unanimous vote, organized their own union and elected its officers and a bargaining committee; that the Company did not, directly or indirectly, influence the 4368 formation of the union or contribute to its support or participate in its administration; that the plant union, after negotiations, entered into collective bargaining contracts with the Company covering wages, terms and conditions of employment, and providing for a closed shop and exclusive representation by the plant union; that these contracts provided for better wages and working conditions than prevailed in other comparable plants in the locality under contracts negotiated by the International; that the contracts negotiated by the plant union with the Company have been complied with, and all complaints which have arisen have been satisfactorily adjusted; that on May 25, 1937, Perlstein publicly urged a boycott of Donnelly products and announced that retailers would be visited and urged to refuse to buy such products, under threat of having their stores picketed, and that $250,000 had been appropriated by the International to finance its campaign; that the International sent out representatives to urge retailers to boycott the products of the Company under threat of a secondary boycott; that circulars were widely distributed, containing false statements as to wages and working conditions in the Donnelly factory, as a ground for appealing to the public to refrain from buying the Company's products.[8]

[8] "TO THE CONSUMING PUBLIC:

"The Donnelly Garment Company of Kansas City, Missouri, producers of the 'Nelly Don' dress, are on the unfair list of organized labor. Therefore, we appeal to the consuming public to HELP US BY NOT BUYING, AND BY NOT OFFERING FOR SALE 'NELLY DON' DRESSES until we establish in the shop of the Donnelly Garment Company the rights and privileges, wage scales, and hours of work that prevail in every shop in the dress industry throughout the country.

"The workers of the Donnelly Garment Company are compelled to work long hours while their wage scale is far below that which prevails everywhere else in the dress industry. The speed-up system is such that most of the 1300 workers employed by this firm are in a state of exhaustion and fatigue. Many of them must have constant 4369 The Company and the plant union further assert:

That the employees whom the International contends were discriminatorily discharged by the Company in 1934 and 1935 were not discharged because of their union affiliations or activities; that the evidence relative to events which occurred prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act furnishes no basis for an inference that the Company was hostile toward outside unions.

That the "Nelly Don Loyalty League," organized in 1935, was a voluntary association, formed for social purposes, and that it never functioned as a labor union or a representative of the employees; that it collected no dues and held no regular meetings; that it was not the predecessor of the plant union and did not assist or influence the formation of that union; that the League continued to exist and operate after the formation of the plant union, exactly as before.

That the instructors, thread girls, and other employees, whom the International asserts, and the Board found, were supervisory employees, ineligible for membership in the plant union, were in fact not supervisory employees, and that employees holding 4370 comparable positions in plants organized by the International were regarded as eligible for union membership.

That the Company refused to provide for a check-off of union dues in its contracts with the plant union, and only consented to deduct them after each employee had individually authorized the Company, in writing, to make the deduction.

That the use by the plant union of typewriters, mimeograph machines and other facilities belonging to the Company was never consented to or known by the Company.

The picture drawn by the International and the Board is that of an employer which, solely because of hostility to the International, has influenced, and coerced its employees into forming a plant union and entering into a closed-shop agreement, thus depriving them of their freedom of action and choice and making them, in effect, the bondservants of their employer.

medical attention because of the nervous strain imposed upon them by this system. Numerous workers suffer complete nervous breakdowns.

"On the next page of this booklet we reproduce a copy of a letter which was sent to the Donnelly Garment Company. The firm has not replied to this letter, but has instead, organized a company union which has been named the 'Donnelly Garment Worker's Union.' The Company has also more firmly entrenched in their shop the Spy System which they established long ago. The Spy System is under the direct supervision of a notorious strike-breaking detective agency, through which every worker is spied upon. Those who dare to complain of conditions or join a labor organization, or express a favorable opinion of a union, are immediately discharged.

"We appeal to you to help us establish in this shop, conditions and wages that befit civilized human beings. WE APPEAL TO YOU NOT TO PURCHASE THE 'NELLY DON' DRESS.

Kansas City Joint Board,
INTERNATIONAL LADIES GARMENT WORKERS' UNION,
Executive Office:
1022 Baltimore Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri."

The picture which the Company and the plant union present is that of a group of employees, on friendly terms with their employer, satisfied with their wages and working conditions, and desirous of avoiding strikes and labor troubles, who, upon the advice of their counsel and for their own protection against an unjustified and unlawful attempt by the International to force them to become, and to force their employer to make them become, members of that union against their will, voluntarily formed and have satisfactorily administered their own completely independent union.

The question as to which is the true picture, insofar as that presents a question of fact, is not a matter with which this Court can concern itself. Our sole function is to determine whether the Board, acting within the compass of its power, (1) has 4371 held a proper hearing, (2) has made findings based upon substantial evidence, and (3) has ordered an appropriate remedy. National Labor Relations Board v. Bradford Dyeing Association, 310 U. S. 318, 342; Eagle-Picher Mining & Smelting Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 8 Cir., 119 F. 2d 903, 907.

The Company and the plant union assert that the trial accorded them was unfair because of (1) the Board's refusal to designate another examiner to preside at the hearing after remand; (2) the bias and nonjudicial attitude of the Trial Examiner and the Board throughout the entire case; (3) the failure to give consideration to employee testimony; (4) the refusal to permit the Company to prove a conspiracy on the part of the International, by fraud and violence, to force the Company's employees to become members of that union; (5) the receiving, over objection, of the evidence of the Board relating to events which occurred in 1934 and 1935, and the refusing to receive evidence of the Company relative thereto; (6) the Trial Examiner's direction of the order of proof and his limitation of testimony; (7) the exclusion of competent and material evidence.

1. The refusal of the Board to designate another Trial Examiner.

The contention of the Company and the plant union is that the Trial Examiner who had conducted the first hearing, and was designated to hold the second hearing, had completely prejudged the case and that his rulings, set out in the affidavit of prejudice presented to the Board, demonstrated that he had a fixed opinion as to the worthlessness of evidence which this Court had ruled was admissible and must be considered. The fact that we said in our former opinion that "it cannot be said that it appears from the record of the proceedings before the Ex-

4372 aminer and before the Board that there was a denial of due process because of bias and prejudice or collusion" (123 F. 2d 215, 219) was not a ruling that, in case the Board granted a further hearing, the same Trial Examiner would be a suitable person to conduct it, over the protest of the Company and the plant union. A few of the Trial Examiner's remarks, at the first hearing, about the value of the proffered testimony of the employees were: "No, I don't think it is of any value in the issues in this case, to parade these people on the stand." Now, if that is your idea, you may make as complete an offer as you care to with respect to that matter." "I think I should tell you now that if there is any further testimony of that kind, you can put it in an offer of proof, because I don't think it is material to the issues here * * *." "Now, I don't consider that testimony, if it were given, of any value when they are put up here on the stand and testify under oath, with the respondent [the Company], and in some cases, the foreman and the superintendent present. It might result in coercion, and it might not." With all due respect to the Trial Examiner, who conducted himself with courtesy and patience under conditions which were not always tranquil, it is hard to believe that he could be entirely impartial in weighing evidence which, he, sincerely, considered to be of no value or materiality. We think that a party to a controversy such as this who believes and has substantial grounds for believing that he cannot have a fair trial before a certain trial examiner, should not be forced to present his case to that examiner. We realize, of course, that the Board is at liberty to conduct its proceedings in its own way, through its own instrumentalities, subject only to the condition that the proceedings shall measure up to the constitutional requirements of due process. The unfairness
4373 of trying issues of fact to those who may have prejudged them has been dealt with in Winebrenner v. United States, 8 Cir., 147 F. 2d 322, 328–329.

2. The alleged bias and nonjudicial attitude of the Trial Examiner and the Board.

It is contended that it appears from the record that the Trial Examiner and the Board had prejudged the case and were determined to convict the Company at all events, disregarding its testimony whenever necessary to make a finding favorable to the Board. In order to sustain a ruling to that effect, it seems to us that it would be necessary to be able to demonstrate from the record to a moral certainty the existence of such a mental state. The presumption is the other way, Cupples Company Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board, 8 Cir., 103 F. 2d 953, 958, and inquiry into the mental processes of the Board members is not a function of this Court. Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, 18. The record is persuasive, as we have already pointed out, that the Trial Examiner had, upon the first hearing, reached the conclusion that the testimony of employees upon the issue whether their plant union was or was not dominated by the Company should be disregarded. We think, however, that a ruling by this Court that the proceedings of the Board lacked due process because of its alleged bias and prejudice against the Company and the plant union is not justified.

3. Failure to consider employee testimony.

The employee testimony which the Company and the plant union contend was given no consideration by the Board is that which was thought by the Examiner and the Board, upon the first hearing, to be immaterial, and which we held to be competent and material (123 F. 2d 222–223). Upon the second hearing, the Trial Examiner received the testimony of eleven of 4374 the Company's employees relative to how and why they came to organize the plant union and what sort of an organization it was and is. He then ruled that further evidence of employees would be cumulative. There was other similar employee testimony in the record of the first hearing, as the Board points out, but it is, of course, obvious that that evidence had, prior to the remand, been ruled by the Board to be immaterial, and had therefore not been considered. Although the plant union complains that the Trial Examiner heard none of the employee testimony proffered by it, it is apparent that this testimony would have been no different than the testimony of the eleven witnesses produced by the Company and that the testimony received was for the benefit of both. The ruling by the Trial Examiner that further employee evidence would be cumulative was equivalent to a ruling that all of the employees offered as witnesses would have given the same evidence as that which was received. We are satisfied that the Examiner was justified in limiting the number of witnesses as he did.

There is much force in the contention that, while the employee evidence was received, it was still regarded by the Board as being entirely immaterial and worthless. The Board was of the opinion, and is apparently still of the opinion, that the ruling of this Court relative to the admissibility of such evidence was and is erroneous. The Board is, of course, entitled to its opinion in that regard. The Board's attitude toward this employee evidence was well expressed by its counsel at the second hearing, after an employee had stated that she had joined the plant union of her own

4375 free will.* As already pointed out, the Trial Examiner states that he has based his findings upon the entire record. He makes no specific reference to the employees' testimony as to the plant union being their voluntary and uninfluenced choice. The Board, in its order adopting the findings of the Examiner, said with respect to such evidence: "Since we find the testimony here adduced totally unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U. [the plant union], we are moreover, impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case." The Board argues that its statement relates merely to testimony that the employees formed and joined the plant union of their own free will and were not influenced, interfered with, or coerced by the Company; that this testimony was not material, because of positive evidence in the record that the Company

*Miss WEYAND: "I would like to make a statement in connection with that question. While we are here to take such evidence under the remand of the Court, it is my position that the question is one which should not properly be directed to the witness. I am, of course, acquiescing in the Circuit Court of Appeals ruling we do take such evidence, but I would like to make a statement for the record, of my position on that question.

"I think such questions are improper in a Labor Board hearing, in the first place because they violate the principle of a secret election stated in Section 9 of the Act. The Congressional intent there expressed was clearly that employees should not be required to disclose in the presence of their employers or any representatives of the employers or in the presence of anyone else, if they did not so desire, whether or not they favored one union over another union.

"To ask an employee who is still employed by the employer, in the presence of employer's representatives, whether or not she favors a given union, violates the principles of secret elections. I think the question is improper for a second reason, that is because the Board's inquiry in a Labor Board case is whether or not the employer interfered, restrained, or coerced employees. The Congressional intent is clear that that inquiry is directed to whether or not the employer did certain acts, which normally and reasonably have the effect of interfering with, restraining, or coercing.

"It is not the Board's job to inquire whether or not the restraint, interference, or coercion actually had that effect on any given employee. The Board is not required to look into the minds of the employees and see if any one or more employees are actually interfered with, restrained, or coerced.

"The Courts have repeatedly held that espionage, even though unknown to any of the employees, constituted interference within the meaning of the Act and has held immaterial that no employee knew he was being spied upon, and if it was held immaterial that the employer had not used the information that he received through the espionage for the purpose of depriving the employees of other rights in the Act.

"There is a third reason why I think the question is improper in a Labor Board hearing, and that is that the proof, if we can assume it is proof, that any employee was not interfered with, restrained or coerced, has no weight or bearing upon whether or not any other employee was restrained, interfered with, or coerced. That is a general proposition, that negative evidence does not establish the absence of affirmative evidence in other instances.

"It is the Labor Board's duty only to show the acts of the employer are the type that interfered with, restrained, or coerced; that if in this case, where the prior evidence shows the employer has interfered with, restrained, and coerced certain employees, the fact they may provide many witnesses who think they were not interfered with, restrained, or coerced has no bearing on whether other employees were interfered with, restrained, or coerced.

"For a fourth reason, I think the question is improper because of the unreliability of introspective inquiries. By reason of the very nature of the subject matter, the employees who have been the subject of unfair labor practices really become so interfered with or dominated that they do not know their own minds, even assuming they were able to speak in the presence of the employer freely. It is our position they cannot speak freely in the presence of their employer, and if they have been, for long years, under the interference, restraint, and coercion of their employer, their state of mind is one which they cannot provide a fair introspective account of their own state of mind, because the domination, interference, and restraint which the Act presupposes goes to the coloring of the employee's point of view, so he cannot look into his own had interfered with and assisted in the formation of the plant union which rendered that organization incapable of acting as the bargaining agent of the employees.

It is our understanding that, when an employer is charged with an unfair labor practice which he denies having committed, the Constitution of the United States guarantees him a fair trial of the issue; that one of the requirements of a fair trial is that any evidence which is competent and material shall be received and considered, and that the strength of the testimony against him has no bearing upon the admissibility of his testimony or his right fully to present his defense. The rule contended for by the Board that the introduction of positive and direct evidence of guilt renders pertinent "conclusionary" evidence of innocence immaterial might make for expedition in the trial of controversies before the courts and administrative agencies, but it is not in accord with present basic ideas of fairness. If one were of the opinion that it appeared from the undisputed evidence in this record that the plant union was, as a matter of law, a company-dominated union and that all reasonable and fair-minded men could, from the evidence, reach no other conclusion, one might believe that the failure of the Board to consider what it terms "conclusionary" evidence, no matter how material, was harmless error. The Board, however, had the burden of proof; it was the sole judge of the facts, of the credibility of witnesses, and of the weight of their evidence. Unquestionably it could have found from the competent evidence introduced and proffered by the Company and the plant union that the latter was not company-dominated, or the Board could have determined that the evidence was insufficient to justify the conclusion that the plant union was company-dominated. It seems to us that the Company and the plant union are justified in contending that the evidence of the employees tending to show lack of domination and interference by the Company received no different or greater consideration upon the second hearing than it did upon the first, and that it was disregarded in both hearings.

4. Refusal of evidence of conspiracy on the part of the International.

The contention is that the Company and the plant union were entitled to show that the International, at and prior to the mind and state what his position would have been if he hadn't been subject to this economic power which has been exercised over him unfairly by the employer.

"For those four reasons it is my position that the line of inquiry here directed to whether or not an employee believes that he joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of his own free will isn't a proper line of inquiry.

"I am aware that the Court has directed us to take that testimony, and I will not object further in this hearing, but I do wish the record to show my position on this line of questions."

time of the formation of the plant union, was engaged 4378 in an unlawful conspiracy to force the Company, by the use of fraud and violence, to compel its employees, regardless of their wishes, to join the International.

This Court, in its former opinion in this case, said (page 225 of 123 F. 2d): "We are of the opinion that the Trial Examiner did not err in confining the issues to those which were tendered by the complaint filed by the Board. We are satisfied that the Board was not required to try the International for alleged conspiracy nor to try the charge that the Board had conspired or colluded with the International." This statement, we think, was based upon the theory that the clean hands doctrine was not necessarily applicable to proceedings before the Board, and that, while the Board might, if it saw fit, inquire whether it was being taken advantage of to further unlawful or unworthy activities of the complaining union, it was not compelled to do so. The case of National Labor Relations Board v. Indiana & Michigan Electric Co., 318 U. S. 9, decided January 18, 1943, deals with this same question. It was held in that case that, while the misconduct of the party making charges of unfair labor practices against an employer does not deprive the Board of jurisdiction to issue a complaint or conduct a proceeding, such misconduct may properly be considered by the Board in determining whether it should institute or continue a proceeding upon the charges, and that the Board properly may be required to receive evidence and make findings on that issue. The Supreme Court said (page 19 of 318 U. S.): "The Board might properly withhold or dismiss its own complaint if it should appear that the charge is so related to a course of violence and destruction, carried on for the purpose of coercing an employer to help herd its employees into the complaining union, as to constitute an abuse of the Board's process."

4379 The Company and the plant union here have at all times contended that the International, by the use of fraud and violence, was endeavoring to force the Company to herd its employees into the International, and that the charges filed by the International with the Board were not filed in good faith, but for the purpose of influencing the result of an action for an injunction brought by the Company to prevent the International from carrying out its threats.[7] That the charges of misconduct made by the Company and the plant union against the International are not without substance is shown by the record. We think that if a further hearing were to be held, the application of the Company and the plant union to this Court for permission to adduce before the Board additional evidence of the alleged misconduct of the International should be granted.

5. Evidence as to events in 1934 and 1935.

The Board based its findings of hostility of the Company to outside unions upon evidence of events which preceded the enactment of National Labor Relations Act. The Company and the plant union regarded such evidence as incompetent and immaterial, and objected to its introduction. It is true that an employer's attitude prior to the Act toward the unionization of his employees may be an unfair criterion by which to judge his subsequent attitude. No doubt, an employer is entitled to the benefit of the presumption that he intends to comply with the law. We see no reason, however, why the Board may not show what 4380 the labor situation was at a plant shortly prior to July 5, 1935, for whatever light that may throw upon subsequent events. It must be remembered that in this case the Board was contending that prior to that date, the Loyalty League was formed for the purpose of resisting the International and that the plant union formed in 1937 was an outgrowth of or a substitute for the League.

It is argued that the Company and the plant union were not permitted to introduce evidence relative to these past events which the Board contended showed anti-union sentiment on the part of the Company. This argument appears to be based in part upon the refusal of the Trial Examiner, during both the first and second hearing, to receive evidence relative to the methods which the International, from the beginning, was using in its efforts to organize the Company's employees, and in part upon the assertion that, during the second hearing, the Examiner, over the objection of the Company, permitted the Board to examine witnesses relative to events that occurred in 1935, but refused the same privilege to the Company. The testimony specifically referred to as having been improperly received, over objection, related to the Loyalty League, which, as already pointed out, the Board contended was an instrumentality of the Company to resist the International, and which the Company and the plant union asserted was a mere social organization. What motivated the formation of the League and what purpose it served were proper subjects of inquiry, and we think that the rulings of the Trial Examiner relative thereto did not deprive the Company or the plant union of a fair trial. On the second hearing, the Trial Examiner permitted Mrs. Reed, the President of the Company, to cover the entire field in her testimony, although he subsequently struck out so much of her evidence as related to matters subsequent to July 15, 1939.

4381 We think, however, that the Trial Examiner, in view of the importance which he ascribed to events preceding the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, should have received evidence proffered by the Company on the second hearing to show the methods employed by the International or organize the employees of the Company and that the Company was not guilty of the charges of discriminatory treatment of its employees made by the International under the National Industrial Recovery Act. We should hesitate to rule that the Trial Examiner's failure in this regard amounted, alone, to a denial of due process, but if the Company's attitude toward outside unions prior to the National Labor Relations Act was to be regarded as a matter of controlling consequence, the Company should, we think, have been afforded a full and fair opportunity to prove that its attitude was not what the International asserted it to be.

6. The Trial Examiner's direction of the order of proof.

It would be a rare case in which the direction of the order of proof would be of sufficient consequence to amount to a denial of due process. The refusal of the Examiner to permit the Company to complete its examination of the witness Wave Tobin prior to putting on its employee testimony did not make the second hearing unfair. The order of proof is a matter addressed to the discretion of the trial tribunal. United States v. Manton, 2 Cir., 107 F. 2d 834, 844.

7. Exclusion of competent and material evidence.

The Company and the plant union contend that, to refute the evidence relied upon by the Board and the International as indicating that the contracts with the plant union were a sham, evidence that contracts containing similar provisions were 4382 made by the International should not have been rejected.

We know of no reason why evidence that provisions similar to those in the contracts between the Company and the plant union were not unusual and were included in contracts of the International itself should not have been considered pertinent. It at least bore upon the "imponderables" which the Board has the power to appraise. International Association of Machinists v. National Labor Relations Board, 311 U. S. 72, 79; National Labor Relations Board v. Link-Belt Co., 311 U. S. 584, 599.

The Trial Examiner refused to receive evidence proffered by the Company (1) to show that, under the customs existing in labor unions and particularly in the International in the year 1937, instructors, head cutters, and head pattern makers or those holding equivalent positions, regardless of titles, were usually regarded as eligible to union membership and were received into such unions; (2) to show that Wave Tobin organized strikes in the Gernes,

Gordon and Missouri Garment companies in Kansas City in March 1937; that she, as agent and representative of the International, was in charge of and directed the strikes and the violence perpetrated in connection with them, and to show, by her, the nature of the violence and that it was intended that the same methods should be employed against the Company and its employees; (3) to show, by the records of the Kansas City Joint Board of the International, that in the garment plants in Kansas City having contracts with the International, head cutters, head pattern makers, head examiners and instructors, whether known as such or not, are treated as eligible for union membership and are active members of the International, and that the eligibility and acceptance of such employees as union members is customary in the garment industry; (4) to show substantially similar 4383 facts by Erwin Feldman, counsel for garment companies which have contracts with the International.

The Company and the plant union, in support of their claim that the employees formed their own union in order to protect themselves against violence and misrepresentation and to prevent the Company, under threat of the destruction of its business and their jobs, from herding them into the International against their will, had a right to show what methods the International was resorting to in its organizing campaign in Kansas City. Such testimony would have substantiated the evidence of the employees that that was the reason they organized the plant union. The employees were interested witnesses whose testimony might be discounted. The testimony of those who conducted the strikes for the International could not well be disregarded. Most of the testimony relating to the alleged fraud and violence of the International is in the record in the form of offers of proof, but it was not received or considered by the Trial Examiner or by the Board.

The other offers of proof referred to, should not, we think, have been rejected. If the issues had been tried before a jury, evidence that employees holding positions similar to those of the employees who were asserted by the Board to be ineligible to union membership, were regarded by the International and other large unions as eligible to union membership, would, in our opinion, have been admissible. We do not mean that the jury would have been bound by such evidence, but that the evidence would tend to indicate that employees holding similar positions were not usually considered by employers and employees in the garment industry to be representatives of the management.

4384 Our conclusion is that the Company and the plant union have not yet had the full and fair trial to which they are constitutionally entitled. It is apparent that the Board was convinced, upon the first hearing, that it had before it and had considered all of the competent and relevant evidence which it was required to receive and consider. It believes now that it has fully met the requirements of due process, has complied with the mandate of this Court, and is entitled to the enforcement of its order. We do not question the sincerity of the Board's belief. Courts and lawyers seldom differ as to what the requirements of due process are, but they not infrequently differ as to whether such requirements have been adequately met. (Compare, In re Noell, 8 Cir., 93 F. 2d 5, 7. See, also, Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. v. Federal Power Commission, 8 Cir., 143 F. 2d 488, 493–494.) In order to resolve this controversy over the question of due process, we think that the Board would be entirely justified in applying for certiorari. With that thought in mind, we have tried to give a fairly complete statement of the issues. The questions presented are of importance to the Board in the administration of the Act. They are also of importance to the Company, to the International, to the public, and particularly to the employees whose rights are involved.

We think that it would be inappropriate to consider the adequacy of the evidentiary basis for the Board's order at this time and upon this record. We have no right to assume that if the Board had received and considered all of the competent and material evidence proffered by the Company and the plant union, it would have made the same findings and order. We cannot avoid the conclusion that, in the absence of the rejected testimony, the record presents an incomplete picture.

4385 The prayer of the Board for a decree of this Court enforcing the order under review is denied for want of due process in the proceedings upon which the order is based.

RIDDICK, Circuit Judge, Concurring.

This case is unusual among labor disputes. The employer, the Donnelly Garment Company, and all of its employees, approximately 1,200 in number, are now and have been since the beginning of this case aligned on the same side of the controversy. This fact is of controlling significance in the settlement of the case.

In 1937, following the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Act, the employees of the Garment Company organized a plant union. The company recognized the union as the exclusive bargaining agent of its employees. The union and the company entered into a contract governing wages, hours of labor, and conditions of employment, which, for the five years passing between the formation of the union and the Board's order now before this court, has satisfactorily served the purpose for which it was intended. The ultimate question for decision is whether the plant union is the independent agency of the employees, freely organized and administered by them in their interest, or whether, as the Board found, it has its roots in a prohibited domination and coercion of employees by the company.

When the Board's charge of company domination of the plant union first came on for hearing before the Board, the union had been in existence for two years. The plant union was permitted to intervene in the hearing before the Board to contest the charge of company domination. It requested the Board to conduct a secret election to determine the question at issue. This re-4386 quest was denied by the Board for reasons which are not important here and which were no doubt sound. But, after the Board refused the requested election, there remained but one other means of determining the facts at issue before the Board—a hearing at which those who knew the facts might be permitted to testify concerning them. The Board after denying the employees the right to vote upon the question at issue also refused to let them testify. We held that this refusal constituted a denial of due process, and remanded the case to the Board in order that the rejected evidence as well as any other admissible and material evidence might be heard.

At the second hearing before the Board the company and the employees offered to prove by each of the persons then working for the company that the plant union had been organized and subsequently administered by employees alone, free from the coercion or control of the company, and that it was at the time of the hearing the agency freely chosen by each of them to represent them in collective bargaining with the company. The testimony of a relatively small number of employees was received. It conformed in all respects to the terms upon which it was offered. The examiner conducting the hearing refused to hear testimony of other employees on the ground that it was merely cumulative. This refusal is not subject to criticism, but implicit in it is the finding that each of the remaining employees would have testified to the same effect as those whose testimony was received. The situation in this case, therefore, is the same as if each and every employee had testified in denial of the charge of company domination of the plant union.

Unless this employee evidence is in some manner contradicted by other evidence in the record, the finding that the plant union was not the free agent of the employees is a denial of the employees' right of collective bargaining by the agency of their 4387 own choice, which the National Labor Relations Act guarantees and which it must be supposed this proceeding was instituted to protect. In my opinion, there is no substantial evidence tending to support the Board's finding.

At most, the evidence on which is based the Board's finding of company domination is sufficient to establish that at the time of the formation of the union there existed between the company and the International Union a spirit of active hostility, in which the employees of the company joined on the side of the company, and a long history of amicable relations between the company and its employees; and that the plant union was organized by the employees as a result of the attempt of the International Union to organize them and as a means of preventing that organization. There was neither any evidence, nor any finding by the Board, that any of the employees of the company had ever been disciplined or discharged by the company because of labor activities or affiliations. Membership of so-called supervisory employees originally permitted by the plant union had been terminated at the time of the hearing before the Board. Inconsequential use by officers of the plant union of the company's communication system and telephones and some office equipment had been the custom among the employees long before the organization of the plant union, and was quite evidently regarded by the company and the employees as of no significance. Whatever degree of substantiality such evidence may have in other situations on the question of employer domination of a plant union, it is as a matter of law entitled to none when opposed by the employee testimony in this record. Whether the company or any of its employees, before the full reach of the National Labor Relations Act had been definitely determined, engaged in activities now recognized as a possible means of employee coercion, the fact that at 4388 the time of this hearing, five years after the organization of the plant union, the employees unanimously chose it as their agent for collective bargaining ought to control the issue in this case.

For more than seven years the employees have defended the plant union, at great expense to themselves, before every tribunal in which its integrity has been called in question. Throughout this period they have been fully advised of their rights under the National Labor Relations Act. There have been no defections from their ranks. None of them permitted to testify has been impeached on the witness stand. The credibility of none of them has been attacked. Five years after the organization of the plant union all of its members have testified to their deliberate choice of it as their agency for collective bargaining with their employer.

In this situation there is no room, in my opinion, for the inference that these employees have been, and continue to be, the victims of an illegal coercion by means unknown to them and too subtle to be susceptible of proof, or for the inference that they have surrendered their right freely to choose their labor affiliation in return for the occasional inconsequential use of the Garment Company's telephones, mimeograph machines, and office facilities.

I think it clear beyond question that there was a denial of due process in the hearing before the Board, because of the Board's refusal to give any weight to some of the material evidence received, as well as because of its refusal to hear material evidence offered by the Garment Company and the plant union. This, of course, requires that the Board's petition for enforcement be denied. But the real issue in this case is whether there is in the record before us any substantial evidence to sustain the Board's order. In view of the long history of this case, I think the issue should be decided. There have been two trials of this controversy before the Labor Board and before this court. It is quite 4389 certain that if upon a third trial the evidence which the Board rejected should be received, it could not weaken, if it failed to support, the case which the employees have made. The public interest requires that there should be an end to this controversy, and, in an effort to accomplish that desired result, I think this court should hold that there is no substantial evidence in the record before it to support the Board's order, and that, accordingly, the order should be set aside.

WOODROUGH, Circuit Judge, dissenting.

The decision here involves the application of the legislation that has been enacted by Congress to meet the great problem of labor disputes, and as I am not in agreement, the importance of the matter necessitates a brief statement.

Labor disputes within judicial knowledge have been a kind of warfare, costly in suffering and economic loss, and for a long time they were not justiciable. But the labor acts have now formulated into positive law definitions of certain rights of labor and certain few restrictions on the power of management over labor in industry that are deemed to have the weight of public opinion behind them and are declared by Congress to be conducive to industrial peace. By the provisions which are most relevant in this appeal, Congress has established that one of the most crucial of labor disputes, and the one that has long bred disorder, namely, the question of the affiliation of a plant's workers with the labor union of the trade at which they work, shall be determined by resort to the democratic process of elections.

There has never been, and is, no unanimously agreed on yardstick to settle whether unionism has caused or hin-4390 dered the gains that have admittedly accrued to labor. The gains go to the workers in a shop equally, whether they affiliate with labor unions or oppose them, as there is no such thing in industry as a higher wage to a union worker as such. Though this advantage to a worker of a position where he may get the gains of union without the pains, is obvious to the dullest, and millions refuse to join the unions, the fact remains that other millions have joined up. In newer fields they are induced to do so by ways and means, fair and foul, that are now thoroughly well known. Since elections have been provided for, the term "electioneering" covers them all. The Labor Relations Board has been established with a main central purpose of determining the will of the workers in respect to such joining or not joining by the democratic process of free election by secret ballot. The Acts extend the democratic process and its incidents beyond the political into the economic field. In the old field, the democratic way is, and always has been, the hard way. In the new field, the character of the feelings aroused is the same and resistance is, as expected, no less formidable. But the democratic way prevails in the political field and Congress has enacted that it shall have its place also in the field of labor relations.

Despite the enormous volume of the record in this appeal, accumulating ten years' administrative and court proceedings between the same parties, the one single matter of substance involved in it is whether or not an election by secret ballot with concomitant electioneering shall be allowed for the workers in the Donnelly Garment Company's factory at Kansas City on the selection of a bargaining agency. The old established union of the garment workers, claiming that in the course of its existence 4391 it has lifted the condition of the workers in the industry from degradation to decency, and promising to continue the advance, has wanted to obtain affiliation of the workers in the Donnelly plant and has raised a labor dispute, and the Board has tried through the years to remove the obstacles to apply the democratic process of election to determine the dispute.

The Donnelly company has resisted, not because it has ever feared the result of an election, but it has feared the electioneering that goes with the democratic process of a free election. It has accordingly engaged, during the years, in measures to anticipate, suppress and prevent the electioneering which is included in the American concept of an election. It has succeeded through an injunction erroneously issued by a district judge (belatedly reversed), by discharge and dropping out of employees favoring union affiliation, by a slight wage increase, by company dominated union and closed shop contract made with it, and protracted court proceedings which include several decisions. The conclusions of the majority opinion in this proceeding refusing to enforce the Board's order to disestablish the plant union, in effect validates the contract that has been made by which any affiliation with the old union is forbidden to any of the workers in the plant during its continuance, collective bargaining is completely forestalled and avoided, and any practical opportunity or occasion for the application of the democratic process of an election at the plant has been anticipated and removed. The company has been, and is, proceeding in its competition within the unionized industry freed under judicial rulings from any impact upon its workers of the electioneering and secret ballot of the democratic process of election provided by Congress. It has so proceeded in a peace which is grateful but which is not, in my opinion, anchored in sound application of the Labor Acts.

4392 On the first appeal of this particular proceeding (which is an inquiry upon a charge against the company of unfair labor practices) the company complained that the Board had refused to let it bring in and inquire of each and all of its twelve hundred workers individually touching his or her mental attitude for or against the established garment workers union and a plant union, and his or her reasons. It was the Board's position that it had no right or power to determine the will of the workers in a plan in such a manner or in any other way than through the election upon secret ballot prescribed for such determination by it in statute of the Board's creation. This court held that the Board had denied due process in refusing to permit the inquisition of the individual employees.

If decision on that appeal had been conclusive of the controversies to be decided here, I would be bound to follow it under our discipline in the court, but it has not been. I did not sit with the division of this court which rendered decision, and consider it my duty to take this first opportunity to state my view that the Board was neither required to permit the inquisition of the workwomen, nor was it bound to give any special or particular weight to the answers they made to the interrogatories propounded to them on the subject in the presence of the company's representatives. I do not agree with the implication of the decision that the Board should have found the facts according to what the twelve employees answered, or the stipulation that the others would answer similarly if interrogated under the same surroundings.

In the thought of this country, voting a political preference includes casting the ballot in secret, and when the process is extended to the economic field the same element of secrecy necessarily goes with it. A procedure by which the will of any 4393 mass of people is determined by having either the political or the industrial bosses who are in control call in the individuals for questioning as to their will and having the answers so elicited recorded as determinative of that will, is futile and contrary to any American concept of a free election process.

It happens in this case that both the outstanding owner of the company herein and the great and famous spokesman for it,* had and deserved the highest honor, trust, respect and affection, and there may have been no single one of the workers in the plant without some obligation for some kindness personally bestowed. But the fact, indisputable as it is, does not detract from, it illuminates the principle involved in this case.

The American concept of free election includes the element of electioneering, as vitally essential a part of it as is the secret ballot. Indeed, the first is much older in the tradition than the second. The history of electioneering in the sense of attempting to win elections in the political field probably records every form of brutality, violence and fraud that the occidental mind conceives of. Yet in that field the democratic process stands. The gist of the long years of wordy controversy in this case is that the electioneering of the Ladies Garment Workers Union in a Donnelly plant election would be too terrible to be permitted. The supposed terror has been enlarged upon in every argument to the Board and to this court, as well as to the workers in the plant. The anticipated terror has been first erroneously enjoined and now forestalled and prevented by judicial decision.

There is no reason to believe that the Congress which enacted the labor laws thought that the democratic process which it 4394 introduced into the economic field would be immune from the impact of any of the clashing of interests and resultant passions, excitements and incidents attendant on its practice in the political field. The element of electioneering will continue to inhere as a vital and vitalizing element.

But there is no power in the courts to prevent political elections because the electioneering will involve excitement and violent clashing. The labor acts have similarly forbidden the courts to try to use the judicial powers of prevention against the working out of the democratic process in the economic field into which Congress has extended it.

Here the forbidden result has been attained and the judicial preventive keeps any electioneering from being done and any election from being held because the form into which the proceedings have been cast opened the door to it. The court would never have ordered an election which it identified as an election to be determined by letting the bosses interrogate the voters individually and recording the answers as votes. I am satisfied that the thing cannot and should not be done under any form.

My study of the record herein has satisfied me that the findings of the Board herein are sustained by substantial evidence. They are clear and unambiguous and set out the several steps by which the company anticipated and has prevented any kind of an attempt by the established garment workers labor union to obtain the affiliation of the workers in the company plant. It appears to me that the methods by which the company fostered and set up and now maintains its plant union, including all its workers, present and prospective, and binding them against other affiliation, as well as precluding any collective bargaining, are the same methods that have been consistently held by the courts to be contrary 4395 to the Act. When, as it is said, the established union arrogantly demanded of the company that it herd the women and girls who worked for it in o the union, nobody doubted that the company could easily have done so. The form of the company's charge that the union members conspired to force the company to herd its workers into the union directly implies that the company could have done so. Or it could proceed to herd the employees into a company union with no means or power of collective bargaining. Or it could have left them to get together away from their bosses to consider and to exercise a free choice. The company went as far from leaving them to a free choice as it did from herding them into the union affiliation demanded. Its agents held out to and regarded by the workwomen as their bosses, acting with and for the management, used company facilities and the power and authority of the employer to gather all of the personnel in a hall on the plant property, and then and there directed and consummated the organization of the plant union. The women and girl workers acquiesced, as the established discipline of the business and the accustomed submission to the authority of the supervisors over them rendered it practically certain that they would. There was no interval between the time they checked in for work at their machines (i. e., reported themselves for orders and direction) and the time when they signified their adherence to a plant union when it could fairly be said that they were released from the factory discipline or the authority of the company agents who maintained that discipline over them. The prima facie evidence was clearly sufficient to support the charge of domination, and without disproof could justify no other inference than that the company did by unfair labor practices set up and herd its workers into the pseudo plant union in order to forestall and prevent any electioneering for union affiliation.

4396 Instead of attempting to disprove that showing, it appears to me that the company proffered testimony that tended merely to divert the inquiry away from it and it does not appear to me that the Board denied the company or the pseudo plant union due process of law by excluding such proffered testimony. The repeated offers to bring in all the working women and girls to testify individually merely illustrates what appears to me to have been the tendency of the company's proffers to divert the trial from the charges. There happened to be only twelve hundred of the workers in the particular plant, but in shops that employ many thousands it is obvious that the lifetime of an Examiner would be too short. The offers to prove what the electioneering conduct of the established garment workers union had been before the company herded its workers together into the company union is of the same nature. That there was fear of the union seems to me as irrelevant to the charges against the company as is the history of the origin of such fear. As to that also, the history of the union is too long, and the lifetime of an Examiner would be too short. It seems to me that the inquiry demanded in the proposed fields of controversy would only protract and distract. It could not illuminate. Employers may not commit the unfair labor practices such as charged in this case to prevent union electioneering even by labor unions that have a bad record behind them. There was no showing here, as in the Indiana & Michigan Electric Company case (318 U. S. 9), that the labor union was resorting to violence and acts of terrorism adapted and intended to affect the trial and inquiry of the Board then pending. Nor does the offer to prove that the supervising agents of the company, who effected the organization of its plant union, had the same rank in the Donnelly company as some of the members of the established union have in other companies,

4397 appear to me to be relevant. The question whether they acted for management and bound the company by their acts was controlling. There were also offers to prove that the labor union claimed and promised better wages and working conditions and that the representation was false in that the company under its system did and would do better by its workers than union shops. I think the issue so tendered is not justiciable, either by the Board or by the courts. The question of sanctioning or suppressing labor unions is political and is debated by millions. To the extent that it is settled by the Labor Acts, the courts are bound. It is not within the power of the courts, by taking one side or the other at the instance of a private litigant, to settle whether the patriarchal or the labor union system does better for working people in the garment making industry, or in any or all of the industries. The process of election under secret ballot is alone appropriate to that quarrel.

Neither do I find evidence of bias or prejudice to disqualify the Examiner in this case. He seems to me to have ruled in accord with the dictates of his conscience and to have endeavored, against great resistance, to keep the trial within a rational relation to the charges to be tried. The multiplied offers to enter into unlimited remote controversial fields of inquiry suggested means to prolong the hearing to the point of frustration, but not, as it seems to me, to a fairer decision on the charges being tried.

In my opinion the order based upon the Board's findings and conclusions (reported 50 N. L. R. B. 241) should be enforced as prayed.

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, PETITIONER

v.

DONNELLY GARMENT COMPANY, DONNELLY GARMENT WORKERS' UNION, AND INTERNATIONAL LADIES GARMENT WORKERS' UNION

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

The Solicitor General, on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the decree of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit entered on October 29, 1945 (XIII 71),[1] setting aside and refusing to enforce an order issued by the Board against Donnelly Garment Company.

[1] The volume of the printed record which contains the pleadings, the Board's decisions and orders, and the petition to review and answers is referred to as "A," and the other volumes of the printed record are referred to by the Roman and Arabic numbers indicating the volume and the page thereof.

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinions of the circuit court of appeals (XIII 7–64) are reported in 151 F. (2d) 854. Prior opinions of the circuit court of appeals in this case are reported in 7 L. R. R. Man. 560 and in 123 F. (2d) 215. The findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order of the National Labor Relations Board (A 618–622, X 3837–3898) are reported in 50 N. L. R. B. 241. A prior decision of the National Labor Relations Board in this case (A 552–617) is reported in 21 N. L. R. B. 164.

JURISDICTION

The decree of the circuit court of appeals was entered on October 29, 1945. (XIII 71). The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, and Section 10 (e) and (f) of the National Labor Relations Act.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. (a) Where an employer expresses opposition to a nationally affiliated labor organization and through his supervisory staff sets up and thereafter takes a leading part in the administration of a plant union for the declared purpose of preventing the nationally affiliated labor organization from organizing his employees, and grants the plant union a closed-shop agreement and financial and other support, must the Board consider testimony of employees that they freely formed and joined such plant union and knew of no interference with, domination or support of it by the employer, when deciding the question whether the employer has, in fact, interfered with, dominated and supported the plant union in violation of Section 8 (2) of the National Labor Relations Act.

(b) Is the trial examiner who presides at a hearing on remand for the purpose of receiving such employee testimony biased and incapable of giving such testimony proper consideration merely because at the first hearing he expressed his opinion that such testimony was immaterial?

2. Whether the Board denied the employer and plant union due process of law in excluding the following evidence as immaterial to the issue of employer domination and support of a labor organization:

(a) Evidence as to whether contracts made by a nationally affiliated labor organization with other employers contain provisions as beneficial to employees as the provisions contained in a contract made by the employer with an alleged company-dominated labor organization;

(b) Evidence that employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the supervisory employees who were active in the formation and administration of the alleged company-dominated labor organization were eligible for membership in nationally affiliated labor organizations.

3. Whether the Board denied the employer and plant union due process of law in excluding evidence of misconduct of a nationally affiliated labor organization occurring at plants other than the employer's as immaterial to a determination by the Board of whether the employer has engaged in unfair labor practices and to a consideration of whether the Board should prosecute its complaint on charges filed by such nationally affiliated labor organization.

4. Whether the employer and plant union were denied due process of law by the Board's refusal to receive at a hearing on remand the following evidence which was not offered at the first hearing and was not alleged to be newly discovered or unavailable at the first hearing:

(a) Evidence regarding the eligibility to membership in a nationally affiliated labor organization of employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the supervisory employees who were active in the formation and administration of an alleged company-dominated labor organization;

(b) Evidence of the non-discriminatory character of the discharges and lay-offs of certain employees prior to the passage of the Act, where all evidence on such subject offered by the employer at the original hearing was received and the Board made no finding as to whether the discharges and lay-offs were, in fact, discriminatory.

Another question, which was passed upon by the concurring and dissenting judges below and which we think should be decided by this Court if it grants certiorari, is:

5. Is there substantial evidence in the record to support the Board's findings that the employer engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act, and is the Board's order proper?

STATUTE INVOLVED

The pertinent provisions of the National Labor Relations Act are set forth in the Appendix, infra, pp. 52–54.

STATEMENT

PROCEEDINGS CULMINATING IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS' DECISION AND REMAND ORDER OF NOVEMBER 6, 1941

This case was originally before the circuit court of appeals in 1940 and 1941 upon the petitions of Donnelly Garment Company, herein called the Company, and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, herein called the D. G. W. U., to review and set aside and upon the request of the Board to enforce an order of the Board dated March 6, 1940 (A 552–617). At the hearing in that case, the trial examiner (1) had refused to permit the Company and the D. G. W. U. to call to the witness stand 1,200 employees of the Company whom the Company alleged would each testify that he had joined the D. G. W. U. of his own free will, that the employees had voluntarily formed the D. G. W. U., and that such union was at all times free from employer influence, domination and support, although the trial examiner did receive such testimony from 9 employees and admitted excerpts from the record in another case containing such testimony from 12 other witnesses (I 193–194, 214–215, II 609, 612–626, 651–653, 655, 660–661, 664, 669, 704, 704a, 704p–707, 718a–718c, 718r, 718s, IV 1223, 1226, 1228–1229, 1234, 1336v, 1336ee, 1336ii, 1336pp, 1336ccc, 1336ooo, 1336xxx, 1336cccc, VI 1752–1753); and (2) had also excluded evidence that the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, herein called the I. L. G. W. U., before and at the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U. had conspired to force the Company to sign a closed-shop contract with it by threatening and later carrying out a secondary boycott against the Company and by threatening to call a strike and to engage in conduct at the Company's plant in Kansas City similar to that engaged in by it at other garment factories in Kansas City where pickets forcibly prevented employees from going to work (II 626–627, 660–661, 705, III 758, VI 1752–1753). The trial examiner also excluded evidence relating to labor agreements made by the I. L. G. W. U. with other employers (discussed infra, pp. 25–26), and other evidence not material to the issues here presented. The Board in that case upheld the trial examiner in excluding all such evidence and in rejecting offers of proof which were made as to some of it (A 560–561).[2]

On November 6, 1941, the court below handed down its decision in that case, denying enforcement of the Board's order and remanding the case to the Board for further proceedings (123 F. (2d) 215). The court below ruled (123 F. (2d) at 222–225) that the statements and rulings of the trial examiner, although in some respects

[2] During the pendency of the petitions for review, the Company and the D. G. W. U. filed with the court below applications for leave to adduce (1) evidence to show that they had been denied due process because of bias and prejudice on the part of the Board and its subordinates and collusion by them with the I. L. G. W. U., and (2) evidence going to the merits of the case, which had been excluded by the trial examiner and which they contended was competent and material. On November 7, 1940, after oral argument on the applications, the court below handed down its opinion (7 L. R. R. Man. 560), one judge dissenting, holding that the showing made by the Company and the D. G. W. U. as to the alleged bias and collusion was insufficient to invoke any action of the court, and denying the applications in that regard. It also denied the applications to adduce the excluded evidence allegedly going to the merits of the case but did so without prejudice to a renewal of such applications when the case should be finally submitted to the court (see 123 F. (2d) 215, 219–220). On May 21, 1941, oral argument was had on all issues except that which had been decided in the court's opinion of November 7, 1940. Thereafter, pursuant to a letter from Presiding Judge Archibald K. Gardner, dated July 24, 1941, requesting additional briefs on the bias and collusion question decided by the court on November 7, 1940, the parties filed additional briefs and reargued said question before the court on September 6, 1941.

erroneous, did not establish that he was biased, that the trial examiner and the Board had properly confined the issues to those tendered in the complaint by refusing to try the I. L. G. W. U. for the alleged conspiracy, but had denied the Company and the D. G. W. U. due process by excluding the evidence of employees, in accordance with an offer of proof, that they formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and did not know of any interference with, domination or support of the D. G. W. U. by the Company. The court required the Board to vacate its findings, conclusions and order and to accord the Company and the D. G. W. U. "an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected by the Trial Examiner; and to receive and consider such evidence together with all other competent and material evidence in the record before making new findings and a new order" (ibid. at 225).

BOARD PROCEEDINGS AND FINDINGS SUBSEQUENT TO THE REMAND ORDER

Pursuant to the court's mandate, the Board vacated its findings, conclusions and order of March 6, 1940, and directed a further hearing for the purpose of taking additional evidence in accordance with the opinion of the court below (X 3785–3786). The same trial examiner who presided at the previous hearing again presided

(I 1, VII 2057).[3] He received the testimony of 11 of the 1,200 employees named in the offer of proof that they had voluntarily formed the D. G. W. U., that they had joined it of their own free will, and that they knew of no interference with, domination or support of such union by the Company (VIII 2588, 2599–2600, 2631–2632, 2722–2723, 2772, 2858–2859, 2914–2915, IX 3006, 3049–3050, 3078, 3123, 3218). The trial examiner then ruled that further evidence of the same nature would be cumulative (X 3250–3251, 3253–3255, 3272–3273). The Board thereupon called several of the 1,200 employees, who testified contrary to the offer of proof (III 746, 750, 751, 753, IX 3274, 3282, 3426–3434, 3467, 3469, 3471, 3474, X 3497–3498, 3528, 3550–3554, 3558–3559, 3618, 3661, 3665–3670, 3691–3693). Thereafter the trial examiner issued his intermediate report in which he found "upon the entire record" that the Company had engaged in unfair labor practices in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act and recommended that the Company cease and desist from such unfair labor practices and take certain affirmative action which he found would effectuate the policies of the Act (X 3837–3898).

[3] The Board overruled the Company's application for designation of another trial examiner, pointing out that all the grounds urged by the Company as showing bias and prejudice had been presented to the circuit court of appeals, which ruled them insufficient to establish disqualification (A 498–501).

On June 9, 1943, the Board issued its decision and order sustaining the rulings of the trial examiner in regard to the admission and rejection of evidence and approving and adopting, with exceptions not here material, his findings, conclusions, and recommendations (A 618-622). In regard to the evidence received pursuant to offers of proof at the first hearing, the Board stated that it had carefully considered all such evidence but "that the testimony in question does not overcome more positive evidence in the record that the [Company] committed acts of interference and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which subjected the organization to the [Company's] domination and which removed from the employees' selection of the D. G. W. U. the complete freedom of choice which the Act contemplates." The Board added: "Since we find the evidence here adduced totally unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U., we are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case." (A 619.) The pertinent facts as found by the Board and as shown by the evidence may be summarized as follows:[1]

[1] In the following statement the references preceding the semicolon are to the pages of the record where the findings in

Beginning with the first attempt of the I. L. G. W. U. in 1934 to organize the Company's employees and continuously thereafter the Company engaged in a course of conduct designed to prevent its employees from joining that labor organization. The Company's production manager, personnel manager, and other supervisory employees attended meetings of the I. L. G. W. U. in a group and thereafter questioned individual employees about their interest in the I. L. G. W. U., disparaged it, and warned them against joining that organization, even threatening discharge of employees who joined (X 3859–3860; I 44, III 1033–1036, 1044, 1052–1055, 1058, 1063, 1066–1070, 1073–1074, 1076, 1079–1090, 1100–1108, IV 1113, 1120g, 1141, 1150–1151, 1323, 1325–1326, 1329–1331. A substantial number of the employees who joined the I. L. G. W. U. were laid off or discharged shortly after joining (X 3860–3861; III 1036–1044, 1046–1055, IV 1141, 1153, 1155–1156, 1316–1317). All of the other employees who were known to have joined the I. L. G. W. U. were transferred from the main factory to a temporary branch and thereafter laid off prior to June 1935 (X 3861; III 1062–1066, 1073–1077, IV 1120uu–1120vv, 1126v–1129, 1130d–1130e, 1132, 1135–1136, 1156b–1157, 1324–1325, 1327, 1333– 1334). The Board expressly refused to make any finding as to whether the discharges and lay-offs were discriminatory (X 3860, n. 23). However, it did find, on the testimony of some of the employees, that as a result of the sequence of events above-related, employees became afraid to join, admit their membership in, or discuss the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3861; III 1044–1046, 1047–1048, 1080–1081, 1141–1142).

In the early part of 1935, two of the Company's supervisory employees formed an organization called the Loyalty League, whose purpose was to promote loyalty to the Company and to oppose the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3861–3862; I 181, 304–305, III 732–733, 798d–798e, 1078, V 1620, IX 3030–3032, 3233, 3336, 3439, X 3572, 3644–3645, 3650). All employees, both supervisory and non-supervisory, except members of the I. L. G. W. U., were admitted to membership and became members (X 3860–3863; I 308, II 407, 429, 431, 533, 551, III 798e, 1071, 1078–1079, 1091, 1097, 1108, IV 1113, 1117). After the Act became effective, supervisory employees continued to solicit new employees to join the Loyalty League (X 3864; VIII 2607–2608).

Following a newspaper announcement in February 1937 that the I. L. G. W. U. was planning a second campaign, the Company secured from all but three of its employees a written pledge not to join any labor organization (X 3866; I 354–354a, II 377–378, V 1354–1356, 1623, 1649, VII 2432–2433, IX 3335, X 3642–3644). The pledge was handed from operator to operator while they were at work (X 3864–3865; I 311–312, 354–354a, 354p–355, III 1019, IV 1294–1300, VIII 2578, 2609–2615, 2637–2638, 2725, X 3665). One of the three girls who went through the plant circulating the pledge did so at the direction of the office manager who in turn had been told by Mrs. Reed, the Company's president, that she wanted all employees to sign it (X 3865–3866; II 513–514, X 3640–3644, 3657–3658, IV 1299–1300).

On March 18, 1937, Mrs. Reed made a talk at a meeting sponsored by the Loyalty League and held during working hours (X 3867–3868; I 44d–46, 48–49, 147, 308–310, 334w, 345, 354b, II 534, V 1621, IX 3328–3329, 3438, 3457–3458, X 3575, 3666), in which she expressed her pleasure at having received the pledge not to join any labor organization, spoke of threats of violence that the I. L. G. W. U. was alleged to have made against the employees of the Company and promised to protect the employees from such violence (X 3867–3868; I 48–49, 147–148, 310, 354b–354c, II 588, III 1029–1030, VIII 2620, X 3575–3576, 3666). Her remarks made it plain that the Company's attitude toward unionization had not changed and that membership of any of the employees in the I. L. G. W. U. was not to be tolerated (X 3869; I 310, 354c, III 1029, V 1362a, IX 3332, 3413, 3438, 3459, X 3666).

On April 23, 1937, the day following an announcement in a local newspaper that employee Hull had been named as a delegate to a convention of the I. L. G. W. U., employees, in the presence of and with the acquiescence of supervisors, carried on a demonstration against Hull as she attempted to work and informed the Company's employment manager that they would not work while Hull remained (X 3869–3870; II 535–537, 541–524d, III 1015, IV 1339–1344, V 1346–1350, IX 3012–3015, 3436–3437, 3479–3480, X 3517). The employment manager, instead of maintaining discipline and insisting upon the demonstrators returning to their work, sent Hull home (X 3870; II 535–536, V 1343, 1356–1357, X 3517, 3573). Under similar circumstances and on the same day the Company sent home another employee, Sigler, who had appeared at work wearing an I. L. G. W. U. pin (X 3870–3871; I 70–72, 315–325, II 444–445, 497–499, 537–538, III 801–807, X 3666–3667). The Company thus approved and encouraged the demonstrations and took advantage of them to show its hostility to the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3871).

Shortly after the March 18 meeting at which Mrs. Reed addressed the employees, two representatives of management, Todd and Atherton, both of whom were officers of the Loyalty League, and another employee, Ormsby, hired an attorney to advise the employees in opposing the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3872; I 38–39, 176, II 555–556, 558–559, Tr. 318). Upon the attorney's advice that the best way to combat the I. L. G. W. U. was to form a plant union, Todd called a meeting of the employees during working hours on April 27 for that purpose (X 3872; I 328c–328d, II 558–559, V 1365–1366, IX 3312–3314, 3430, 3470–3471, 3457–3458, X 3530, 3541, 3620, 3667).

The organizational meeting of the plant union was planned and organized by, and was under the complete control of, the Company's representatives (X 3875). Employees were notified by their instructors, whom the Board found to be supervisors (see infra, pp. 20–21), to attend—the instructors having in turn been notified by the Company's telephone operator, or by Mrs. Wherry, factory manager—and the meeting was attended by supervisory employees accompanied by the non-supervisory employees under them (X 3872; I 328c–328d, 354c–354d, II 378ee, 704g, V 1364e, 1374d, VIII 2692, 2911–2913, 2995, IX 3276, 3309–3312, 3315–3316, 3397–3399, 3430–3434, 3457, 3467, 3479, X 3551, 3619–3621, 3667). After listening to speeches by Todd and the attorney, who had been invited to address the meeting, the employees, without any discussion, voted unanimously to form the D. G. W. U. (X 3873–3874; III 822–826). Before the meeting adjourned, about 1300 charter membership cards previously prepared were distributed, signed, and collected; by-laws previously prepared were adopted without alteration; and a general chairman, Todd, and 8 group chairmen were nominated by a committee appointed by Todd and were unanimously elected to serve as officers and representatives (X 3874–3875; I 80b–80c, 176–177, 328h–330, III 826–830, X 3553, 3667). The purpose of the organization, as stated in its by-laws, was, inter alia, "the protection of employees and members of this Union from coercion, intimidation, violence or threats of violence in order to force them to join unions organized and dominated by outsiders not employees in this plant" (X 3874; III 798f).

Through the membership and activities of supervisory employees in the D. G. W. U., the Company continued its control and direction of the D. G. W. U. (X 3878). In addition to Todd, the general chairman, other employees, including instructors and thread girls, whom the Board found to be representatives of management (see infra, pp. 20–21), regularly attended, notified employees under them to attend, and took an active part in subsequent meetings of the D. G. W. U. (X 3875–3877; I 99, 131, 136, II 421, 424–424b, 428–429, 510, 715–716, 718d–718e, III 743–755, 830, 854, 865–866, 868–870, 875–882, 887, 891–894, 897–900, 909–911, 1003–1005, 1007, 1011, 1032, 1091, V 1349–1350, VII 2175, 2255–2257, VIII 2961–2962, 2671–2672, 2676–2677, 2680, 2689, 2733, 2911–2912, 2914, 2949–2953, IX 3157, 3316, 3426–3427, 3435–3436, 3445–3446, 3450, X 3644, 3649– 3650, 3671, 3673, 3675). Thus, at the 1938 election of officers, five thread girls nominated or seconded the nomination of the two nominating committees, and both committees were unanimously elected (X 3876; III 875–876, 1003–1004, VIII 2680, 2689, 2733, 2911–2912, 2949). Moreover, upon the election of the nominees, which was by standing vote, Todd called upon two instructors to give their opinions as to which slate received the larger vote (X 3877; III 881–882, 1003–1005, VIII 2953). Todd was the candidate for chairman on both slates (X 3877; III 879). Although upon several occasions employees questioned the right of some of these representatives of management to be members of or to attend and participate in meetings of the D. G. W. U. and expressed the view that the presence of such persons at meetings precluded the employees from speaking freely of their complaints, Todd assured them that all employees except the executives of the Company and the head of the personnel department were properly eligible for membership and might participate in the activities of the D. G. W. U. (X 3877–3878, III 926–927, IX 3320–3324, 3411–3413, X 3554).

Since some 600 to 800 of the employees are paid on a piece-work basis, the setting of piece-work rates determines the wage rate of the majority of the employees and is concededly the most important subject of bargaining (X 3881; I 114, II 490, V 1374f–1375, VII 2173, 2186). Todd and the group chairman appointed as the D. G. W. U.'s committee to deal with piece-work rates Todd, Nichols and Spalito (X 3881, III, 923). Nichols is the executive of the Company who has full power to set piece-work rates on behalf of the Company and Spalito is her assistant (X 3881; II 417–418, 718f, III 923, 1007, 1108–1109, V 1374f–1375, VII 2144–2148, 2158, 2234–2239, 2400). Thus, the same persons who set rates on behalf of the Company in the first instance are also representatives of the D. G. W. U. for the purpose of protesting and negotiating in regard to those rates in behalf of the D. G. W. U. and the employees (X 3881).

In a single day, May 27, 1937, a contract providing for a closed shop was presented by the D. G. W. U. to the Company, was modified at the suggestion of the Company to include, inter alia, a provision that no employee should serve on the bargaining committee of the D. G. W. U. unless he had been in the employ of the Company for at least a year, and was agreed upon and signed by the parties (X 3879; I 84–86, 89–90, 198, III 807–811, 918–922, VII 2095–2098, 2104–2105, 2376, 2378–2379). In June, after the I. L. G. W. U. had publicly announced its intention to obtain a minimum weekly wage of $16, Todd recommended to the group chairman, and they decided, that in order to improve upon the

I. L. G. W. U.'s accomplishments, the D. G. W. U. should demand a minimum of $16.50 for piece-work operators (X 3880; I 118, III 929). The Company granted this demand and entered into a supplemental wage agreement with the D. G. W. U. on June 22 (X 3879–3880; II 462, III 812–821, VII 2110–2112, 2379–2386). In August or September 1937, the Company granted the D. G. W. U.'s request for a checkoff of monthly dues of 25¢ and each employee thereafter signed a card prepared by the Company authorizing such checkoff (X 3880; I 224, 226–227, 233–234, 259, 262, 274a–274b, III 799, VII 2112–2113, 2387–2388). The original closed-shop agreement, the supplemental wage agreement, and the checkoff agreement continued in effect without change up to the date of the hearing before the Board (X 3880; I 126–127, 271, 277–278, III 947–948, VII 2112). By signing a closed-shop and checkoff agreement with an organization in which it controlled determination of piece rates, the Company forced its employees to become members of an impotent bargaining agency (X 3882).

The Company in various ways lent financial support to the D. G. W. U. It permitted the organizational meeting as well as 3 or 4 other membership meetings to be held during working hours (X 3882; IX 3314–3315, 3410–3411, 3414, 3434, 3449, 3450, 3458, X 3669–3670). It paid the employees for their time thus lost from work as well as for time lost in attending committee meetings and transacting other D. G. W. U. business during working hours (X 3884; I 127–128, 166, IX 3427–3429, 3447, 3466–3467, X 3558–3559, 3603–3604, 3606–3609, 3618). It furnished Todd with a desk at which she carried on her union business and permitted her to keep union records in a file belonging to the Company (X 3884–3885; I 35–36, 133, 262–263, III 830–831, 833, 870, 941). It permitted its interdepartmental telephones and memoranda, its messenger service, its bulletin boards, its mimeographing and dittoing machines and its typewriters to be used by the D. G. W. U. (X 3883–3884, 3885; I 62–62a, 107–108, 128–129, 262; II 378ee, III 869, 900, 936, 704g, V 1364e, 1374d, VIII 2580, 2897, 2968, IX 3152–3153, 3276, 3342, 3434, 3480, X 3558, 3671). Although the Company permitted Todd to, and she did devote a substantial amount of her normal working time to transacting D. G. W. U. business, the Company continued to pay her full regular salary (X 3884; I 31–32, 127–128, 166, III 1006, 1010, 1010b, 1010c, 1010e, 1010h).

The instructors whose activities in the D. G. W. U. have been described (supra, pp. 15–17), serve in all respects as foremen, each being in charge of a section of 40 operators whom they supervise, assigning work among the operators and transmitting the management's directions (X 3850–3853; I 18, 312–313, II 391–392, 505–506, III 1109, 734c, 734g, VII 2253, VIII 2957–2960, 2963–2965, IX 3104, 3325–3326, 3434, 3464, 3469, X 3482–3483). They discipline the operators under them, determine who is to be laid off during slack periods, and keep the management informed as to whether an operator is a desirable employee, her capacity for and her attitude toward work (X 3851–3852; I 302, 1058–1061, 1092–1093, 1104, IV 1120i, 1120u–1120v, 1120z–1120bb, 1120dd–1120ee, 1120mm, V 1375, VIII 2962, IX 3326–3328, 3464; X 3482–3483, 3517–3518, 3554–3556, 3673). The instructors are assisted in all aspects of their work by the thread girls who assume charge whenever the instructors are absent and who serve in all respects as assistant foremen (X 3851, 3853; I 18, III 1109, IX 3153, 3326, 3435).

Todd not only had duties of a supervisory nature but also entirely aside from her supervisory status, occupied a close and confidential position with the Company and in such position was acting for and on behalf of the Company. She was a nurse by profession and through acquaintance with Mrs. Reed as a nurse, had secured a job with the Company in 1926 (X 3855; I 14, 142a, VII 2277–2278). The president of the Company's bank knew her as "a kind of all round man" for the Company (X 3856; II 718w). She had in the past been an instructor, a thread girl, and assistant to the production engineer (X 3855–3856;

I 19–23, 30–31, II 718w, VII 2116, 2279, IX 3414). Todd apparently had no well-defined duties at the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U. and thereafter, but was assigned a desk, and, among other duties, was charged with the responsibility of keeping the different sections of the plant supplied with materials necessary to keep production going (X 3855; I 26–28, VII 2116–2117, 2166–2167, VIII 2726, 2830). These duties and others required her frequently to move throughout the plant and interview the instructors and thread girls (X 3856; I 29). Her status was such that the telephone operator readily announced over the interdepartmental telephones meetings called by Todd, and instructors readily took directions from her as to the form in which they were to turn in time slips for employees absent on D. G. W. U. business (X 3857; V 1374d, IX 3429, cf. X 3487). Moreover, when Todd, in the presence of Production Manager Baty, and Personnel Manager Hyde, purported to explain the Company's employment policy to employee Sigler who was sent home following a demonstration against her for wearing an I. L. G. W. U. pin, they acquiesced in Todd's statements and assumption of authority, thereby permitting her to appear as a representative of management in the eyes of the employees (X 3856–3857; I 80, III 801–807). The Board found that Todd, the instructors, thread girls and other supervisory employees were acting for and on behalf of the Company in their activities in forming, joining, and participating in the administration of the D. G. W. U. (X 3878, 3886–3887).

Upon the basis of the foregoing facts, the Board concluded that the Company had dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contributed support to it in violation of Section 8 (2) of the Act; had encouraged and condoned the demonstrations of April 23, 1937, against employee Hull and laid her off, and had entered into a closed-shop contract with the D. G. W. U., in violation of Section 8 (3) of the Act; and by these and other acts had violated Section 8 (1) of the Act (X 3866, 3869, 3871, 3886–3890). The Board ordered the Company to cease and desist from dominating and interfering with, or contributing support to the D. G. W. U.; from giving effect to any contract with it; from discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U. or any other labor organization; from dominating, controlling, and using the Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain and coerce its employees; and from in any other manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees (A 621). Affirmatively, it ordered the Company to withdraw recognition from and completely to disestablish the D. G. W. U.; to reimburse its former and present employees for all dues and assessments which it had deducted from their wages on behalf of the D. G. W. U.; and to post appropriate notices (A 621–622).

THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS' DECISION OF OCTOBER 29, 1945

Thereafter the Company filed its petition in the court below to review and set aside the Board's order (A 1–360). The Board answered and requested enforcement of its order (A 361–365). The D. G. W. U. and the I. L. G. W. U. were permitted to intervene and file briefs (A 368–369). On October 29, 1945, the court below handed down its opinion (one judge concurring and another dissenting) and entered its decree denying enforcement of any part of the Board's order and setting aside the entire order for want of due process because the Board had failed to consider the conclusionary testimony received pursuant to the court's remand order of November 6, 1941; because the same trial examiner who presided at the first hearing again presided at the hearing on remand; and because the Board had refused to receive at the hearing on remand certain evidence which the court deemed material (XIII 7–71).

The rejected evidence which the court below deemed material consisted of (1) evidence rejected by the trial examiner at the first hearing as well as at the hearing on remand, the exclusion of which was not mentioned in the court's opinion of November 6, 1941; (2) evidence rejected at both hearings, the exclusion of which was approved by the court in its opinion of November 6, 1941; and (3) evidence not within the scope of the remand order by reason of the fact that all such evidence offered at the original hearing was received.

The evidence in the first category consisted of contracts made by the I. L. G. W. U. with other employers. In its answer to the complaint the Company alleged that its contract with the I. L. G. W. U. "provides for higher wages and more favorable conditions of employment than are contained in any contract which the" I. L. G. W. U. "has entered into with the other garment manufacturers in this part of the country" (A 389–390). The trial examiner refused to receive the I. L. G. W. U. contracts stating that so many factors entered into the wage rates and conditions of employment reflected in other contracts as to render any comparison useless without an investigation into all those other factors (I 201–207, 217, 238b, II 378hh–380, VI 1653–1676). The court in remanding the case to the Board made no mention of the admissibility of such contracts. When the issue arose during the hearing on the remand (VII 2507–2520), the trial examiner rejected a new offer of proof respecting the contracts (X 3789) ruling such evidence beyond the scope of the remand and also immaterial (IX 3257) but stating that he would receive testimony of any employee that she knew of such contracts and that her dissatisfaction with their terms led her to prefer the D. G. W. U. (VII 2514–2518, VIII 2521). He did receive such testimony (VIII 2593–2594, 2929–2931, IX 3080).

The evidence included in the second category was offered in support of allegations made in the Company's answer to the Board's complaint, said answer alleging that the I. L. G. W. U. was engaged in a conspiracy to force the Company by fraud and violence to sign a closed-shop agreement with the I. L. G. W. U. (A 387–394). At the first hearing, although the Company and the D. G. W. U. had sought to introduce evidence that the I. L. G. W. U. had engaged in acts of violence at plants other than the Company's for the purpose of showing that the I. L. G. W. U. was attempting to use the Board's processes to injure the Company and for the purpose of showing the employees' reasons for forming or joining the D. G. W. U., the trial examiner ruled that the I. L. G. W. U. was not on trial and refused to receive testimony concerning violence by the I. L. G. W. U. unless the witness had personally encountered violence or had been personally threatened with violence (I [illegible] 190, 219–223, 334k–334l, 344q–344y, 366–367, II 553, 614, 627, 660–661, 700–703, 705, 718y, 718bb, 718aa, Tr. 69, 111, 114, 118, 2046–2047, 2468, 2583). The Company filed an offer of proof (II 704p, III 742d, IV 1156b–1306, V 1409–1619) which the trial examiner rejected (VI 1752). In its opinion of November 6, 1941, the court below upheld the trial examiner's refusal to "try" the I. L. G. W. U. "for alleged conspiracy" (123 F. 2d 215, 225). At the hearing on remand, the trial examiner nevertheless received all evidence offered through Mrs. Reed as to all she knew of any violence or threatened violence by the I. L. G. W. U. (VII 2077–2092, 2151–2156), as well as all evidence offered as to what the employees had seen, read, or heard regarding such violence by the I. L. G. W. U. which had occurred within a reasonable period prior to the formation of the D. G. W. U.—such evidence being considered relevant to show the employees' reasons for forming or joining the D. G. W. U. (VIII 2566–2568, 2624–2626, 2711–2713, 2768–2771, 2788, 2848–2851, 2915–2917, 3003–3006, 3046–3049, 3078–3081, 3120–3121, 3169–3171, 4101–4103, 4125–4169, 4173–4175). The reasonable period was fixed as 6 months at the suggestion of counsel for the Company (VIII 2788, 2805–2809). The trial examiner considered irrelevant and refused to receive evidence as to whether any of the alleged violence at other plants actually occurred (VII 2512–2513, VIII 2540–2542, 2554–2555). There was no offer at either of the two hearings to show any fraud or violence at the Company's plant. It is this evidence of misconduct against other employers which the court below now rules material.

The evidence included in the third category—evidence which was either not offered or which was offered and received at the first hearing—related (1) to whether employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the supervisory employees who were active in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. were eligible to membership in the I. L. G. W. U.; and (2) to whether certain union members discharged or laid off prior to the passage of the Act were discriminatorily discharged or laid off. No evidence was offered at the first hearing regarding the eligibility of any employees to membership in the I. L. G. W. U. At the hearing on remand the trial examiner at first permitted counsel for the Company to call to the stand and question an official of the I. L. G. W. U. respecting the eligibility of instructors to membership in that union (VII 2507, VIII 2523). When she testified that they were ineligible and counsel for the Company indicated that he intended to prove that they were eligible by proving numerous instances of their admission (VIII 2523, 2537–2539), the trial examiner struck all testimony he had received and refused to receive further such evidence for the reason that it was not within the scope of the remand order and for the additional reason that it was immaterial to any issue in the case (VII 2508–2510; VIII 2559, 2564, 2788, IX 3257, X 3787–3794). With respect to the discharges and layoffs prior to the Act, during the first hearing excerpts from the transcript of a hearing before the National Industrial Recovery Board which tried charges that the Company had discriminatorily discharged or laid off certain employees and also excerpts from the transcript of a hearing in an injunction suit before Federal District Judge Miller (infra, pp. [redacted]5; 44) were introduced in evidence pursuant to a stipulation of the parties, and all other evidence offered by the Company to show that the discharges and lay-offs were nondiscriminatory was received (I 44a, 273, II 389–390c, 394–395, 399–401, 539, 550a, 707, III 728–729, 740, 1032–1110a, IV 1112cc–1112dd, 1120n, 1120o–1120w, 1120z, 1120aa–1120ee, 1316–1318, Tr. 1891, 1964, 1967–1968, 1978, 2815). This matter, not being within the scope of the remand order, the trial examiner, during the hearing on remand, refused to receive any further testimony on that matter (VIII 2639, X 3783, 3792–3793), except the testimony of Mrs. Reed, the Company's president, who by reason of illness had been unable to testify at the first hearing (VII 2064–2065, 2069–2074, 2148–2151). There was no claim that any of the other evidence offered was newly discovered or otherwise unavailable at the first hearing. In its decision, the Board expressly stated that it made no finding whether the discharges and lay-offs were, in fact, discriminatory (X 3860, n. 25).

The court below suggested in its opinion that the Board apply to this Court for a writ of certiorari to review the due process questions involved (XIII 51).

SPECIFICATION OF ERRORS TO BE URGED

The court below erred:

1. (a) In holding that the Board in dealing with the question of company domination of the D. G. W. U. failed to consider testimony of the Company's employees that they freely formed and joined the D. G. W. U. and knew of no interference with, domination or support of that union by the Company.

(b) In holding that the Board was required to consider such evidence.

(c) In holding that the trial examiner who presided at the hearing on remand was biased and incapable of giving such testimony proper consideration because he had expressed his opinion at the first hearing that such testimony was immaterial.

2. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive in evidence labor agreements made by the I. L. G. W. U. with other employers.

3. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence as to whether or not the I. L. G. W. U. admitted to membership employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the Company's employees whom the Board found to be supervisory.

4. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence that the I. L. G. W. U. at and prior to the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U. had used fraud and violence at the plants of other employers to compel their employees to join the I. L. G. W. U.

5. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence as to whether the Company, prior to the passage of the Act, had discriminatorily discharged or laid off certain members of the I. L. G. W. U.

6. In setting aside and refusing to enforce the Board's order.

7. If the Board improperly failed to consider any evidence, in failing to remand to the Board such portions of the case as were affected by such failure of the Board.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

The statement of facts, which, for reasons of clarity, we have set forth in greater detail than is customary in a petition for certiorari, shows that in 1935 and thereafter the Company flagrantly violated the National Labor Relations Act in a number of respects. The court below has twice set aside the Board's finding to this effect on procedural and evidentiary grounds which we believe are utterly without substance, and which, as we shall show, conflict with decisions in other circuits. After more than seven years of litigation before the Board and in the courts,[5] we think that the miscarriage of justice which has thus far enabled the Company to disregard the Act with impunity is sufficient to call for the exercise of this Court's supervisory powers. Indeed the court below itself recognized the importance of the issues presented and their appropriateness for review by this Court on certiorari, for it stated, "In order to resolve this controversy over the question of due process, we think that the Board would be entirely justified in applying for certiorari. With that thought in mind, we have tried to give a fairly complete statement of the issues. The questions presented are of importance to the Board in the administration of the Act. They are also of importance to the Company, to the International, to the public, and particularly to the employees whose rights are involved." (XIII 51.)

[5] The original charge in this case was filed on August 9, 1938 (A 391, 553). The complaint was issued upon amended charges filed on April 6, 1939 (A 375–376) and the original hearing was held between June 5 and July 15, 1939 (X 3838). The typewritten transcript of testimony taken at that hearing covered over 3100 pages (Tr. 1–3116) and the exhibits another 2600 pages (fol. 4361–5990) including more than 750 typewritten pages of excerpts from the transcripts of hearings held in 1935 before the National Industrial Recovery Board and of hearings held in 1939 before a federal district court (fol. 5114–5895) in the injunction suit (supra, p. 29). The Board's original decision was dated March 6, 1940 (A 552–617). The hearing on remand pursuant to the circuit court of appeals' decision of November 6, 1941, was held between July 6 and September 17, 1942 (X 3846). The transcript of that hearing covered over 3800 typewritten pages of testimony (Tr. 3117–6992) and another 140 pages of exhibits (fol. 6994–7139). The total unprinted record in this case is more than 10,000 pages long.

1. Despite the holding of the court below that the Board did not consider the employees' testimony as to the D. G. W. U.'s being their uninfluenced choice (XIII 40-44), this was not the case. The court must have overlooked the Board's statement that it "carefully considered all such evidence" but found that it did not overcome more positive evidence in the record that the respondent committed acts of interference and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which subjected that organization to the respondent's domination and which removed from the employees' selection of the D. G. W. U. the complete freedom of choice which the Act contemplates" (A 619). The Board found, in the circumstances of this case, that such testimony was "unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U." It is true that the Board expressed its view, "derived from" its "experience in administration of the Act", that such evidence is immaterial to issues like those in this case. Nevertheless, the Board subsequently found that "A consideration of all the evidence" convinced it "that the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U." (Ibid.) Accordingly, it is clear that the Board did consider the employees' testimony but found it not controlling.[6]

At any rate, in holding that in determining whether the Company had interfered with, dominated, and supported the D. G. W. U., the Board must consider as material conclusionary testimony of employees that they freely formed and joined that organization and knew of no interference with, domination or support of it by the Company, the court below has decided an important question in a manner which conflicts with the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in Bethlehem Steel Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 120 F. (2d) 641, 653.[7] In that case,

[6] The Board was certainly justified in treating such evidence as not controlling. In a situation like that at bar, where the Company has a closed shop with a plant union, there could be little chance that an employee still desiring to continue working for the Company would testify in the Company's presence that the plant union was not the union of his choice. For a detailed analysis of the Board's attitude toward this type of employee evidence, see opinion below, note 6 (XIII 41–43).

[7] The action of the Board in setting aside its former decision and order and conducting another hearing in accordance with the circuit court of appeals' remand order of November 6, 1941, rather than then applying to this Court for a writ of certiorari, does not, of course, affect the right of this Court now to grant certiorari to review any ruling made by the court below in its interlocutory decision. Panama Railroad v. Napier Shipping Co., 166 U. S. 280, 284; Hamil-

the employers sought to ask representatives of plant unions charged with being company dominated a series of questions designed to elicit whether the witnesses were conscious of being influenced, restrained, interfered with, coerced, or dominated by their employers. It was stipulated by the counsel and the examiner that the witnesses would have answered in the negative. The court of appeals denied the employer and the dominated unions leave to adduce such testimony, holding that, "Since the organization, structure, and Company support of the plans ensure Company dominance and violate the Act, this testimony would have been irrelevant" (ibid.). The decision of the court below holding that the Board must receive and consider such evidence is directly in conflict, for the organization, structure, and company support of the D. G. W. U. in the instant case likewise insure company dominance and violation of the Act. As shown by the facts summarized supra, pp. 11–23, the Company, after demonstrating strong opposition to the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., formed an organization called the Loyalty League whose primary purpose was the frustration of efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize its employees, and thereafter, through the Loyalty League and its supervisory employees, set up and took a leading part in the administration of a labor organization called the D. G. W. U., participated in determining the structure of the bargaining committee, controlled the piece-work committee through membership of its supervisory employees on that committee, granted the D. G. W. U. a closed-shop contract, agreed to a checkoff of dues for that labor organization, and otherwise contributed financial and other support to it.

The holding of the court below also conflicts in principle with decisions of other circuit courts of appeals. In Western Cartridge Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 134 F. (2d) 240, 244–245 (C. C. A. 7), certoriari denied, 320 U. S. 746, the examiner had permitted the Independent, an alleged company-dominated union, to adduce testimony of witnesses who had participated in its organization as to their reasons for joining—as was permitted in the instant case—but he rejected as cumulative the testimony of several thousand other employees as to their reasons for joining. The Independent contended that it had been denied a fair hearing, arguing that such testimony "was material and tended to prove that these employees had joined the Independent of their own free will, and to disprove interference by the company." In rejecting this argument, the court stated, inter alia:

> Uncontradicted testimony of a large number of employees to the effect that they were free from coercion and under no sense of constraint cannot avail the Independent, Bethlehem, etc., v. N. L. R. B., 1 Cir., 114 F. (2d) 930, 937, and American Enka Corp. v. N. L. R. B., 4 Cir., 119 F. (2d) 60, 62, and a showing of non-coercion in one instance does not disapprove an affirmative showing of coercion in another instance, United States v. General Motors Corp., 7 Cir., 121 F. (2d) 376, 405. The recognition of constraint calls for a high degree of introspective perception, Bethlehem Shipbuilding case, supra, 114 F. (2d) 937, and it would be a rare case where the finders of fact could probe the precise factors of motivation underlying each employee's choice. Normally, the conclusion that the employees' choice was restrained by the employer's interference must of necessity be based on the existence of conditions or circumstances which the employer created or for which he was fairly responsible, and as a result of which it may reasonably be inferred that the employees did not have that complete and unfettered freedom of choice which the Act contemplates, N. L. R. B. v. Link-Belt Co., 311 U. S. 584, 588, 61 S. Ct. 358, 85 L. Ed. 368.

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit ruled similarly in National Labor Relations Board v. Brown Paper Mill Co., 108 F. (2d) 867, 870, 871, certiorari denied, 310 U. S. 651. In two other cases in which the Board has refused to give weight to conclusionary testimony like that offered in this case, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First and Fourth Circuits have enforced Board orders based upon findings that the employer has violated Section 8 (2) of the Act. See Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. v. National Labor Relations Board, 114 F. (2d) 930, 937 (C. C. A. 1), certiorari dismissed, 312 U. S. 710; American Enka Corp. v. National Labor Relations Board, 119 F. (2d) 60, 62 (C. C. A. 4).[8]

Although in one early case, National Labor Relations Board v. Swank Products, Inc., 108 F. (2d) 872, 875 (C. C. A. 3), the conclusion of the circuit court of appeals that there was not substantial evidence to support the Board's finding that the employer had violated Section 8 (2) of the Act was held to be "reenforced by a stipulation of counsel that members of the Association, if called, would have testified that they joined without interference or coercion and that their preference was for the Association, and not for either of the other two unions seeking to organize the employees, in no case except the instant one has a court ever ruled that the Board denied due process to an employer by holding such testimony immaterial.

[8] Cf. National Labor Relations Board v. Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., 308 U. S. 241, reversing 101 F. (2d) 841, 847 (C. C. A. 4) and National Labor Relations Board v. Automotive Maintenance Machinery Co., 315 U. S. 282, reversing 116 F. (2d) 350, 355–356 (C. C. A. 7), in which this Court reversed the circuit courts of appeals, which had set aside Board orders of disestablishment on the ground that the employees desired to be represented by the labor organization which Board found to be company dominated. Cf. also National Labor Relations Board v. New Era Die Co., 118 F. (2d) 500, 505 (C. C. A. 3) wherein the court upheld the Board in its refusal to permit the employer, who had refused to bargain with an accredited bargaining representative, to show by the testimony of his employees who had revoked their authorizations of such representative that they did so voluntarily. This testimony the court held was "properly rejected as immaterial."

As a corollary to its ruling in this respect, the court below concluded that the trial examiner, because he had expressed his opinion at the first hearing that such testimony was immaterial, was disqualified to preside at the hearing on remand. If the Board is correct in its view that such testimony was immaterial, then the court's ruling relative to the trial examiner must fall for that reason alone. However, the court below, nevertheless, erred in holding that the trial examiner was disqualified. He had no power to decide a case but merely make recommendations to the Board which alone has power to decide. Section 10 (c) of the Act; National Labor Relations Board v. Air Associates, Inc., 121 F. (2d) 586, 588–590 (C. C. A. 2); National Labor Relations Board v. Weirton Steel Co., 135 F. (2d) 494, 496 (C. C. A. 3); National Labor Relations Board v. Botany Worsted Mills, 133 F. (2d) 876, 882 (C. C. A. 3), certiorari denied, 319 U. S. 751. There would consequently be even less reason for disqualifying him from presiding at the hearing on remand than for disqualifying a judge who has ruled erroneously upon the materiality of evidence from hearing the same case on remand. It is well settled that a judge is not disqualified from presiding at a hearing because of his previous erroneous rulings in the case. Ex parte American Steel Barrel Co., 230 U. S. 35; Berger v. United States, 255 U. S. 22, 23–24. The same doctrine applies to administrative proceedings. United States v. Morgan, 313 U. S. 409, 421.

2. The decision of the court below, insofar as it ruled material to the issue of company domination of the D. G. W. U. evidence as to whether contracts made by other employers with the I. L. G. W. U. contain provisions as beneficial to employees as those in the contract made by the Company with the D. G. W. U., is in conflict with a decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 120 F. (2d) 641, 651, 653 (App. D. C.). In that case, the employer, charged with interfering with, dominating and supporting a plant union had sought to subpoena a witness for the purpose of questioning him concerning the dates, scope, duration and terms of certain agreements made between the charging union and another employer. The Court of Appeals upheld the Board's ruling (14 N. L. R. B. 539, 595, n. 36) that "these agreements were irrelevant" and that neither the other employer nor the agreements were "on trial" (120 F. (2d) at 651). No facts exist in the Bethlehem Steel case which differentiates it from the instant case with respect to the relevancy of this type of evidence.

3. The decision of the court below is in conflict with decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit insofar as it holds material to the issue of employer responsibility for conduct of supervisory employees in forming and administering the D. G. W. U., evidence that the I. L. G. W. U. admits to membership at other plants employees holding positions similar to those of the Company's supervisory employees. New Idea, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Board, 117 F. (2d) 517, 524 (C. C. A. 7); National Labor Relations Board v. Aintree Corp., 132 F. (2d) 469, 472 (C. C. A. 7), certiorari denied, 318 U. S. 774.

In the New Idea case, the company contended that it should not be answerable for the conduct of its assistant foremen in dominating and supporting a plant union because, among other reasons, such assistant foremen were eligible to membership in both the plant union and in an American Federation of Labor union. The court held, however, that ineligibility to union membership was not a condition precedent to employer responsibility for the acts of supervisory employees. In the Aintree case, the same court in upholding its former ruling in the New Idea case, relied heavily upon this Court's decision in International Association of Machinists v. National Labor Relations Board, 311 U. S. 72, 80–81, wherein this Court upheld the Board's finding that the employer was responsible for conduct of some of his minor supervisory employees in throwing their support to one nationally affiliated labor organization and opposing another even though such supervisory employees were "bona fide members" of the former.

Evidence respecting the eligibility of supervisors to membership in the charging union is clearly irrelevant in a case like the instant where instead of one or two supervisors possibly acting in their own interest there is concerted activity by the entire body of supervisors in forming and participating in the administration of the D. G. W. U. (supra, pp. 15–18).

Aside from the immateriality of this evidence, however, we believe that the trial examiner properly excluded it at the hearing on remand because it was not within the scope of the remand order. No attempt was made by any of the parties to introduce such evidence at the original hearing, the transcript of which is a part of the entire record, and neither the Company nor the D. G. W. U. alleged that such evidence was newly discovered or unavailable at the original hearing. The trial examiner made it clear at the hearing on remand—and we think properly so—that with the exception of testimony of Mrs. Reed, the Company's president, who was precluded on account of illness from testifying at the first hearing, he did not intend to receive any evidence except that mentioned in the opinion of the court below as having been improperly rejected by him at the first hearing (VIII 2788). As this and other courts have recognized, "the proper administration of justice demands that there be an end to litigation. It demands that parties shall not present their causes of action or their defenses piecemeal." Sorensen v. Pyrate Corp., 65 F. (2d) 982, 985 (C. C. A. 9); Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467, 481; United States Trust Co. v. New Mexico, 183 U. S. 535, 537, 540.

4. Other evidence not included within the scope of the remand order, the exclusion of which at the hearing on remand was held by the court below to constitute a denial of due process, related to whether or not certain employees discharged or laid off by the Company prior to the passage of the Act were discriminatorily discharged or laid off.[2] As shown, supra, p. 29, at the first hearing, pursuant to stipulation of all the parties, excerpts from the transcript of a hearing before the National Industrial Recovery Board which

[2] In so holding, the court erroneously assumed that the Board had inferred discriminatory motives for the discharges and lay-offs (XIII 48). The Board expressly stated in its decision that it made no finding on that question (X 3860, n. 25).

tried charges that the Company had discriminatorily discharged or laid off these employees and excerpts from the transcript of the hearing in the injunction suit before Federal District Judge Miller were introduced in evidence and all other evidence offered by the Company on this subject was received. The Company raised no question in this regard either before the Board or the court below prior to the hearing on remand, and it has never alleged that any additional evidence which it may have on that subject is newly discovered or was unavailable at the first hearing. The Company should not be permitted to present its defenses piecemeal.

5. The court below in its first opinion (123 F. (2d) at 225) approved the Board's refusal to try the I. L. G. W. U. for a conspiracy to force the Company to enter into a closed shop with it. However, in its second opinion the court below held that such evidence was relevant for the Board to consider (1) in determining whether charges were filed by I. L. G. W. U. in good faith or for the purpose of influencing an injunction suit brought by the Company against the I. L. G. W. U. in a Federal District Court to prevent the I. L. G. W. U. from carrying out threats to use violence in organizing the Company's plant,[10]

[10] See Donnelly Garment Co. v. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 20 F. Supp. 767 (W. D. Mo.), affirmed, 21 F. Supp. 807 (W. D. Mo.), reversed in 304 U. S. 243; 23 F. Supp. 998 (W. D. Mo.); 99 F. (2d) 309 (C. C. A. 8).

and (2) in determining the reason why employees joined the Loyalty League and the D. G. W. U. (XIII 44–48).

The reversal by the court below of its position on the materiality of this evidence is apparently due to the interpretation it put upon this Court's decision in National Labor Relations Board v. Indiana & Michigan Electric Co., 318 U. S. 9, which was handed down subsequent to the first opinion in the instant case. During the progress of the hearing before the Board of the Indiana & Michigan case and at various times prior to the Board's decision, severe damage was done to the properties of the employer for which several prominent union leaders were subsequently indicted and convicted. Several of these leaders had been witnesses at the hearing before the Board. The employer sought to adduce additional evidence before the Board to show an unlawful conspiracy among the union leaders to intimidate and coerce the employer into settling the case certiorari denied, 305 U. S. 662; 119 F. (2d) 892 (C. C. A. 8); 121 F. (2d) 561 (C. C. A. 8); 47 F. Supp. 61 (W. D. Mo.); Donnelly Garment Co. v. Dubinsky, 47 F. Supp. 65 (W. D. Mo.); Donnelly Garment Co. v. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 47 F. Supp. 67 (W. D. Mo.); 55 F. Supp. 572 (W. D. Mo.); Donnelly Garment Co. v. Dubinsky, 55 F. Supp. 587 (W. D. Mo.); International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union v. Donnelly Garment Co., 147 F. (2d) 246 (C. C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 325 U. S. 852, where an injunction erroneously granted by the federal district court was subsequently set aside.

then in the process of being heard and decided, and recognizing the union as bargaining representative of his employees. The employer alleged that the unlawful destruction of his property was pursuant to the conspiracy thus to coerce and intimidate the employer in the defense of his case before the Board. This Court held that under the circumstances the unlawful conduct of the union leaders was material to a consideration of the weight and credibility of the testimony of these leaders as well as the witnesses closely associated with them. It also held that under the circumstances the Board might wish to consider whether it should permit its processes to be taken advantage of by unions or by union leaders to advance their illegal purposes.

In this case there was no offer to prove that any of the witnesses had been convicted of any unlawful conduct against the Company or any other employer and, therefore, the rejected evidence could have no bearing on the weight and credibility of any of the testimony. Moreover, since none of the alleged unlawful conduct of union leaders occurred during or immediately preceding the hearing and other proceedings before the Board, it could not have been designed to intimidate the Company in the defense of its case before the Board as was allegedly true in the Indiana & Michigan case. The court below appears to have felt that the excluded evidence of misconduct was admissible for the purpose of showing that the charges filed by the I. L. G. W. U. were designed to influence the result of the action for an injunction mentioned supra, p. 44; but that is immaterial here where the Board was concerned only with determining whether the Company had engaged in unfair labor practices and with insuring to all parties a fair hearing on such issues. The Board issues a complaint only after its investigation shows that there is merit to the charges, and the motive of the I. L. G. W. U. in filing the charges cannot deprive the Board of jurisdiction to proceed on the charges. National Labor Relations Board v. Indiana & Michigan Electric Co., 318 U. S. 9, 18; National Labor Relations Board v. Brown Paper Mill Co., 108 F. (2d) 867, 872 (C. C. A. 5), certiorari denied, 310 U. S. 651; National Labor Relations Board v. Fickett-Brown Mfg. Co., Inc., 140 F. (2d) 883, 884 (C. C. A. 5).

It is true, as this Court pointed out in the Indiana & Michigan case (318 U. S. at p. 19), that the Board might in its discretion withhold or dismiss its complaint "if it should appear that the charge is so related to a course of violence and destruction, carried on for the purpose of coercing an employer to help herd its employees into the complaining union, as to constitute an abuse of the Board's process." But no offer was made to show any violence or destruction or any other kind of misconduct at the Company's plant and the Board does not feel that threats made by a union to call a strike—even a strike accompanied by violence upon the picket lines as was allegedly true at strike-bound plants in Kansas City—should influence it in issuing a complaint upon charges filed by the union making such threats. As pointed out, supra, p. 27, the trial examiner admitted in evidence all testimony of Mrs. Reed and of employees as to what they had seen, read, or heard regarding violence upon the picket lines at other plants where the I. L. G. W. U. had called strikes and threats of a strike accompanied by similar violence at the Company's plant—the evidence of the employees being considered relevant to show their reasons for joining the D. G. W. U.—but considered irrelevant and refused to receive other evidence as to whether such violence actually occurred. Taking cognizance of the Company's contentions relative to the alleged threats, the Board stated in its decision "It may be true, as the [Company] contends, that many of them [the employees] feared the alleged threats of the I. L. G. W. U. but instead of permitting the employees to decide for themselves what attitudes they would adopt with regard to the I. L. G. W. U., the [Company] seized upon such fears as may have existed to build up and strengthen a militant employee opposition toward that labor organization" (X 3868–3869).

As Judge Woodrough in his dissenting opinion in this case pointed out, "the inquiry demanded in the proposed fields of controversy would only protract and distract. It could not illuminate. Employers may not commit the unfair labor practices such as charged in this case to prevent union electioneering even by labor unions that have a bad record behind them". (XIII 63.) A determination whether the Board is required to sidetrack the functions expressly delegated to it under the Act for the purpose of inquiring into alleged unlawful conduct of the charging union in situations such as those present in this case is important to the administration of the Act. To require the Board to take such evidence would not only permit employers who have violated the Act to do so free of the sanctions of the Act whenever the organization filing the charge has been guilty of misconduct, but would greatly hamper the work of the Board by diverting its inquiries to collateral matters rather than to the merits of the unfair labor practice charges.

6. The court below did not decide whether the Board's subsidiary findings of fact, upon which the Board based its conclusions that the Company had violated Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act, are supported by substantial evidence, although the concurring and dissenting judges passed upon this question.[11] We submit that the [11] The judge in the court below who wrote the opinion designated as the opinion of the court refused to decide whether there was substantial evidence to support the Board's facts summarized in the Statement supra, pp. 11–23, amply support the Board's findings and that the Board's order is in all respects proper. We believe that the court below erred in setting aside and refusing to enforce the Board's order. This case has four times been argued before the court below over a period of more than four years (supra, pp. 7, n. 2, 24). Three opinions have been issued by that court but it has not yet passed upon the substantiality of the evidence supporting the Board's findings (7 L. R. R. Man. 560; 123 F. (2d) 215; XIII 7–69). If this case should be remanded to the court below, that court, in line with its past practice in this case, might again consider the case on some procedural or due process question not before this Court and might again, without passing on the question of substantiality of the evidence, refuse to enforce the Board's order. Accordingly, if this Court grants certiorari, we request that, in addition to reversing the court below on the due process issues presented, this Court enforce the Board's order in toto.

CONCLUSION

As the court below recognized, the questions raised by its decision are of substantial public importance. The decision in several respects conflicts with decisions of other circuit courts of ap-order (XIII 51). A concurring judge thought that that question should be decided in the negative, and the dissenting judge thought that the order should be enforced (XIII 55–56, 61, 64).

JURISDICTION

The decree of the circuit court of appeals was entered on October 29, 1945 (XIII 71). The petitions for writs of certiorari, in both Nos. 38 and 39,[2] were filed on January 29, 1946, and were granted on April 22, 1946 (XIII 73). QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. (a) Whether, when an employer expresses opposition to a nationally affiliated labor organization, through its supervisory staff sets up and thereafter takes a leading part in the adminis-

review, and the answers, is referred to as "A," and the other volumes of the printed record are referred to by Roman and Arabic numbers indicating the volume and the page thereof.

[2] The petitions in both cases were directed to the same judgment of the court below. No. 38 was filed by the Board, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union being designated as a technical respondent; No. 39 was filed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Board being designated as a technical respondent.

tration of a plant union for the declared purpose of preventing the nationally affiliated labor organization from organizing its employees, and grants the plant union a closed shop agreement and financial and other support, the Board must give weight to testimony of employees that they freely formed and joined such plant union and knew of no interference with, domination or support of it by the employer, when deciding the question whether the employer has, in fact, interfered with, dominated, and supported the plant union in violation of Section 8 (2) of the National Labor Relations Act.

(b) Whether the trial examiner who presides at a hearing on remand for the purpose of receiving such employee testimony is biased and incapable of giving such testimony proper consideration merely because at the first hearing he expressed his opinion that such testimony was immaterial.

2. Whether the Board denied the employer and plant union due process of law in excluding the following evidence as immaterial to the issue of employer domination and support of a labor organization:

(a) Evidence as to whether contracts made by a nationally affiliated labor organization with other employers contain provisions as beneficial to employees as the provisions contained in a contract made by the employer with an alleged company-dominated labor organization;

(b) Evidence that employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the supervisory employees who were active in the formation and administration of the alleged company-dominated labor organization were eligible for membership in nationally affiliated labor organizations.

3. Whether the Board denied the employer and plant union due process of law in excluding evidence of misconduct of a nationally affiliated labor organization occurring at plants other than the employer's as immaterial to a determination by the Board of whether the employer has engaged in unfair labor practices and to a consideration of whether the Board should prosecute its complaint on charges filed by such nationaliy affiliated labor organization.

4. Whether the employer and plant union were denied due process of law by the Board's refusal to receive at a hearing on remand the following evidence which was not offered at the first hearing and was not alleged to be newly discovered or unavailable at the first hearing:

(a) Evidence, the materiality of which is questioned in 2 (b), supra, regarding the eligibility to membership in a nationally affiliated labor organization of employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the supervisory employees who were active in the formation and administration of an alleged company-dominated labor organization;

(b) Evidence of the non-discriminatory character of the discharges and lay-offs of certain employees prior to the passage of the Act, where all evidence on such subject offered by the employer at the original hearing was received and the Board made no finding as to whether the discharges and lay-offs were, in fact, discriminatory.

5. Whether there is substantial evidence in the record to support the Board's findings that the employer engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act, and whether the Board's order is proper.

STATUTE INVOLVED

The pertinent provisions of the National Labor Relations Act are set forth in the Appendix, infra, pp. 108–110.

STATEMENT

I

PROCEEDINGS CULMINATING IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS' DECISION AND REMAND ORDER OF NOVEMBER 6, 1941

Upon charges and amended charges filed in 1938 and 1939 respectively, by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, herein called the I. L. G. W. U., the Board, on April 27, 1939, issued its complaint against Donnelly Garment Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, herein called the Company (A. 369–376, 553). The complaint alleged that the Company had dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of a labor organization known as Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, herein called the D. G. W. U., and contributed financial and other support to it; had discharged two of its employees because they joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U.; had, by these and other acts, coerced and restrained its employees from becoming or remaining members of the I. L. G. W. U. and had encouraged and compelled membership in the D. G. W. U.; and that by the aforesaid conduct, the Company had violated Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the National Labor Relations Act (A 369–374).

A hearing upon the complaint was held before a trial examiner of the Board from June 5 to July 15, 1939 (A 555). At that hearing, the trial examiner refused to permit the Company and the D. G. W. U. to call to the witness stand 1,200 employees of the Company who the Company alleged would each testify that he had joined the D. G. W. U. of his own free will, that the employees had voluntarily formed the D. G. W. U., and that such union was at all times free from employer influence, domination and support; the trial examiner did receive such testimony from 9 employees and admitted excerpts from the record in another case containing such testimony from 12 other witnesses (I 193–194, 214–215; II 609, 612–626, 651–653, 655, 660–661, 664, 669, 704, 704e, 704p–707, 718a–718e, 718r, 718s; IV 1223, 1226, 1228–1229, 1234, 1336v, 1336ee, 1336ii, 1336pp, 1336ccc, 1336ooo, 1336xxx, 1336eeee; VI 1752–1753). The trial examiner also excluded evidence that the I. L. G. W. U., before, and at the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U., had conspired to force the Company to sign a closed-shop contract with it by threatening to call a strike and to engage in conduct at the Company's plant in Kansas City similar to its conduct at other garment factories in Kansas City where pickets engaged in acts of violence and forcibly prevented employees from going to work (II 626–627, 660–661, 705; III 758; VI 1752–1753). Also excluded was evidence relating to labor agreements made by the I. L. G. W. U. with other employers (discussed infra, pp. 92–96), and other evidence (I 208–212, 220–221, 238i–238j, 243; VI 1924–1928, 1930–1931), not material to the issues presented by the petitions for writs of certiorari. On March 6, 1940, the Board issued its decision, in which it upheld the trial examiner in excluding all such evidence and in rejecting offers of proof as to some of it, and found that the Company had engaged in unfair labor practices in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act, substantially as alleged in the complaint (A 552–615). It issued the usual cease and desist and affirmative relief order for violations of this kind (A 615–647).

Thereafter, the Company and the D. G. W. U. filed separate petitions in the court below to review and set aside the Board's order; and the Board filed its answer and petition for enforcement (XIII 4). During the pendency of these petitions, the Company and the D. G. W. U. filed with the court below applications for leave to adduce (1) evidence to show that they had been denied due process because of bias and prejudice on the part of the Board and its subordinates and collusion by them with the I. L. G. W. U., and (2) evidence mentioned supra, pp. 6–7, allegedly going to the merits of the case, which had been excluded by the trial examiner and which they contended was competent and material. On November 7, 1940, after oral argument on the applications, the court below handed down its opinion (7 L. R. R. M. 560), one judge dissenting, holding that the showing made by the Company and the D. G. W. U. as to the alleged bias and collusion was insufficient to invoke any action of the court, and denying the applications in that regard. It also denied the applications to adduce the excluded evidence allegedly going to the merits of the case but did so without prejudice to a renewal of such applications when the case should be finally submitted to the court (see 123 F. 2d 215, 219–220).

On November 6, 1941, the court below handed down its decision denying enforcement of the Board's order and remanding the case to the Board for further proceedings (123 F. 2d 215).

The court below ruled (123 F. 2d at 222–225) that the statements and rulings of the trial examiner, although in some respects erroneous, did not establish that he was biased, that the trial examiner and the Board had properly confined the issues to those tendered in the complaint by refusing to try the I. L. G. W. U. for the alleged conspiracy, but had denied the Company and the D. G. W. U. due process by excluding the evidence of employees, in accordance with an offer of proof, that they formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and did not know of any interference with, domination or support of the D. G. W. U. by the Company. The court required the Board to vacate its findings, conclusions and order and to accord the Company and the D. G. W. U. "an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected by the Trial Examiner; and to receive and consider such evidence together with all other competent and material evidence in the record before making new findings and a new order" (id. at 225).

II

BOARD PROCEEDINGS AND FINDINGS SUBSEQUENT TO THE REMAND ORDER

Pursuant to the court's mandate, the Board vacated its findings, conclusions and order of March 6, 1940, and directed a further hearing for the purpose of taking additional evidence in accordance with the opinion of the court below (X 3785–3786). The same trial examiner who presided at the previous hearing again presided (I 1, VII 2057).[4] He received the testimony of 11 of the 1,200 employees named in the offer of proof that they had voluntarily formed the D. G. W. U., that they had joined it of their own free will, and that they knew of no interference with, domination or support of such union by the Company (VIII 2588, 2599–2600, 2631–2632, 2722–2723, 2772, 2858–2859, 2914–2915, IX 3006, 3049–3050, 3078, 3123, 3218). The trial examiner then ruled that further evidence of the same nature would be cumulative (X 3250–3251, 3253–3255, 3272–3273). The Board thereupon called several of the 1,200 employees, who testified contrary to the offer of proof (III 746, 750, 751, 753, IX 3274–3282, 3310–3313, 3320–3325, 3329–3330, 3344, 3408–3416, 3426–3435, 3467, 3469–3471, 3474, X 3497–3498, 3528, 3550–3554, 3558–3559, 3612, 3661, 3665–3670, 3691–3703). Thereafter, the trial examiner issued his intermediate report in which he found, "upon the entire record", that the Company had engaged in unfair labor practices in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act and recommended that the Company cease and desist from such unfair labor practices and take certain affirmative action which he found would effectuate the policies of the Act (X 3837–3898).

[4] The Board overruled the Company's application for designation of another trial examiner, pointing out that all the grounds urged by the Company as showing bias and prejudice had been presented to the circuit court of appeals, which ruled them insufficient to establish disqualification (A 498–501).

On June 9, 1943, the Board issued its decision and order sustaining the rulings of the trial examiner in regard to the admission and rejection of evidence and approving and adopting, with exceptions not here material, his findings, conclusions, and recommendations (A 618–622). In regard to the evidence received pursuant to offers of proof at the first hearing, the Board stated that it had carefully considered all such evidence but "that the testimony in question does not overcome more positive evidence in the record that the [Company] committed acts of interference and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which subjected that organization to the [Company's] domination and which removed from the employees' selection of the D. G. W. U. the complete freedom of choice which the Act contemplates." The Board added: "Since we find the evidence here adduced totally unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U., we are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case" (A 619). The facts as found by the Board may be summarized briefly as follows:*

In 1937, when the I. L. G. W. U. made attempts to organize the Company's employees, the Company took various steps to discourage the employees from joining, as it had done upon a previous occasion in 1934 when the I. L. G. W. U. had instituted a membership campaign (X 3859–3863). It continued to maintain and support an organization called the Loyalty League which it had formed in 1935 for the primary purpose of frustrating the organizational efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3861–3864). It permitted, encouraged, and directed the circulation throughout its plant during working hours of a pledge not to join any labor organization (X 3866–3867). Its president, Mrs. Reed, made a speech to the employees, expressing appreciation for the pledge and assuring them that she would attempt to protect them from any violent conduct on the part of I. L. G. W. U. organizers which she alleged was being threatened (X 3867–3869). Through its supervisory and management representatives, the Company approved and encouraged demonstrations against two employees who had dared to join the I. L. G. W. U. and forced such employees to leave its employ (X 3869–3871). Through two of its management representatives, Todd and Atherton, the Company hired an attorney to advise its employees in opposing the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3872). At his suggestion, one of these management representatives, Todd, called a meeting of the employees during working hours[5] for the purpose of forming a plant union, the D. G. W. U., to combat the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3872). Supervisory employees, accompanied by their subordinates, attended, and the D. G. W. U. came into being with management representative Todd as its chairman (X 3872–3875). Thereafter, through the membership and activities of its supervisory employees in the D. G. W. U., through the membership solely of management representatives on its most important committee, the piece-work committee, through management's participation in determining eligibility to membership on the bargaining committee, through the grant of closed-shop and check-off agreements, and through the grant of financial and other support to the D. G. W. U., the Company continued its domination and control of the D. G. W. U. (X 3875–3884).

The Board concluded that by this conduct the Company had violated Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act (X 3866, 3869, 3871, 3886–3890) and ordered the Company to cease and desist from such unfair labor practices, to disestablish the D. G. W. U., to reimburse its employees for the dues and assessments which it had checked off from their wages on behalf of the D. G. W. U., and to post appropriate notices (A 621–622).

THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS' DECISION OF OCTOBER 29, 1945

Thereafter, the Company filed its petition in the court below to review and set aside the Board's order (A 1–360). The Board answered and requested enforcement of its order (A 361–365). The D. G. W. U. and the I. L. G. W. U. were permitted to intervene and file briefs (A 368–369). On October 29, 1945, the court below handed down its opinion (one judge concurring and another dissenting) and entered its decree denying enforcement of any part of the Board's order and setting aside the entire order for want of due process because the Board had failed to give probative weight to the conclusionary testimony received pursuant to the court's remand order of November 6, 1941; because the same trial examiner who presided at the first hearing again presided at the hearing on remand; and because the Board had refused to receive at the hearing on remand certain evidence which the court deemed material (XIII 7–71). The rejected evidence which the court below deemed material, together with the propriety of the trial examiner's exclusion of it, is discussed in detail, infra, pp. 35–104.

SPECIFICATION OF ERRORS TO BE URGED

The court below erred:

1. (a) In holding that the Board, in dealing with the question of company domination of the D. G. W. U., denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by failing to give weight to testimony of the Company's employees that they freely formed and joined the D. G. W. U. and knew of no interference with, domination or support of that union by the Company.

(b) In holding that the trial examiner who presided at the hearing on remand was biased and incapable of giving such testimony proper consideration because he had expressed his opinion at the first hearing that such testimony was immaterial.

2. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive in evidence labor agreements made by the I. L. G. W. U. with other employers.

3. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence as to whether or not the I. L. G. W. U. admitted to membership employees at other plants having duties similar to those of the Company's employees whom the Board found to be supervisory.

4. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence that the I. L. G. W. U., at and prior to the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U., had used fraud and violence at the plants of other employers to compel their employees to join the I. L. G. W. U.

5. In holding that the Board had denied due process to the Company and the D. G. W. U. by refusing to receive evidence as to whether the Company, prior to the passage of the Act, had discriminatorily discharged or laid off certain members of the I. L. G. W. U.

6. In setting aside and refusing to enforce the Board's order.

7. If the Board improperly failed to consider any evidence, in failing to remand to the Board such portions of the case as were affected by such failure of the Board.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I

The court below erred in setting aside and refusing to enforce the Board's order. The order was based upon findings of fact fully supporting and, indeed, compelling the Board's conclusion that the Company had engaged in unfair labor practices in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act. Neither the Board's treatment of the evidence received nor its refusal to receive evidence amounted to prejudicial error or a lack of due process.

To enable the Court to pass upon the substantiality of the evidence to support the Board's findings, we have set out that evidence in detail in point I of the Argument and refer this Court to the statement of the Board's findings, supra, pp. 12–13, for a summary recital of it. The evidence fully supports the Board's ultimate findings that the Company engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of the Act, and warrants the Board's order requiring the Company to cease and desist from such unfair labor practices; to withdraw recognition from and completely to disestablish the D. G. W. U.; to reimburse its former and present employees for all dues and assessments which it had deducted from their wages; and to post appropriate notices.

II

In the face of this strong and compelling evidence that the Company dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contributed financial and other support to it, employees of the Company testified that they formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and were not influenced, interfered with, or coerced by the Company in their selection of a bargaining representative. The Board properly refused to give weight to this conclusionary testimony. This is so, in the first place, because the organization, structure, and Company support of the D. G. W. U. were such as to ensure Company domination. It is so, in the second place, because even if the facts surrounding the formation, administration and support by the Company of the D. G. W. U did not compel a finding of violation by the Company of Section 8 (2) of the Act, the conclusionary testimony in question is so introspective and unreliable in character as to warrant the Board in treating it as overcome by "more positive evidence" or, indeed, in not receiving it at all.

The evidence can be of so little, if any, value that the Board should not be required to receive it. The domination, interference, and restraint of the employer having economic power over its employees over a long period of years, as here, necessarily colors the employee's point of view so that he cannot separate in his own mind those beliefs which have been instilled by his employer's unfair conduct from those which he formed or might have formed independently of such conduct. Hence an employee may believe that he has not been coerced and so testify, when in fact he has been coerced. And even if he realizes that he has been influenced or coerced by his employer's conduct, he may not feel free so to express himself while testifying in the presence of his employer or its representatives.

Finally, conclusionary evidence of the sort here involved may be excluded in the interests of judicial and administrative efficiency. Since testimony of some employees that they themselves had not been coerced would not disprove that others had, in fact, been coerced, voluminous examination and cross-examination of all the employees might well be required. Such testimony would be of too little value to justify the large expenditure of time and money which would be required and the consequent interruption of the Act's remedial processes.

The court below erred in holding that the trial examiner was disqualified from presiding at the hearing on remand merely because he had expressed his opinion at the first hearing that the conclusionary testimony of employees was immaterial. As we have shown, he ruled correctly at the first hearing; but even if he had not, he was not, because of an erroneous ruling, thereafter disqualified from presiding at a remand hearing of the case. It is well settled that a judge is not disqualified from presiding at a hearing because of his previous erroneous rulings in the case. The same principle should apply with all the more force to a trial examiner, for he cannot decide the case, as can a judge, but can merely make recommendations to the Board, which alone has power to decide. Section 10 (c) of the Act.

III

The court below erred in holding that the Company and the D. G. W. U. were denied due process by the Board's refusal to receive evidence at the hearing on remand which did not fall within the category of evidence mentioned by the court in its first opinion as having been improperly rejected by the trial examiner at the first hearing. Part of the evidence, the rejection of which at the remand hearing was considered by the court below to amount to a denial of due process, was not even offered at the first hearing. Part of it was offered and received, and the trial examiner only refused to receive cumulative evidence of the same nature. As to evidence in these categories, it is the Board's position that the parties should not be permitted to present their defenses piecemeal, that a single trial of the issue was enough. It is also the Board's position that the other evidence was not within the scope of the remand order because the propriety of its rejection at the first hearing was fully argued before the court and presumably fully considered by it prior to the remand order, and the court below, either expressly or by implication, approved the rejection of such evidence in its first opinion.

In any event, all of such evidence—evidence regarding eligibility of supervisory employees to membership in the I. L. G. W. U., evidence regarding the terms of the I. L. G. W. U. contracts, evidence bearing upon whether or not discharges and lay-offs occurring prior to the passage of the Act were discriminatory, and evidence of fraud or violence practiced by the I. L. G. W. U. at plants other than the Company's—was only remotely relevant or wholly immaterial to any issue in this case and was properly rejected for that reason. The Board should not be required to sidetrack its hearing on the merits of the unfair labor practice charges by inquiring into such collateral matters.

IV

This case has been argued before the court below on four occasions, and that court has delivered three opinions therein. It has, however, not yet passed on the substantiality of the evidence in support of the Board's findings. This case has been pending before the Board and the courts for more than seven years, and under the circumstances, we think this Court should pass on that question now and direct that the Board's order be enforced in full so that further protracted proceedings before the court below may be avoided.

ARGUMENT

I

THE BOARD'S FINDINGS THAT THE COMPANY HAS ENGAGED IN UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES IN CONTRAVENTION OF SECTION 8 (1), (2), AND (3) OF THE ACT ARE SUPPORTED BY SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE AND SUSTAIN THE BOARD'S ORDER

The judge in the court below who wrote the opinion designated as the opinion of the court did not decide whether there was substantial evidence to support the Board's order (XIII 51).

A concurring judge felt that the question should be decided in the negative and the dissenting judge thought that it should be decided in the affirmative (XIII 55–56, 61, 64). To enable this Court to pass upon that question (see infra, pp. 104–106) and also to facilitate a better understanding of the other issues involved, a full statement of the Board's findings and the evidence supporting such findings is set forth below.[6]

A. THE COMPANY'S SUPERVISORY AND MANAGEMENT HIERARCHY

Before setting forth the various acts found by the Board to be unfair labor practices, we shall describe first the supervisory or management status of various employees, and the Company's responsibility for their participation in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and in the commission of other unfair labor practices.

In the operation of its business of designing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing ladies' garments, the Company employs between 1,100 and 1,300 persons (X 3850; VII 2419–2422). The Company concedes responsibility for the labor relations conduct of its "principal officials"—Mrs. Reed, its president, Mr. Baty, its production manager, Mrs. Reeves, head of its merchandising

[6] In the following statement, references preceding the semicolon are to the pages of the record where the findings in the Intermediate Report which was adopted by the Board (A 618) appear; references following the semicolon are to the pages of the record where the supporting evidence appears.

department, Mrs. Hyde, its personnel director, and Mr. Keyes, its sales manager—but denies responsibility for the conduct of persons lower in its directive heirarchy (II 392–393, VII 2121–2124, 2127–2145, 2170–2173, X 3909–3911). The Company's position in this respect appears to be grounded largely on the absence in its plant of such normal titles as "foremen", "supervisors", or "group leaders" (I 17, 19, II 422). The Board, however, after considering their functions and positions, decided that in spite of the absence of the usual nomenclature, certain employees, such as instructors, thread girls, and other employees charged with managerial responsibilities and duties, were in fact supervisory employees and representatives of management and that their conduct in coercing and interfering with the employees in the exercise of their rights of self-organization and to select a bargaining representative was attributable to management (X 3850–3859). The Board was certainly entitled thus to base its decision on the role actually played by the supervisory employees rather than upon their titles. Cf. Cupples Company, Mfrs. v. National Labor Relations Board, 106 F. 2d 100, 114 (C.C.A. 8).

1. Instructors and thread girls.—The Company operates under what is known as the section system rather than the dressmaking system of manufacturing ladies' garments (VII 2252). Instead of each operator making a complete dress, which requires experience and skill, each performs one sewing operation and a whole section of operators is required for the manufacture of a complete garment (VII 2252–2253). This requires almost no skill on the part of the individual operator but requires a large degree of planning and supervision on the part of management (IV 1120 ss, VII 2277, 2252–2253). The operators are grouped into sewing sections of 40 operators each and in charge of each section is an instructor and her assistant called a thread girl or floor girl (X 3850; I 18, II 392, 422, 507, III 1109, V 1374d VII 2253). For each style of garment to be made by the section, the instructor and thread girl are furnished with an instruction sheet in a code understood by the instructor and thread girl (II 503–505, VIII 2963–2967). The instruction sheet indicates the operations which the section is to perform on the garment, but the designation of the specific operators to perform each operation is left to the instructor and thread girl (II 505–507, VIII 2959, 2963–2964, IX 3104, 3326, 3434, 3469, X 3482–3483).

The instructors and thread girls, as the Board found, are in all respects the foremen and assistant foremen of their sections (X 3853). Mrs. Reed, the Company's president, in effect so conceded when she testified in 1935, before the old N. R. A. Board, regarding the duties of the instructor and thread girl, that she had, "40 operators, 40 machines, under this one supervisor with an assistant" (X 3851; III 1109). While instructors lack the power to hire and fire, they assign work (X 3851; II 505–506, IX 3104, VIII 2959–2960), discipline girls (X 3851, 3853; IX 3464, III 1058–1059, IV 1120i, 1120u–1120v, 1120z–1120bb, 1120dd–1120ee, 1120 mm), and constitute the link through which the girls learn the management's directions (X 3852; I 302, 312–313, III 734c, 734g, VIII 2956–2957), and through which the management learns whether a girl is a desirable employee, her capacity for and her attitude towards work (X 3852; II 419–420, III 1059–1061, 1092–1093, V 1375). Instructors are fully responsible for their respective sections of the plant. They are assisted in all aspects of their work by the thread girls who assume charge whenever the instructors are absent (X 3851; IX 3153, 3326, 3435, III 1109).

The Board properly rejected the Company's contention that since June 1935, when it appointed Lee Baty as production manager and plant superintendent, he has been the sole supervisory employee over the production and maintenance employees (X 3851; II 518–519). The production department was composed in 1937 of approximately 1100 employees located on 7 different floors of the plant (II 490–491, VIII 2949–2955). The Company's contention postulates an arrangement under which it is improbable that any plant could operate. If Baty were the only person to exercise authority, to direct, discipline, hire, lay-off, and discharge this large group of employees, he would have to observe personally the operations of all the operators in connection with those matters as well as such others as recommendations regarding wage increases, transfers, promotions, etc. Baty's testimony that he did just that (II 518–519) was inherently improbable and justifiably disbelieved (X 3851).

Moreover, the record affirmatively shows that no change was in fact made in the duties of the instructors and thread girls after Baty became production manager, and that they have at all times exercised a large amount of economic control over the girls in their sections (X 3850–3852; III 734e, 734g, 734i, 734k, IX 3327–3328, 3435, X 3556–3557, 3673–3674). They plan the work in each section, determining, when each new style comes in, which girls shall do which jobs (X 3852; VIII 2957–2960, 2963–2965, IX 3104, 3325–3326, 3434, 3468–3469, X 3482–3483). They keep the girls busy and correct mistakes (X 3852; II 670, IX 3468–3469). They determine who is to be laid off during slack periods (X 3852; I 302, X 3482–3483, 3517–3518, 3554–3557, 3673). When repair work is necessary, the instructor decides whether the girl to whom she assigns the work shall do it on her own time or receive pay for doing it (X 3852; VIII 2967, IX 3451, III 1059, IV 1120x–1120y). The instructors report to the office each week at a "going over of the cards on the girls' work for the past week (X 3852; VIII 2962, III 1059, 1092–1094, 1104, IV 1120x–1120y, 1120mm). They regard themselves as supervisors (X 3852; IX 3324–3326, 3410, 3434, 3464), and are so regarded by the employees (X 3852; VIII 2604–2607, IX 3325, 3410, 3434, X 3481–3483, 3555, 3673–3675). Indeed, Mrs. Reeves, formerly factory manager and thereafter in charge of merchandising (X 3851–3852; VII 2171), herself testified that instructors "constantly supervise" the operators and that the words instructor and floor girl and the word supervisor "means one and the same to me" (X 3852–3853; II 422–423, III 1092–1093).

Under the circumstances, the Board correctly concluded "that the instructors and thread girls are supervisory employees and that they act as representatives of management in the factory" (X 3854). Their functions fall entirely within the accepted definitions of foremen, whose duties often include teaching or instructing their subordinates. Thus Arthur G. Anderson, Industrial Engineering and Factory Management, p. 39, states:

> The foreman provides the necessary human element at the point of contact to make adjustments, rectify errors, remedy deficiencies, interpret and administer instructions, make reports, supervise work, and most important of all, provide personal leadership. In the final analysis the foreman is responsible for output. He is a manager, a teacher, a leader. As the farthest outpost of management, he is management to the workers.

As we have shown above, and as the Board found, the instructors and thread girls performed all of these functions (X 3850–3853). Upon such findings, the Company is clearly responsible for their activities. H. J. Heinz Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 311 U. S. 514, 520–521; International Association of Machinists v. National Labor Relations Board 311 U. S. 72, 80–81; National Labor Relations Board v. Link-Belt Co., 311 U. S. 584, 599.

2. Rose Todd.—Rose Todd was a nurse by profession, and, through acquaintance with Mrs. Reed as a nurse, had secured a job with the Company in 1926 (X 3855; I 14, 142a, VII 2277–2278). The president of the bank with which the Company did business knew Todd for 10 or 12 years as a "kind of all-round man" for the Company

(X 3856; II 718w). From 1926 to 1931, she held several responsible positions at the factory, including that of an instructor, and served as an assistant to Dewey Atchison, production engineer (X 3855; I 19–23, VII 2279, IX 3414). During 1932 she left the Company's employ and for a short period was in charge of the Gernes Garment Company plant in Kansas City (X 3855; V 1374c). Upon returning to the Company's employ, she worked for a while as a thread girl (X 3855; I 23–24).

Todd apparently had no well-defined duties at the time of the formation of the D. G. W. U. and thereafter, but was assigned a desk and among other duties was charged with the responsibility of keeping the different sections of the plant supplied with materials necessary to keep production going (X 3855; I 26–28, 30–31, VII 2116–2117, 2166–2167, VIII 2726, 2830). These duties and others required her frequently to move throughout the plant and to interview the instructors and thread girls (X 3856; I 24–24a, 29). Her status was such that the telephone operators readily announced over the inter-departmental telephones Loyalty League and D. G. W. U. meetings called by Todd, although inter-departmental telephones were reserved for Company business; and instructors readily took directions from her as to the form in which they were to turn in time slips for employees absent on D. G. W. U. business (X 3857; V 1374d, IX 3342, 3429, cf. X 3487, 3672). Her status was such also that when she, in the presence of Production Manager Baty and Personnel Manager Hyde, purported to explain the Company's employment policy to employee Sigler, who was sent home following a demonstration against her for wearing an I. L. G. W. U. pin, they acquiesced in Todd's statements and assumption of authority, thereby permitting her to appear as a representative of management in the eyes of the employees (X 3856–3857; I 80, III 801–807). By reason of her position also, she often had lunch in the Company's private dining room which was reserved for executives and supervisory personnel (X 3674–3675).

Todd was president of the Loyalty League, a management-sponsored organization to which all of the Company's supervisory force, including Sales Manager Keyes, Employment Manager Hyde, Production Manager Reeves, and Production Engineer Atchison, belonged, and which came into existence in 1935 to counteract the I. L. G. W. U.'s organizational activities (infra, pp. 37–46, 53). This position helped to mark Todd in the eyes of the employees as a person whom management was willing to have direct its employees' anti-union activities. As president also, of the D. G. W. U., she was permitted to use the desk furnished her by the Company in transacting business for that organization and to spend substantial amounts of her working time in attending to its affairs with the knowledge and permission of management (X 3886–3887; I 127–128, 166, III 833, 835, 869). Although paid a salary of $65.00 per month by the D. G. W. U. for her services thus rendered, the Company continued to pay her regular salary in addition, thereby recognizing that her activities in connection with the D. G. W. U. were performed as a part of her duties for the Company (X 3856; I 31–32, III 915, 1006, 1010, 1010b, 1010c, 1010e, 1010h).

It was well within the Board's competence to find, as it did, that in her labor relations activities Todd "was acting for and on behalf of" the Company (X 3858). In so finding, the Board cited and followed the persuasive language of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in International Association of Machinists v. National Labor Relations Board, 110 F. 2d 29, 44–45, affirmed, 311 U. S. 72. To the same effect, see National Labor Relations Board v. Link-Belt Co., 311 U. S. 584, 599; Union Drawn Steel Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 109 F. 2d 587, 589–591 (C. C. A. 3); Triplex Screw Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 117 F. 2d 858, 860 (C. C. A. 6); Atlas Underwear Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 116 F. 2d 1020, 1022–1023 (C. C. A. 6). The employees involved in the Atlas and the Triplex cases bore a striking resemblance to Todd; each held a position which gave him ready access to the entire plant and each was favored with signs of management confidence.[8]

3. Other supervisory employees.—Other employees found by the Board to be supervisors and representatives of management, and who were active in the Loyalty League or the D. G. W. U., were heads of the various departments or sections, i. e.: Hobart Atherton, in charge of machine maintenance; Florence Strickland, in charge of [8] In the Atlas case, an employee named Wright served as an "order chaser," a position which gave him access to employees in every department in the plant. While continuing to receive his regular salary, Wright devoted much of his time to the organization of the union found by the Board to be company-dominated. The Board contended that the Company was answerable under the Act for these activities on Wright's part. Although he admittedly was not a supervisory employee, the court held (116 F. 2d at 1023): "It is now settled that the employer may gain no advantage from the acts of those who reasonably may be regarded by employees as representing the policy of the management, and that neither the principles of agency nor the doctrine of respondent superior are applicable, where the consequence of such acts is employee fear of reprisals if the inside union is not supported. H. J. Heinz Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 311 U. S. 514." See also National Labor Relations Board v. Southern Bell Telephone Co., 319 U. S. 50 54; National Labor Relations Board v. Laister-Kauffmann Aircraft Corp., 144 F. 2d 9, 15 (C. C. A. 8); National Labor Relations Board v. American Manufacturing Co., 106 F. 2d 61, 68 (C. A. 7), certiorari denied, 311 U. S. 662; System Federation No. 40 v. Virginian Railway Co., 11 F. Supp. 621 (E. D. Va.), affirmed, 84 F. 2d 641 (C. C. A. 4), affirmed, 300 U. S. 515.

the pattern department; Lena Tyhurst, in charge of the inspection department; Martha Gray, in charge of the outlet store; Ortense Root, in charge of the sample department; Heath Cowan, in charge of the receiving department; Marvin Price, in charge of building maintenance; Ted Scoles, in charge of the cutting department; Dewey Atchison, production engineer; and Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing department (X 3858–3859, 3860, 3861–3863, 3870, 3877; I 136, II 424–424a, 424d, 428–429, 510, 514–515, 551, 589, 591–592, III 1003, 1007, 1011, 1090–1091, V 1349–1350, VII 2175, 2255–2257, Cf. 2200–2203, 2007–2012, VIII 2961–2962, IX 3157, 3233, 3336, 3435–3437, 3445–3446, X 3572, 3644–3645, 3649–3650, 3673). Each of these employees, who had a status approximately coordinate with the instructors (II 424–424c, III 1010q, VII 2143, IX 3435–3436, 3445, X3673–3675), held a position with at least as much authority as did the "group leaders" for whose conduct this Court held the employer responsible in H. J. Heinz Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 311 U. S. 514, 519–521. Moreover, no other representative of the Company was shown to have exercised any direct control or supervision over any of the employees under these department or section heads. There is ample support, therefore, for the Board's conclusion that these persons "are supervisory employees and as such were representatives of management" (X 3858–3859).

B. THE COMPANY'S PRE-ACT BACKGROUND OF ANTI-UNION ACTIVITIES

1. The Company's opposition to the I. L. G. W. U. during its 1934 campaign.—In 1934, the I. L. G. W. U. established an office in Kansas City, Missouri, and began its organization of the garment workers of Kansas City, including the employees of the Company (X 3859; IV 1307–1312). Open meetings to which all of the Company's employees were invited were held by the I. L. G. W. U. on March 15 and December 4, 1934 (X 3859; III 1033–1034, 1102, 1104). On both occasions, the Company's supervisory force, including Mrs. Reeves, then production manager (X 3859–3860; III 1058, 1105–1106, IV 1113; 1120g), Mrs. Hyde, personnel manager (X 3860; III 1107–1108), and many of the instructors (X 3860; III 1034, 1103–1104, 1106–1107), attended the meetings in a group. In addition, Ross Todd, whose relation to the management is discussed supra, pp. 28–32, attended the first meeting (X 3860; I 44), and Dewey Atchison, production engineer, attended the last meeting (X 3860; III 1091, 1096–1097).

During 1934, at least a dozen of the Company's employees joined the I. L. G. W. U. (X 3860; III 1033, 1036–1037, 1043, 1048, 1052, 1098, IV 1120–1120vv, 1141, 1153, 1156–1157). Several of them became active passing out notices of meetings and soliciting their fellow workers (X 3860; III 1098–1099, IV 1120oo–1120rr, 1153–1156b). Employees who were observed attending meetings and others were called to the office where Production
